Figure 65.17: The castle 'Chateau de Courtray' at Lille. The Château de Courtrai in Lille, France, was constructed in 1298 by order of King Philip IV of France. Located in the northeastern suburb of Courtrai (a suburb of Lille, not to be confused with the town Courtrai or Kortrijk), it served as a strategic fortress protecting the city. The castle featured robust defensive structures, including thick walls, multiple towers, and fortified gates with drawbridges. It housed military quarters, prisons, and storage facilities. The castle was largely dismantled in 1577, with its remnants integrated into the urban landscape of Lille.

Unfortunately, we do not know everything about the case, especially the role played by Jehan Patin in the conduct of the work.'

65.6.3 Jean de Patin (DP06c) & Willemina de Keyzer

We could not find any information about this couple.

65.6.4 Simon de Patin (DP06d)

He was a 'bourgeois foreign' of Kortrijk, lived in Geluwe, and had the following children: Josse de Patin (DP06dy1), Jean de Patin (DP06dy2), Guillaume de Patin (DP06dy3) and Marguerite de Patin (DP06dx).

65.7 Cornil de Patin (DP06) & N. Pype

65.7.1 Cornil de Patin

He was a 'bourgeois foreign' at Kortrijk, resided at Geluwe, and was married to N. Pype. His filiation is established by an act passed in 1467 before the magistrate of Kortrijk.

He was a squire and the son of Jean de Patin (DP05) and Jeanne van Lauwe de Lede.

65.7.2 N. Pype

We only know her family name.

65.7.3 Their Children

Cornil de Patin (DP06) and N. Pype had the following children: Michel de Patin (DP07), Willemina de Patin (DP07b), Peronne de Patin (DP07c), Marie de Patin (DP07d), Georgine de Patin (DP07e) and Magdalena de Patin (DP07f).

A transcript[31] showing the existence of these children reads,

'*Jan Pattin en Michiel Pipe, als voogden van Mchielkin, Willekine, Proenkin, Maeykin, Joorinkin ende Leenkin Pattyn, filiis Cornelis, bringen over, by huere heede, de grootte van den goede hemleden toecommende ende verstorven by der doot ende overlyden van den vader, dats te weten : de heelt van eender behuusde stede, met eene wuenhuse ende scueren, bomen daer op staende, groot int gheele IIII bunder, lettel min of meer. 65.7.3.1 Georgine de Patin (DP07e) & Jaspar van der Woestine Georgine de Patin (DP07e) married Jaspar van der Woestine and had a daughter, Josine van der Woestine, who married Pierre Catri in Wervik.

The family van der Woestine (Vander Woestyne) was important in this area. Figure 65.18 shows the tombstone of Adriaen Vander Woestyne, a relative of Jaspar Vander Woestyne, on which we find,

'gy devant gyst noble home andrien vander woestyne escvier seigneur de Beselare le que trespassa le VIII jour d' octobre an XVC XXVII ('Here rests the nobleman Adrien Vander Woestine, Knight, deceased on October 8, 1527').

65.8 Michel de Patin (DP07) & Proese Ambrosine vanden Berghe

65.8.0.1 Michel de Patin

He was a Squire and son of Cornil de Patin (DP06) and N. Pype. He married around 1500 to Proese (Ambrosine) van den Berghe, from Kortrijk. Their descendants are given in Figure 65.19. The filiation of Michel de Patin is noted by two acts of guardianship (1480 and 1489) passed before the magistrate of Kortrijk.

He was the only representative carrying the name de Patin at that time.

Michel de Patin (DP07) and Proese Ambrosine vanden Berghe had the following child: Josse de Patin (DP08).

65.9 Josse de Patin (DP08) & N. van de Casteele

65.9.0.1 Josse de Patin (DP08)

He was a Squire born in Menin and lived in Geluwe, Belgium. He was the son of Michel de Patin and Proese Ambrosine vanden Berghe.

He died before July 25, 1525, while residing at Geluwe. He married first to N. van den Casteele and later Proele van der Hage (or Petronille Veramme), who remarried later to Jan Nollet, son of Jan or Jacques, at Menin on April 15, 1534. From the first marriage of Josse de Patin (DP08) and Van de Casteele was born Denis de Patin (DP09)[32].

65.10 Denis de Patin (DP09) & Katrien van Pamele

65.10.0.1 Denis de Patin (DP09)

He was a Squire and the son of Josse de Patin (DP08). He was born in 1518 and married to Katrien van Pamele. They had a son, Pierre de Patin (DP10). He was a mayor in 1543 and 1545 and was still alive when the religious troubles occurred in 1566.

65.11 Pierre de Patin (DP10) & Catherine Bossette

65.11.1 Pierre de Patin (DP10)

He was a Squire and the son of Denis de Patin (DP09) and Katrien van Pamele. In 1598, he received Bourgeoisie rights at Kortrijk and, in 1624, had land on the Burg of Veurne loan.

65.11.2 Catherine Bossette

She was born in 1568 and died in 1633. She was the daughter of Jean Bossette and was married to Pierre de Patin.

65.11.3 Their Children

65.12 Pierre de Patin (DP11) & Marie Douchy

65.12.1 Pierre de Patin (DP11)

Pierre de Patin (DP11) was a Squire and a son of Pierre de Patin (DP10) and Catherine Bossette. Due to the death of his brother, Josse de Patin (DP11a), he inherited, in 1670, the Burg of Veurne. Pierre de Patin (DP11) married Marie Douchy and consequently became the Lord of Ter Beke in Geluwe.

He probably lived with his family in Goed ter Beke in Geluwe. Goed ter beke was the central farm of the Manor Ter Beke, shown in Figure 65.21 and is located near Oude Beselarestraat and Ypresstraat right in between the center of Geluwe and the center of Beselare.

65.12.2 Marie Douchy

Maria Douchy was born in Geluwe in 1610 as the daughter of Jean Douchy, a Squire, and Katrien Peutevin. She was the niece and feudal heiress of Philippe de Peutevin, Squire and Mayor of the city of Menin, shown in Figure 65.25, 65.26, 65.27 and 65.28, in 1643.

Marie Douchy inherited, therefore, in 1643, from her uncle Philippe de Peutevin, the Mannor Ter Beke in Geluwe, in Figure 65.29. She died in Geluwe on January 23, 1681, in Figure 65.24. Marie Douchy is the mother of Philippe de Patin and Adrienne de Patin (DP12) and the Godmother of Adrienne's eldest child Marie Catherine Vermeersch. Her second name is that of Pierre de Patin's mother, Catherine Bossette or Catherine de Peutevin.

65.12.3 Their Children

The children of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy are shown in Figure 65.30. They are Pierre de Patin (DP12a), Philippe de Patin (DP12b), Jacques de Patin (DP12c), Marie de Patin (DP12d), Adrienne de Patin (DP12) and Hubert de Patin (DP12e). In addition, we found three children who probably died at a young age because they do not appear in other literature: Rogerius de Patin (DP12f), Catherine de Patin (DP12g), and Catherine de Patin (DP12h).

65.12.3.1 Pierre de Patin (DP12a) & Joanna Clerbaudt

Pierre de Patin (DP12a) is a son of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy. He probably died in Geluwe in 1698, the year before his father's death. His lordship would go to his brother Philippe de Patin (DP12b). Pierre de Patin (DP12a) died in Geluwe on January 21, 1699. Pierre de Patin (DP12a) was married to Joanna Clerbaudt, and they had the following children: Joos Andries de Patin (DP12ay1), Pierre de Patin (DP12ay2), Katrien de Patin (DP12ax), and Benedict de Patin (DP12ay3).

65.12.3.1.1 Judocus Andries de Patin (DP12ay1) & Maria Delvael He was a son of Pierre de Patin (DP12a) and Joanna Clerbaudt. He was Lord of Ter Beke. He married, in Figure 65.31, on April 27, 1668, Maria Delvael of Menen and sold the Manor Ter Beke in 1719 to his cousin Pierre de Patin, son of Philippe de Patin (DP12b). Joos Andries had children born in Geluwe.

65.12.3.1.2 Pierre de Patin (DP12ay2) & Maria Anna van Eecke He was born in Geluwe on December 1, 1664, in Figure 65.32, as a son of Pierre de Patin (DP12a) and Joanna Clerbaudt.

65.12.3.1.3 Katrien de Patin (DP12ax) She was born in Geluwe on October 18, 1668, in Figure 65.33, as a daughter of Pierre de Patin (DP12a) and Joanna Clerbaudt.

65.12.3.1.4 Benedict de Patin (DP12ay3) & Katrien Bekaert Benedict de Patin (DP12ay3) was born in Geluwe on July 13, 1670, in Figure 65.34 as a son of Pierre de Patin (DP12a) and Joanna Clerbaudt. He married Katrien Bekaert in Geluwe on June 26, 1717, in Figure 65.35.

65.12.3.2 Philippe de Patin (DP12b) & Anne-Thérèse Vermeersch

He was born in Menin on January 20, 1637, in Figure 65.36. His godfather was Philippe de Peutevin, and his godmother was Marie de Patin (DP11b).
Philippe de Patin (DP12b) was the son of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy. Philippe de Patin (DP12b) and Anne-Thérèse Vermeersch had the following children: Pierre de Patin, Philippe de Patin, Monique de Patin, Marie de Patin, Anne de Patin; while in a second marriage, Philippe de Patin (DP12b) and Joanna du Thoo had the following children: Philippine de Patin and Josephine de Patin.
The descendants of Philippe de Patin (DP12b) are covered in Chapter 70 and are, from our perspective, the progenitors of the 'side branch' of De Patin de Langemarck, described in Chapter 70. Most genealogies, of course, consider their branch as the main one because it's a paternal descendence.

65.12.3.3 Jacques de Patin (DP12c) & Marie Magdalena De Hondt

Jacques de Patin (DP12c) is a son of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy. He was not born in Geluwe, as some genealogists claim, but in Menen, shown in Figure 65.37.
He was a farmer at Ten Eeckhoute and later, in 1668, at Te Ghelubrouck, both at Geluwe. He married Marie Magdalena De Hondt, the daughter of Gerard De Hondt and Anna Opsomer.
They had several children at Geluwe, such as Martina, shown in Figure 65.38. Jacques de Patin died in Geluwe in 1722, in Figure 65.39.

65.12.3.4 Marie de Patin (DP12d) & Joris Vermeersch

Marie de Patin (DP12d) was the daughter of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy, born in Figure 65.40 in 1641 in Menin. She married Joris Vermeersch, who died, like her, at Geluwe in 1732 in Figure 65.41. Marie de Patin (DP12d) was buried on July 30, 1732, at 91, while Joris Vermeersch was buried on July 24.
They had a son, Joris Vermeersch, who was a priest at Geluwe.

65.12.3.5 Hubert de Patin (DP12e) & Josine Verscheure

Hubert de Patin (DP12e) is a son of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy. Other genealogists claim that he was born at Geluwe, but we have yet to find his baptism there, not at Menen. He inherited from his mother two Manors at Geluwe, Elstlande and Eeckhoute.
He married, at Geluwe, on September 20, 1682, Josine Verscheure, daughter of Olivier and Margriet Vandriesche, born in Moorsele, Bourgeois Forraine of the city of Menen. He died at Geluwe on September 11, 1703, in Figure 65.42. Hubert de Patin (DP12e) and Josine Verscheure in Geluwe had the following children: Hubert de Patin (DP12ey1), Pierre de Patin (DP12ey2), Josine-Thérèse de Patin (DP12ex1) and Jean-Baptiste de Patin (DP12ey3).

65.12.3.5.1 Hubert de Patin (DP12ey1) & Petronelle Huyghe Hubert de Patin (DP12ey1) was the son of Hubert de Patin (DP12e) and Josine Verscheure. He was born in Geluwe on December 20, 1685, and married Petronelle Huyghe on July 21, 1703, in Geluwe.

65.12.3.5.2 Pierre de Patin (DP12ey2) & Joanna Vangheluwe Pierre de Patin (DP12ey2) was the son of Hubert de Patin (DP12e) and Josine Verscheure. He was born in Geluwe on February 7, 1688, and lived in Bruges.
He became a Bourgeois in Bruges in 1732 and married Joanna Vangheluwe, daughter of Nicolas Vangheluwe and Magdalena de Bruyne.

65.12.3.5.3 Josine-Thérèse de Patin (DP12ex1) & Antoine van Tomme Josine-Thérèse de Patin (DP12ex1) was the daughter of Hubert de Patin (DP12e) and Josine Verscheure. She was born in June 1692 and married Antoine van Tomme.

65.12.3.5.4 Jean-Baptiste de Patin (DP12ey3) & Anna-Clara de Brouwere Jean-Baptiste de Patin (DP12ey3) was the son of Hubert de Patin (DP12e) and Josine Verscheure. He was born in Geluwe on March 4, 1690, and died in Moorsele on April 5, 1760.
Jean-Baptiste de Patin (DP12ey3) was married to Anna-Clara de Brouwere in Moorsele on November 27, 1716, and they had two children: Hubert de Patin (DP12ey3y1) and Jean-Bernard de Patin (DP12ey3y2).

65.12.3.5.4.1 Hubert de Patin (DP12ey3y1) & Pieternel-Francisca Larmuseau Hubert de Patin (DP12ey3y1) was the son of Jean-Baptiste de Patin (DP12ey3) and Anna-Clara de Brouwere. He was the Lord of Hulsboome, was born in Moorsele in 1718, and was the Royal Notary of Geluwe from 1743 until 1748 and at Menin from 1749 until 1765.
He was married to Pieternel-Francisca Larmuseau and had no children.

65.12.3.5.4.2 Jean-Bernard de Patin (DP12ey3y2) & Maria-Angelica van den Berghe Jean-Bernard de Patin (DP12ey3y2) was the son of Jean-Baptiste de Patin (DP12ey3) and Anna-Clara de Brouwere. He was born in Moorsele on April 17, 1721, and died in Moorsele on March 13, 1801. Jean-Bernard de Patin (DP12ey3y2) was married to Maria-Angelica van den Berghe, and they had a son, Charles François Ignace de Patin (DP12ey3y2y).
a) Charles François Ignace de Patin (DP12ey3y2y) & Godelieve de Grendele

Charles François Ignace de Patin (DP12ey3y2y) was the son of Jean-Bernard de Patin (DP12ey3y2) and Maria-Angelica van den Berghe. He was a notary and mayor of Handzame. He died in 1829. He married Godelieve de Grendele. Charles François Ignace de Patin (DP12ey3y2y) and Godelieve de Grendele had a son, Pierre-Jean de Patin (DP12ey3y2yy).
b) Pierre-Jean de Patin (DP12ey3y2yy) & Cecile Colette Declercq
Pierre-Jean de Patin (DP12ey3y2yy) was a medical doctor at Handzame, married to Cecile Colette Declercq and had the following children: Charles Auguste (married to Marie Stevaert), Guillaume Policarius (a priest who died in Kortrijk on December 9, 1890), Desideer Pierre (provost of Onze Lieve Vrouw van Blindekens in Bruges), Richard Hubert (married to Natalie van Middelen, died in Handzame on February 3, 1891), Flore Virginie (died unmarried), Louis François (notary-candidate, died unmarried).

65.12.3.6 Rogerius de Patin (DP12f)

We found his baptism in Menen on March 22, 1648, in Figure 65.43, but we have yet to find further information. Note that family tables of Menen list him erroneously as 'Tagerius.'

65.12.3.7 Catherine de Patin (DP12g)

She was born in Menin on November 11, 1642, in Figure 65.44.

65.12.3.8 Catherine de Patin (DP12h)

She was born in Menen on April 16, 1644, in Figure 65.45.

65.13 Marinus Vermeersch & Adrienne de Patin (DP12)

65.13.1 Adrienne de Patin

She was the daughter of Pierre de Patin and Marie Douchy and was born in 1634 at Menin, Belgium, in Figure 65.46. She was married to Marinus Vermeersch. She died in 1710 at Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.47. She was a Squires and sister of Philippe de Patin, Squire, born in Menin on January 20, 1657. The Godfather was Josse de Patin (DP11a), and the Godmother was Adrienne Van Halewijn. Adrienne is the auntie of Philippe's son Pierre de Patin, Squire, born at Dadizele on September 17, 1660, Lord of Terbeke, Burgcautere, Shaepsweide, Nonneland, Langemarck, etc. and father of Charles Philippe Vicomte de Patin (Ypres 1687 - Gent 1773), described in Chapter 70.6, and Squire Charles Joseph de Patin (1691-1762). Adrienne de Patin was the eldest child of Pierre de Patin and Marie Douchy. Autosomal DNA evidence is presented in Chapter 73.13.

65.13.2 Marinus Vermeersch

His descendants are shown in Figure 65.48. He was a Squire and married to Adrienne de Patin. He was the brother of Anne Vermeersch, the grandmother of Charles Philippe Vicomte de Patin (Ypres 1687 - Gent 1773), described in Chapter 70.6. He was also the Godfather of Philippe (DP12by2), a son of Philippe de Patin and Anne Vermeersch, in Figure 65.49, who was baptized on February 28, 1667, at Dadizele, as described in Chapter 70.2.1. Marinus Vermeersch and Anne Vermeersch were children of Livinus Vermeersch. Livinus Vermeersch was the Godfather of Marie Catherine de Patin (DP12bx2), described in Chapter 70.2.3, a daughter of Philippe de Patin (DP12b) and Anne Vermeersch, baptized at Dadizele on November 3, 1661, to whom Marie Douchy was the Godmother. Marinus Vermeersch and Adrienne de Patin also had a daughter Marie-Catherine Vermeersch, baptized on May 19, 1663, to whom Livinus Vermeersch was the Godfather and Marie Douchy was the Godmother. Furthermore, they had a daughter, Elizabeth Vermeersch, whose Godparents were Jean Bouten and Elisabeth de Lannoy. The family de Lannoy is an old noble family.
Note that literature on the de Patin family typically writes 'Vermeersch' for the family name. However, when we checked church certificates, it was unclear if the name was Vermeersch or Van der Meersch. The names were likely both used as 'Ver,' simply a short version of 'Vander' or 'Van der.' Indeed, the family Vermeersch or Van der Meersch we are dealing with here is also described in the literature as 'Van der Meersch.' The family was quite crucial in the area of Wevelgem - Menen - Geluwe - Dadizele. In 'Tablettes des Flandres,' the family is well represented. They possessed farms in the area and can also be found as Bailiffs and as 'Mayors' in different villages.
Livinus Vermeersch, brother of Marinus Vermeersch, married Maria Anna du Toy in 1668, in Figure 65.50.
Marinus Vermeersch, son of Marinus Vermeersch and Adrienne de Patin (DP12), was born in 1667, in Figure 65.51.
In Menen, we found a death certificate of 1719, April 10, of Marinus Patijn. We could not identify this person, but we cannot exclude that he was Marinus de Patin (perhaps a descendant of Pierre de Patin and Marie Douchy) and that Marinus Vermeersch was his Godfather. It is a possibility worth mentioning.
Marinus Vermeersch died in 1716, in Figure 65.53.

65.14 Nathalis Vermeersch (DP12V01) & Marie Jeanne Dael

65.14.1 Nathalis Vermeersch

He was the son of Marinus Vermeersch and Adrienne de Patin and was born in 1676, in Figure 65.54. He married Marie Jeanne Dael and died in 1709 at Geluwe, Belgium. He was a Squire.
One of his children was Jean-Baptiste Vermeersch, whose godparents were Jean Claeys from Bousbeque and Jeanne Coene from Geluwe. The Claeys family was a prominent family in Bousbeque in the 17th century - there is still a gravestone of a certain Claeys inside its church. Maria Coene had also been Godmother to Nathalis Vermeersch.
Another child was Leonard Vermeersch, with godparents Marinus Vermeersch and Catherine le Marant. Nathalis Vermeersch died in 1709, in Figure 65.55.

65.14.2 Marie Jeanne Dael

As far as we figured out, Marie Jeanne Dael was the daughter of Georges Dael and Joanna Del Fortrye. She was born in 1663, in Figure 65.56, and was married to Nathalis Vermeersch.

65.14.3 Their Marriage

The wedding of Nathalis Vermeersch (DP12V01) and Marie Jeanne Dael was in 1698 at Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.57.

65.15 Joseph Vermeersch (DP12V02) & Marie Anne Claire Pennet

65.15.1 Joseph Vermeersch

He was born in 1707 in Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.58, as the son of Nathalis Vermeersch (DP12V01) and Marie Jeanne Dael.
His Godfather was François Clinckemaillie, and his Godmother was Adrienne de Patin (DP12).
He was a Squire, and he was married to Marie Claire Pinet.
He died in 1767 at Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.59.

65.15.2 Marie Claire Pennet

She was born in 1715 in Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.60, and died in 1759 in Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.61. She was married to Joseph Vermeersch.

The Pennet family is an old family with noble roots before 1560. Marie Claire was the daughter of Jacques Pennet (born 1667 at Geluwe, Godfather Jean de Poortere from Dadizele, Godmother Jeanne Pennet) and Claire Marem (born 1679 at Geluwe, Godfather Boudewijn du Mortier, Godmother Claire Beunie, both from Menen).

Their wedding was in 1743 in Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.62. The couple's descendants are shown in Figure 65.63.

65.16 Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch (DP12V03) & Charles Ignace Dewanckele

They also appear in an other branch, in Chapter 66.2.15.

65.16.1 Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch

Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch (DP12V03) is equally referred to in Chapter 66.2, in particular, in Chapter 66.2.15.2. She was born in 1751 in Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.64, as the daughter of Joseph Vermeersch (DP12V02) and Marie Anne Claire Pennet. She married Charles Ignace Dewanckele and died in 1831 in Hooglede, Belgium, in Figure 65.65. She was a Landowner and Rentier. Her Godfather was Jean-Baptiste Stagier, and her Godmother was Anna-Clara Soene.

65.16.2 Charles Ignace Dewanckele

He was born in 1743 in Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.66, and was married to Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch (DP12V03). He died in 1794 in Rumbeke, Belgium, in Figure 65.67. He was a Landed Gentry Farmer and only child. Charles Ignace Dewanckele is referred to in Chapter 66.2 as the grandson of Marie Jeanne Benoit, particularly in Chapter 66.2.15.1. DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.

65.16.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1779 in Geluwe, Belgium, in Figure 65.68.

65.16.4 Their Offspring

65.16.4.1 Pierre Charles Dewanckele

He is described in Chapter 65.17.

65.16.4.2 Eugene Dewanckele

65.16.4.2.1 Introduction Eugene Dewanckele was a member of the military in Napoleon's army. He replaced his younger brother Pierre Charles Dewanckele, our ancestor, who was a conscript. He served Napoleon, shown in Figure 65.71, for 2.5 years, primarily in the Iberian campaigns, and died in Madrid. A genealogical situation is presented in the figures 65.69 and 65.70.

Eugenius Franciscus Dewanckele was born in Geluwe on February 27, 1787, in Figure 65.72. He was a son of Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch (DP12V03) and Charles Ignace Dewanckele.

Retrieving his military records was possible thanks to an initial document offered by the Genealogical Society of Ostend. The documents are presented in Figures 65.73 and 65.74. Figure 65.74 is the file in the French archives of Eugene Dewanckele, who replaced his brother Pierre Charles Dewanckele.

'à la Grande Armée an 1807; 1808. Mort à l' hospital militaire temporaire de Madrid, par suite de de fièvre le 17 Juillet 1809, rayé le 31 Janvier 1810.'

So, he passed away on January 31, 1810, after being hospitalized on July 17, 1809, at the military hospital of Madrid because of a fever. He had been in the Grande Armée in 1807 and 1808. Very likely, according to Klaas Portier[33], this 'fever' was Typhus.

During the Iberian campaign and the year before, he must have served with Pierre Joseph Decaestecker (C01), our ancestor extensively described in Chapter 71.7.3. We will, therefore, not go into the details of the battles in which he fought. Summarised, he fought in:

The Battle of Espinosa de Los Monteros (1808);
The Battle of Alcantara, Talavera de la Reina, and Almonacid (1809).

He contracted typhus during one of the battles of 1809 in Spain and died in Madrid, shown in Figure 65.76, in January 1810, as described above.

65.17.1 Pierre Charles Dewanckele

He was born in 1789, in Figure 65.78, as the son of Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch (DP12V03) and Charles Ignace Dewanckele in Geluwe. He was married to Barbara Goddyn. He died in 1860 in Hooglede, Belgium, in Figures 65.79 and 65.80.

He was a conscript in Napoleon's Grande Armée but was replaced by his brother Eugene. He was a Landed Gentry Farmer.

Pierre Charles Dewanckele is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 66.2, as the great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Benoit, in particular, in Chapter 66.2.16.1; and Chapter 68 in the 't Kint ancestry line.

65.17.2 Barbara Goddyn

She was born in 1789 in Hooglede, Belgium, in Figure 65.81, and was married to Pierre Charles Dewanckele (DP12V03DW01). She died in 1832 in Hooglede, Belgium, in Figure 65.82. Barbara Goddyn was a farmer and was the daughter of Joseph Goddyn

The certificate states that the bride was the daughter of Joseph Vermeersch (DP12V02) and Marie Anne Claire Pennet, and the groom was the son of Pierre Dewanckele from Geluwe and Maria Joanna Camerteyn from Waregem. The witnesses were Nathalis Vermeersch, probably an uncle or brother of Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch (DP12V03), and Joseph Tallieu. Note that the Camerteyn family of Waregem also appears in Chapter 66.2.13.*

Joseph Goddyn was the son of Bartholome Goddyn and Marie Catherine Meersman, married at Lichtervelde in 1743.
Bartholome Goddyn descended from a long Goddyn bloodline of farmers and landowners at Lichtervelde dating back to the 1500s with the first names 'Roger,' alternating with 'Bartolome' and married to the families Ghijsen, Goddyn, and Fiers. It is possible that Joseph Goddyn had an auntie, Isabella Clara Goddyn, who married Auguste Vermeulen at Hooglede in 1787, although we are not sure. If so, this Auguste Vermeulen could have been related to Edward Vermeulen, a writer from Beselare born in Staden and described in Chapter 44.8.2 and Chapter 64.6.4.1. We also found more links to the Vermeulen family in the Lesage ancestry tree in Chapter 64.
Barbara Goddyn is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 66.2, as the mother to Rosalie Dewanckele and mother-in-law of Louis François Lesage, in particular, in Chapter 66.2.16.2; and Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line.

65.17.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1815 in Hooglede, Belgium, in Figure 65.83.

65.18 Rosalie Dewanckele & Louis François Lesage (LS05)

65.18.1 Rosalie Dewanckele

She was born in 1816 in Hooglede, in Figure 65.84. She was married to Louis François Lesage and was the daughter of Pierre Charles Dewanckele (DP12V03DW01) and Barbara Goddyn. She died in 1872 in Westrozebeke, Belgium, in Figure 65.85, and was a Farmer.
Rosalie Dewanckele is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the wife of Louis François Lesage and mother of Emile Theophile Lesage; Chapter 66.2 as the great-great-granddaughter of Marie Jeanne Benoit; and Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line.

65.18.2 Louis François Lesage

Louis François Lesage (LS05) was born in 1813 in Langemark, Belgium, as the son of Jean Lesage (LS04), who was born at Staden and who lived at Langemark, and of Barbe Thérèse Reynaert from Passchendaele. The latter married at Passchendaele in 1780; the witnesses were Pierre Lamaire, Louis Reynaert, Joseph Reynaert, and David Reynaert. All were farmers. Louis François Lesage (LS05) died on May 29, 1877 in Westrozebeke, Belgium.
Louis François Lesage (LS05) is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, in the Lesage ancestry; Chapter 66.2, as

65.19 Emile Theophile Lesage & Eudoxie Romanie Lammens

65.19.1 Emile Theophile Lesage (LS05)

Emile Lesage is shown in Figure 65.87. His life is extensively described in Chapter 64.6. He was born in 1857 in Westrozebeke, Belgium, as the son of Louis François Lesage and Rosalie Dewanckele, and he was married to Eudoxie Romanie Lammens. He died in 1938 in Beselare, Belgium.

Emile Theophile Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 64 as the author's great-grandfather. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the son-in-law of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

The blood of de Patin is, e.g., visible in the prominent chin of Emile Theophile Lesage and his descendants.

65.19.2 Eudoxie Romanie Lammens

Her life is extensively described in Chapter 64.6.2. She was born in 1868 in Zonnebeke, Belgium. Her place of Residence in 1888 was Passchendaele, Belgium. She died in 1931 in Beselare, Belgium.

Eudoxie Romanie Lammens is primarily described in Chapter 64 as the wife of Emile Theophile Lesage and the author's great-grandmother.

She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 66.2, great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Marie Jeanne Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the daughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

65.19.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1888 in Passchendaele, Belgium, as shown in Chapter 64.6.3.

65.20.1 Irma Helena Lesage

Irma Lesage is shown in Figure 65.88 compared to Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin de Langhemarck, described in Chapter 70.10. Her life is extensively described in Chapter 45.2. She was the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Adrienne de Patin (DP12) and was born in 1905 in Moorslede, Belgium, as the daughter of Emile Theophile Lesage and Eudoxie Romanie Lammens. She was married to Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15). She died in 1953 in Kortrijk, Belgium.
Irma Helena Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 45.2, as the wife of Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq and the author's grandmother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter of Emile Theophile Lesage; Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the granddaughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

65.20.2 Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15)

His life is extensively described in Chapter 45. He was born in 1906 in Wielsbeke, Belgium. He married Irma Helena Lesage and died in 1963 in Deerlijk, Belgium.
Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15) is primarily described in Chapter 45 as a descendant of the Desclergues and grandfather of the author. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the husband of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 66.1, as great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the husband of Irma Lesage, and the great-great-great-great-grandson-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the grandson-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

Their wedding was in 1932 in Beselare, Belgium, and is shown in Chapter 45.3.

65.21 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) & Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

65.21.1 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16)

Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) is the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12) and is primarily described in Chapter 46 as a descendant of the Desclergues and father of the author.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the son of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as a great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the son-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as great-grandson-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-grandson of Clemens Lammens.

65.21.2 Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

Nelly Maria Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the daughter of René Vangheluwe and Anna Den Dauw and as the author's mother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 66.1, as great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as a great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67 as the daughter of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-granddaughter of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as the great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author, as his mother.

65.22 Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) & Shirani Olupathage de Silva

65.22.1 Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17)

Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) is the author of this book, is the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12) and is primarily described in Chapter 47, as a descendant of the Desclergues, and also in Part X.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the grandson of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the grandson of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-great-grandson of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as the great-great-grandson of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author.
Furthermore, he is referred to in Part XII as the husband of Shirani Oluphathage de Silva.

65.22.2 Shirani Olupathage de Silva

Shirani Olupathage de Silva is first described in Chapter 47.3 as the author's wife.
She is equally referred to, in much detail, in Part XII, and also in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the granddaughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the granddaughter-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

Chapter 66

The Benoit Ancestry lines

66.1 The Benoit Ancestry line, Declercq Branch

66.1.1 Introduction

This line is interesting because other genealogists have uncovered it far back in time despite its absence in renowned genealogy books. The meticulous work of the Benoit family to obtain the oldest information is supplied here with much gratitude. Specific family names, such as 'Benoit,' originate from one or a few persons and are fascinating to be revealed. Other family names, such as Declercq, stem from numerous persons worldwide, are not blood-related to one another, and are more challenging to untangle.
The ancestry of Benoit has become famous with genealogists because it's solid and serves researchers very well, including in determining links with musician Peter Benoit, shown in Figure 66.1. Side branches of Benoit also connect to other well-known personalities. Most research described in this chapter concerning all the individuals carrying the name Benoit and variations such as Benoot was done by the Benoit family, in particular, Frans Benoit and Filip Benoit, as well as Remi Deprez.
Before describing their contributions in more detail, we would like to express our sincere gratitude for all the hard and inspiring work they have performed. Several sources exist on the Benoit family. One source[1], in particular, is interesting because it focuses mainly on the Benoit branch of Deerlijk. Although we do not descend from this branch and are only distantly related, we have the oldest Benoit ancestors in common. Concerning the Benoit branches, we would also like to thank Remi Deprez (1901 - 1992) (mayor of Zwevegem and Heestert) specifically for his work on the family tree of Benoit, which helped us with indications and information. The information before 1646 comes from the work done by Filip Benoit, to whom we equally are very grateful. In the work of Filip Benoit[2], the reader can find a lot more on the family than we have described here in this book related to our ancestors, summarised in Figure 66.2.
It is important to note that the name Benoit as it appears in the Benoit family of South-West Flanders originates from 'Manout' or 'Mannoot,' as shown in Figure 66.3. The 'M' evolved to a 'B' over time, a known phenomenon by linguists. The family is often found as farmers growing and producing flax and linen, just as the branches from which we descend. Flax retting took place in small ponds dug out on or near the farm, and this self-made flax was then spun and woven on the farm. Flax retting in rivers was not done until later, mainly because rivers were exploited for fishing and could not sustain oxygen loss due to rotting flax.
The reader can find more information about flax in Chapter 44 and Chapter 45.

66.1.2 Peter Benoit: The Life and Legacy of a Flemish Musical Pioneer

66.1.2.1 Early Life and Education

Peter Benoit, shown in Figure 66.1 and Figure 66.25, born in Harelbeke on August 17, 1834, emerged as a pivotal figure in the development of Flemish music. He belongs to the Benoit family described in this book and descends from Gilles Benoit, described in Chapter 66.1.3.1. His formative years were spent in a culturally rich environment, significantly influencing his later works. Benoit's father, an amateur musician, provided his initial exposure to music, instilling in him a profound appreciation for the art. This early immersion in a musical household laid the foundation for his lifelong dedication to Flemish cultural identity through music.
At seventeen, Benoit moved to Ghent to study at the Royal Conservatory under the tutelage of renowned composer François-Joseph Fétis. His exceptional talent quickly became evident, earning him a reputation as a promising young musician. His time at the conservatory was marked by rigorous training in various musical disciplines, which honed his compositional skills and deepened his understanding of music theory and history.

66.1.2.2 Early Career and Influences

Upon completing his studies, Benoit embarked on a professional journey that would see him evolve from a composer of instrumental works to a fervent advocate for Flemish music and culture. His early career was characterized by an eclectic array of compositions, including orchestral works, operas, and choral pieces. Notable among these early works is his cantata 'Le Meurtre d'Abel' (The Murder of Abel), which garnered critical acclaim and established him as a composer of significant promise.
Benoit's exposure to the Romantic movement, particularly the works of Hector Berlioz and Richard Wagner, profoundly impacted his musical style. These influences are evident in his ambitious orchestral compositions and his penchant for dramatic expression. However, his deep-seated desire to create a distinctly Flemish musical identity truly defined his career.

66.1.2.3 Commitment to Flemish Music

The turning point in Benoit's career came with his appointment as director of the Antwerp Conservatory in 1867. This role provided him with a platform to champion Flemish music and culture. He embarked on an ambitious project to establish a national Flemish school of music, aiming to cultivate a unique musical tradition that resonated with the Flemish people.

Benoit's compositions during this period reflect his commitment to this cause. Works such as the 'Rubens Cantata' and 'De Schelde' (The Scheldt) are imbued with nationalistic fervor and draw heavily on Flemish folklore and history. His magnum opus, the oratorio 'De Oorlog' (The War), is a testament to his ability to blend profound emotional depth with a strong sense of regional identity.

66.1.2.4 Pedagogical Contributions

Beyond his compositions, Benoit's legacy is deeply intertwined with his contributions to music education. As director of the Antwerp Conservatory, he reformed the institution's curriculum to emphasize Flemish music and culture. He also established the Benoit Foundation to support young Flemish musicians, ensuring that his vision for a distinct musical tradition would endure beyond his lifetime.

Benoit's pedagogical efforts extended to his numerous publications on music theory and education. His writings, including treatises on harmony and orchestration, reflect his deep intellectual engagement with the art of composition and his desire to share his knowledge with future musicians.

66.1.2.5 Legacy and Recognition

Peter Benoit's impact on Flemish music cannot be overstated. His tireless efforts to promote a national musical identity have left an indelible mark on the cultural landscape of Flanders. His compositions continue to be celebrated for their emotional depth, technical mastery, and profound connection to Flemish culture.

In recognition of his contributions, Benoit was honored with numerous awards and accolades during his lifetime, including the Order of Leopold, Belgium's highest order of merit. His legacy is preserved through his music, the institutions he helped shape, and the countless students he inspired.

Benoit's life and career exemplify the power of music as a vehicle for cultural expression and national identity. His dedication to the Flemish cause and his unwavering commitment to his art make him a seminal figure in the history of Western music. As a composer, educator, and cultural advocate, Peter Benoit stands as a testament to the enduring power of music to reflect and shape the identity of a people.

66.1.3.1 Gilles Benoit (Mannoot)

He was born in 1340, and he died in 1400. He lived in the Manor of De La Faille de Huise in Waregem and was a Bourgeois Forain at Kortrijk.

66.1.3.2 Ega Gilles Benoit (Manoot)

Her name is unknown.

66.1.3.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1370.

66.1.4 Olivier Benoit (Mannoot) & Jane Waeye

66.1.4.1 Olivier Benoit (Mannoot)

He was born in 1365 in Waregem and died in 1410 in Waregem. He was the son of Gilles Benoit. He lived at Huyse-Waregem at the beginning of Nokerseweg. He had a medium-sized farm and died of the pest. He was married to Jane Waeye.

66.1.4.2 Jane Waeye

She was born in 1370 and died in 1445 in Waregem. She was married to Olivier Benoit. She died in 1445 in Waregem. The Benoit family inherited land from Jane's parents.

66.1.4.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1395 in Waregem.

66.1.5 Jean Benoit (Mannoot) & Vandewalle

66.1.5.1 Jean Benoit (Mannoot)

He was born in 1396 in Waregem and was the son of Olivier Benoit, and he died in 1467 at Waregem. He was married to a certain Vandewalle, had a medium-sized farm in Nokerseweg, and belonged to the notables of Potegem-Waregem. Potegem has always had a castle, shown in Figure 66.4.
His grandson, Pierre Benoit, a forefather in the Declercq branch, would become Lord of Quintins, a manor with a bailiff near Kievietstraat and Drogenboomstraat at Waregem. The mansion would stay for five generations (over 100 years) in the Benoit family.
Jean Benoit (Mannoot) and Vandewalle are common ancestors in the branch Lesage and the branch Declercq.

66.1.5.2 Vandewalle

Her first name is unknown. She was married to Jean Benoit.

66.1.5.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1430 in Waregem.

66.1.6 Olivier Benoit (Manoot) & Tack

66.1.6.1 Olivier Benoit (Manoot)

He was born around 1430 in Waregem as the son of Jean Benoit and Vandewalle and died in 1495 in Waregem. He was probably a Bailiff at Eertbrugge (Waregem-Zulte). He was married to a particular Tack.
In 1491-1492, he was dismeester (in charge of supporting people with low incomes). He lived in Eertbruggestraat and was a bailiff of Eertbrugge (between Waregem and Zulte).

66.1.6.2 Tack

Her first name is unknown. She was the wife of Oliver Benoit.

66.1.6.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1455 at Waregem.

66.1.7 Pierre Benoit & Jeanne Waelkens

66.1.7.1 Pierre Benoit

He was born in 1460 in Waregem as the son of Olivier Benoit and Tack. He was married to Jeanne Waelkens and died in 1521 at Waregem. He was a farmer and Church master. He became the Lord of Quintins after his wife had inherited it. Quintins was a Manor with a Bailiff located near Kievietstraat and Drogenboomstraat in Waregem.
The Manor would stay in the Benoit family for five generations (over 100 years). Pierre Benoit had around 50 hectares of land. His name was spelled as 'Manout, Bannoet, Benoet' and 'Benoit.'
Note that Pierre Benoit had a seal consisting of 2 flowers at the top and one star underneath.

66.1.7.2 Jeanne Waelkens

She was the wife of Pierre Benoit and died in 1526 in Waregem. She inherited Quintins and belonged to the aristocrats of Waregem. She belonged to the branch Waelkens described in Chapter 67. However, we have not gone so far as to prove precisely how due to time constraints.

66.1.7.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1490.

66.1.8 Jean Benoit & Catheline Deschietere

66.1.8.1 Jean Benoit

He was born in 1495 in Waregem as the son of Pierre Benoit and Jeanne Waelkens. He was married to Catheline Deschietere and died in 1558 in Waregem. He was a farmer and a Church master. He was the Lord of Quintins in 1525. His name was spelled as Manoot, Menoot, Benoot and Beynoot.

66.1.8.2 Catheline Deschietere

She was born in 1500 and was married to Jean Benoit. She died in 1568 in Waregem. Her father was Joos Deschietere, son of Willem Deschietere and Mia Hinckeert; her mother was M. Desimpelaere, daughter of Willem Desimpelaere. Catheline was related to the future Lords of Loppem.

66.1.8.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1530 in Waregem.

66.1.9 Joos Benoit & Jeanne Debackere

66.1.9.1 Joos Benoit

He was born in 1525 in Waregem and was married to Jeanne Debackere. His nephew was Charles Benoit (1567-1638), who served as Godfather to Christine Declercq, daughter of Jean Declercq and baptized at Waregem in 1628; see also the branch of Declercq. Joos had a son, Charles, who would inherit Quintins.
Joos was a farmer. He was wealthy and educated, lived at Potegem, and was the Lord of Quintins in 1563. His son Charles Benoit would later be the Lord of Quintins in 1594. Joos died during the religious wars. Charles moved to Wielsbeke, to Goed ter Triest.

66.1.9.2 Jeanne Debackere

She was born in 1525 in Waregem and was married to Joos Benoit. She died in 1590. She is the daughter of Willem Debackere, son of Debackere, and Magdalena Nutin. The Nutin family is an old family at Kortrijk with the earliest references in the early 14th century (Codijn Nutin, 1323).

66.1.9.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1563 in Waregem.

66.1.10 Pierre Benoit & Josine Calmeyn

66.1.10.1 Pierre Benoit

He was born in 1568 in St Eloois Vijve as the son of Joos Benoit and Jeanne Debackere, and he was married to Josine Calmeyn. He died in 1628 in St Eloois Vijve. He occupied essential positions in Sint-Eloois-Vijve and Burggravie and had tight connections with the Lord of Potegem.
His brother, Charles, inherited Quintins and became Lord of Quintins, while Pierre's wife, Josine Calmeyn, inherited from her family at Menen.
His brother Charles later moved to a farm, Goed ter Triest, in Wielsbeke. Pierre and Charles managed to survive the religious troubles of the 16th century. Pierre always had to choose between the Lords of Potegem (new nobility, Jean de Smet and his descendants) and the Lord of Ingelmunster (old aristocracy who had supported the Spanish King).

66.1.10.2 Josine Calmeyn

She was born in 1565 at St Eloois Vijve and was married to Pierre Benoit. She was the daughter of a wealthy brewer at St Eloois Vijve, originating from a family of brewers at Menen. Her father was Joos Calmeyn, and her mother was Jeantgen de Worme.
DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.

66.1.10.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1602 in St Eloois Vijve.

66.1.11 Judocus Benoit & Jeanne Vancaesele

66.1.11.1 Judocus Benoit

He was born in 1603 in St Eloois Vijve, the son of Pierre Benoit and Josine Calmeyn. He was a farmer and the only son of a wealthy family of farmers who owned land in different villages.

66.1.11.2 Jeanne Vancaesele

She was born in 1600 in Waregem and was married to Judocus Benoit. She is the daughter of Jean Vancaesele and Marie de Jans, whose parents are Dieryckx de Jans and Calleken Smeevoorde.

66.1.11.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1629 at Waregem, in Figure 66.5.

66.1.12 Charles Benoit & Marie Lammertyn

66.1.12.1 Charles Benoit

He was born in 1636, in Figure 66.6, in St Eloois Vijve as the son of Judocus Benoit and Jeanne Vancaesele. He married Marie Lammertyn and died in 1679, in Figure 66.7, in Beveren Leie. His genes run in the Benoit families and Leo Bernard Declercq's descendants (DC15).
Charles Benoit and Marie Lammertyn are the Great-Great-Great-Great-Grandparents of music composer Peter Benoit (Harelbeke 1834 - Antwerpen 1901). Charles Junior, a son of Charles Benoit, is the forefather of the family Benoit, who is currently living at Deerlijk and Beveren Leie.
Charles Benoit is also the Great-great-great-great-great-grandfather of Flemish poet and priest Cyrille Verschaeve (1874-1949). Furthermore, he is also an ancestor of Prof Yves Constant Benoit (Deerlijk 1949), known for research on cancer, and Petrus Benoit (Kuurne 1820 - Mill England 1892).

66.1.12.2 Marie Lammertyn

She was born in 1638, in Figure 66.8, in Desselgem. She was married to Charles Benoit and died in 1687, in Figure 66.9, in Beveren Leie. She is the daughter of Jean Lammertyn and Catherine Christiaens.

66.1.12.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1662, in Figure 66.10 at Desselgem.

66.1.13 Christiaen Benoit & Judoca Coopman

66.1.13.1 Christiaen Benoit

He was born in 1673, in Figure 66.11 as the son of Charles Benoit and Marie Lammertyn in Beveren Leie. He was married to Judoca Coopman, and he died in 1742, in Figure 66.12, in Wielsbeke.

66.1.13.2 Judoca Coopman

She was born around 1673 and died in 1750, in Figure 66.13 in Wielsbeke.

66.1.13.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1712 in Figure 66.14, in Wielsbeke.

66.1.14 Livinus Desplenter & Barbara Benoit

66.1.14.1 Livinus Desplenter

He was born in 1713 in Figure 66.15, in Wielsbeke, married to Barbara Benoit, and died in 1774, in Figure 66.16, in Wielsbeke.

66.1.14.2 Barbara Benoit

She was born in 1714 in Figure 66.17, in Wielsbeke. She was married to Livinus Desplenter and died in 1774, in Figure 66.18, in Wielsbeke.

66.1.14.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1739, in Figure 66.19, in Wielsbeke. The marriage witnesses were Jean Desplenter (Wielsbeke 1705, brother of Livinus), Joanna Benoit (Wielsbeke 1716, sister of Barbara), and Judoca Coopman. Livinus Desplenter is the son of Petrus Desplenter and Judoca Verleije.

66.1.15 Marie Magdalena Desplenter & Jean François Loncke

66.1.15.1 Marie Magdalena Desplenter

She was born in 1752 in Figure 66.20, in Wielsbeke, as the daughter of Livinus Desplenter and Barbara Benoit. She was married to Jean François Loncke. Marie Magdalena died at Wielsbeke in 1812, in Figure 66.21.

66.1.15.2 Jean François Loncke

He was born in 1752 in Figure 66.22, in Wielsbeke. He was the son of Jacques Loncke (Wielsbeke 1711-1774) and Anne Marie le Cluyse and was married to Marie Magdalena Desplenter. He died in Wielsbeke in 1832, in Figure 66.23.
Jacques Loncke was the son of Arnoldus Loncke (who died at Wielsbeke in 1731) and Catherine Deleersnijder (who died at Wielsbeke in 1760); he was born at Wielsbeke in 1711; his Godmother was Elisabeth Loncke, his Godfather was Jacques de Smet. Arnoldus Loncke and Catherine Deleersnijder married at Hulste in 1709.
Jean François Loncke had a sister, Joanna Theresia Loncke, born at Wielsbeke on March 6, 1751; her Godfather was Georgius le Cluyse, and her Godmother was Catherine Deleersnijder. He had a brother Joseph Loncke, born in Wielsbeke on January 30, 1754; his Godfather was Judocus Boone, and his Godmother was Petronilla Loncke (Wielsbeke 1710-1769, daughter of Arnoldus Loncke and Catherine Deleersnijder, her Godfather was Igidius Loncke (Hulste 1667), her Godmother was Petronilla Verelst). He had a brother, Laurentius, born in Wielsbeke on August 22, 1756; his Godfather was Laurentius Vande Kerckhove, and his Godmother was Maria Theresia Loncke.
Jean Francois Loncke was a farmer at Ooigem.

66.1.15.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1778, in Figure 66.24, in Wielsbeke.

66.1.16 Thérèse Loncke & Leo Bernard Declercq (DC12)

66.1.16.1 Thérèse Loncke

She was the wife of Leo Bernard Declercq (DC12). She was born in 1797 in Wielsbeke, where she was a farmer. She died in 1868 at Wielsbeke. Thérèse Loncke's brother Jean Loncke, born at Wielsbeke in 1785, had Jeanne Benoit from Waregem as Godmother. Jeanne Benoit (Wielsbeke 1716 - Waregem 1799) was Barbara Benoit's sister.
Joseph Benoit (Wielsbeke 1726-Wielsbeke 1783) was a brother of Barbara and Jeanne Benoit, and he was married to Jeanne Marie Thérèse Baert at Wielsbeke in 1755; she died at Wielsbeke in 1804.
The Loncke family were farmers in the area around Hulste. A cattle census of 1794, for instance, indicates that the family Loncke was the leading dairy farmer of Hulste at a farm near the Potterijstraat.
Thérèse Loncke is primarily described in Chapter 42.4 as the wife of Leo Bernard Declercq (DC12) and great-great-great-grandmother of the author.
DNA evidence for Baert is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.

66.1.16.2 Leo Bernard Declercq (DC12)

Leo Bernard Declercq (DC12) is primarily described in Chapter 42, as a descendant of the Desclergues and great-great-great-grandfather of the author.
He was born in 1808 at Kuurne. He died in 1876 in Wielsbeke. His Godfather was Pierre Joseph de Saintobin from Izegem, and his Godmother was Barbara Thérèse Declercq from Lendelede.
Barbara Thérèse was a farmer, born at Kuurne and married to Louis de Saintobin, born at Sint-Eloois-Winkel around 1790. Her daughter, Barbara Thérèse de Saintobin, married Piere Jean Van den Berghe, a flax merchant.
Leo Bernard (DC12) had a sister, Rosalie, born in 1800 at Kuurne. Renier Declercq (DC10) was her Godfather; Marie Anne Thérèse D' Hondt was her Godmother.
Pierre Joseph Declercq (DC11) and Barbara Thérèse d'Hont must have lived at Izegem in 1800 or earlier, as Rosalie's baptism certificate indicates.
Leo Bernard (DC12) also had a brother, François Eugene, born at Kuurne in 1812; his Godfather was Xavier Bossuyt from Lendelede, and his Godmother was Emilie Françoise van Craeynest from Kuurne.

66.1.16.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1840 at Wielsbeke, Belgium.

66.1.17 Ivo Declercq (DC13) & Mathilde Van den Broucke

66.1.17.1 Ivo Declercq

He was born in 1846 in Wielsbeke and was the husband of Mathilde Van den Broucke. He was a farmer in Wielsbeke. He died at Kuurne in 1909, but his death certificate was copied in the registers of Wielsbeke.
Ivo Declercq (DC13) is primarily described in Chapter 43 as a descendant of the Desclergues and great-great-grandfather of the author.

66.1.17.2 Mathilde Van den Broucke

She was born in 1849, was the wife of Ivo Declercq (DC16), and was a farmer. She was the daughter of Jean-Baptiste Van den Broucke, son of Amand François Van Den Broucke and Barbara Debouvere and born in Ingelmunster in 1813; and of Victoria Verlinde, daughter of Ignace Verlinde and Barbara Thérèse du Bois.
Jean Baptiste Van den Broucke and Victoria Verlinde married in 1847 at Wielsbeke. Victoria Verlinde passed away in 1851, and Jean Baptiste re-married Sophia Francisca Vervaeke from Lendelede in 1852. Mathilde had one brother, Constant Ignace, who lived in Ooigem. Jean Baptiste Van den Broucke died at Wielsbeke in 1890. The Van den Broucke family originates from Hulste where they were the owners of a large farm at Oostrozebekestraat.
Amand François van den Broucke was the son of Amand François van den Broucke (senior) and of Marie Jeanne Ramon (1753-1794) from Ingelmunster, who was the daughter of Jean Ramon and Marie Jeanne du Bois, both farmers. The family of du Bois originates from Rollegem along the Lys (Leie) River near Kortrijk.
Mathilde Van den Broucke is primarily described in Chapter 43.3 as the wife of Ivo Declercq (DC13) and the author's great-great-grandmother.

66.1.17.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1869 at Wielsbeke, Belgium.

66.1.18 Ernest Constant Declercq (DC14) & Marie Elodie Devenyn

66.1.18.1 Ernest Constant Declercq

He was born in 1872 in Wielsbeke, Belgium, as the son of Ivo Declercq (DC13) and Mathilde Van den Broucke. He died in 1947 in Olsene. He was married to Marie Elodie Devenyn. Ernest Constant Declercq (DC14) is primarily described in Chapter 44 as a descendant of the Desclergues and great-grandfather of the author.

66.1.18.2 Marie Elodie Devenyn

66.2 The Benoit Ancestry line, Lesage Branch

66.2.1 Introduction

This line is interesting because it goes far back in time, thanks to contemporary research. The meticulous work of the Benoit family to obtain the oldest information is supplied here with much gratitude, as in the previous Chapter 66.1.
As described extensively in Chapter 66.1, most research described in this chapter, concerning all the individuals carrying the name Benoit and variations, was done by the Benoit family, particularly Frans Benoit and Filip Benoit and also Remi Deprez. We are incredibly indebted to them.
One person in the extended Benoit family, well-known in Flanders, is Peter Benoit, shown in Figure 66.25 and described in Chapter 66.1.2. The author's descendence from the eldest known Benoit ancestors is shown in Figure 66.26.

66.2.2 Gilles Benoit (Mannoot) & ega Gilles Mannoot

66.2.2.1 Gilles Benoit (Mannoot)

66.2.11 Livinus Benoit & Marie Duyck

66.2.11.1 Livinus Benoit

He was born in 1564 in Gottem as the son of Livinus Benoit and Petronella.
He married Marie Duyck or le Ducq and died in 1641, in Figure 66.27, in Pittem.

66.2.11.2 Marie le Ducq

She is the daughter of Antoine le Ducq and Magdalena Bibauw. She was married to Livinus Benoit. We have not investigated this person further.

66.2.11.3 Their Marriage

In Figure 66.28, their wedding was in 1633 at Tielt.

66.2.12 Louis Benoit & Claire Legaet

66.2.12.1 Louis Benoit

Other genealogists claim that Louis Benoit was born around 1633 or around 1640; some even claim it was at Waregem. Nevertheless, we have yet to find his baptism. Therefore, we cannot be sure.
He was the son of Livinus Benoit and Marie le Ducq. He died in 1695, in Figure 66.29, in Waregem. He was married to Claire Legaet.

66.2.12.2 Claire Legaet

Although we could not find factual evidence of her birth, Claire was born around 1649 and married Louis Benoit at Waregem on July 20, 1670. Claire was the daughter of Christian Legaet and Judoca Van Oyeghem.

66.2.12.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1670, in Figure 66.30, in Waregem.

66.2.13 Pierre Camerteyn & Marie Jeanne Benoit

66.2.13.1 Pierre Camerteyn

He was born in 1677, in Figure 66.31, in Waregem, and was married to Marie Jeanne Benoit. He died in 1754, in Figure 66.32, in Waregem. It's important to mention that the Camerteyn family also appears in Chapter 65.16 and links the Patin-Vermeersch families from Geluwe to Waregem.

66.2.13.2 Marie Jeanne Benoit

She was born in 1680, in Figure 66.33, in Waregem, and was married to Pierre Camerteyn.

66.2.13.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1703, in Figure 66.34, at Waregem.

66.2.14 Marie Jeanne Camerteyn & Pierre Dewanckele

66.2.14.1 Marie Jeanne Camerteyn

She was born in 1710, in Figure 66.35, in Waregem, and was married to Pierre Dewanckele. She died in 1779, in Figure 66.36, in Geluwe.

66.2.14.2 Pierre Dewanckele

He was born 1701 in Figure 66.37, in Geluwe. He died in 1772, in Figure 66.38, in Geluwe.
Pierre Dewanckele's father, Marinus Dewanckele, was the son of Bertrand Dewanckere (dead at Geluwe in 1720) and Judoca de Halewyn (dead at Geluwe in 1720), who married at Menen in 1669.

66.2.14.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1734, in Figure 66.39, in Menen.

66.2.15 Charles Ignace Dewanckele & Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch

66.2.15.1 Charles Ignace Dewanckele

He was born in 1743 in Geluwe, Belgium, as the son of Pierre Dewanckele and Marie Jeane Camertyn and the grandson of Marie Jeanne Benoit. He was married to Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch and died in 1794 in Rumbeke, Belgium.
He was a Landed Gentry Farmer and only child. Charles Ignace Dewanckele is primarily described in Chapter 65 as the husband of Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch and father of Pierre Charles Dewanckele and Eugene Dewanckele, in particular, in Chapter 65.16.2.

66.2.15.2 Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch

She was born in 1751 Geluwe, Belgium, and married Charles Ignace Dewanckele. She died in 1831 in Hooglede, Belgium. She was a Landowner and Rentier. Her Godfather was Jean-Baptiste Stagier, and her Godmother was Anna-Clara Soene. Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch is primarily described in Chapter 65 as the daughter of Joseph Vermeersch and Marie Claire Pennet, particularly in Chapter 65.16.1.

66.2.15.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1779 in Geluwe, Belgium, and is shown in Chapter 65.16.3.

66.2.16 Pierre Charles Dewanckele & Barbara Goddyn

66.2.16.1 Pierre Charles Dewanckele

He was born in 1789 as the son of Charles Ignace Dwanckele and Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch and was married to Barbara Goddyn. He was the great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Benoit, died in 1860 in Hooglede, Belgium, and has been military in Napoleon's Grande Armée. He was a Landed Gentry Farmer.
Pierre Charles Dewanckele is primarily described in Chapter 65 as the son of Charles Ignace Dewanckele and Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch, particularly in Chapter 65.17. He is also referred to in Chapter 68 in the 't Kint ancestry line.

66.2.16.2 Barbara Goddyn

She was born in 1789 in Hooglede, Belgium. She was married to Pierre Charles Dewanckele and died in 1832 in Hooglede, Belgium. Barbara Goddyn was a farmer and was the daughter of Joseph Goddyn (1754-1824) from Lichtervelde and Anastasie Verstraete (1753) from Hooglede.
Joseph Goddyn was the son of Bartholome Goddyn and Marie Catherine Meersman, married at Lichtervelde in 1743. Bartholome Goddyn descended from a long Goddyn bloodline of farmers and landowners at Lichtervelde dating back to the 1500s, with first names 'Roger' alternating with 'Bartolome' married to the families Ghijsen, Goddyn, and Fiers.
Barbara Goddyn is primarily described in Chapter 65 as the wife of Pierre Charles Dewanckele, particularly in Chapter 65.17. She was the mother of Rosalie Dewanckele and mother-in-law of Louis François Lesage. She also appears in Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line.

66.2.16.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1815 in Hooglede, Belgium, as shown in Chapter 65.17.3.

66.2.17 Rosalie Dewanckele & Louis François Lesage

66.2.17.1 Rosalie Dewanckele

She was born in 1816 in Hooglede as the daughter of Pierre Charles Dewanckele and Barbara Goddyn and was married to Louis François Lesage. She was the great-great-granddaughter of Marie Jeanne Benoit and died in 1872 in Westrozebeke, Belgium. She was a Farmer.
Rosalie Dewanckele is primarily described in Chapter 65 as the daughter of Pierre Charles Dewanckele and Barbara Goddyn, particularly in Chapter 65.18. She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the wife of Louis François Lesage and mother of Emile Theophile Lesage; and Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line.

66.2.17.2 Louis François Lesage

He was born in 1813 in Langemark, Belgium, and was married to Rosalie Dewanckele. He was the great-great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Benoit and died in 1877 in Westrozebeke, Belgium. Louis François Lesage was the son of Jean Lesage, who was born at Staden and lived in Langemark, and of Barbe Thérèse Reynaert from Passchendaele.
Louis François Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 65, as the husband of Rosalie Dewanckele, particularly in Chapter 65.18. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, in the Lesage ancestry; and Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line.

66.2.17.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1844 in Staden, Belgium, as shown in Chapter 65.18. They married at Passchendaele in 1780. The witnesses were Pierre Lamaire, Louis Reynaert, Joseph Reynaert, and David Reynaert, all farmers.

66.2.18 Emile Theophile Lesage & Eudoxie Romanie Lammens

66.2.18.1 Emile Theophile Lesage

He was born in 1857 in Westrozebeke, Belgium, the son of Louis François Lesage and Rosalie Dewanckele. He was married to Eudoxie Romanie Lammens. He was the great-great-great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Benoit and died in 1938 in Beselare, Belgium. Emile Theophile Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 64 as the author's great-grandfather. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 65, as great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); and also in Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the son-in-law of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

66.2.18.2 Eudoxie Romanie Lammens

She was born in 1868 in Zonnebeke, Belgium. In 1888, she resided in Passchendaele, Belgium, and died in 1931 in Beselare, Belgium. She was Marie Jeanne Benoit's great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law.
Eudoxie Romanie Lammens is primarily described in Chapter 64 as the wife of Emile Theophile Lesage and as the author's great-grandmother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 65, as great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the daughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

66.2.18.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1888 at Passchendaele, Belgium, shown in Chapter 64.6.3.

66.2.19 Irma Helena Lesage & Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15)

66.2.19.1 Irma Helena Lesage

She was born in 1905 in Moorslede, Belgium, the daughter of Emile Theophile Lesage (DP12V03DW02L01) and Eudoxie Romanie Lammens. She was the great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Maria Jeanne Benoit. She married Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC18) and died in 1953 in Kortrijk, Belgium.
Irma Helena Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 45 as the wife of Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq and the author's grandmother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter of Emile Theophile Lesage; Chapter 65, as great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the granddaughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

66.2.19.2 Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15)

He was born in 1906 in Wielsbeke, Belgium, the son of Ernest Constant Declercq and Marie Elodie Devenyn. He married Irma Helena Lesage (DP12V03DW02L02) and died in 1963 in Deerlijk, Belgium.
Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15) is primarily described in Chapter 45 as a descendant of the Desclergues and grandfather of the author. He was the husband of Irma Lesage, who was a great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Maria Jeanne Benoit.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the husband of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the husband of Irma Helena Lesage, and the great-great-great-great-great-grandson-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as grandson-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

66.2.19.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1932 in Beselare, Belgium.

66.2.20 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) & Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

66.2.20.1 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16)

Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) is primarily described in Chapter 46 as a descendant of the Desclergues and father of the author.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the son of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 67, as the son-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-grandson-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-grandson of Clemens Lammens.

66.2.20.2 Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

Nelly Maria Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the daughter of René Vangheluwe and Anna Den Dauw and is the author's mother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 67, as the daughter of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-granddaughter of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as the great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author, as his mother.

66.2.21 Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) & Shirani Olupathage de Silva

66.2.21.1 Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17)

Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) is the author of this book and is primarily described in Chapter 47 as a descendant of the Desclergues and the author of this book, and also in Part X.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the grandson of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 67, as the grandson of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-great-grandson of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as the great-great-grandson of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author.
Furthermore, he is equally referred to in Part XII as the husband of Shirani Oluphathage de Silva.

66.2.21.2 Shirani Olupathage de Silva

Shirani Olupathage de Silva is first described in Chapter 47 as the author's wife.
She is equally referred, in much detail, in Part XII, and also in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the granddaughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 67, as the granddaughter-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

The Den Dauw Ancestry line

67.1 Introduction

The Den Dauw family has a rich and enduring legacy as a family of diligent shoemakers and enterprising individuals. Their history, deeply rooted in the traditions of craftsmanship and entrepreneurship, reflects a remarkable resilience and adaptability. This chapter is particularly cherished by the author, who had a profound bond with his grandmother, Anna Den Dauw. Including this chapter is a tribute to her memory and the enduring spirit of her ancestors.

When the Den Dauw ancestry is compared to the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry, as discussed in Chapter 72, it is noteworthy that both lineages exhibit significant closeness. This proximity suggests a long-term friendship or neighborhood ties between the two families. The bloodline of the Den Dauw family is legendary in Otegem, where they were initially farmers before transitioning to cobblers and shoe manufacturers. This transformation began generations ago and continued until the late 20th century.

The Den Dauw ancestors were skilled in their craft and exemplified the qualities of hardworking, talented entrepreneurs. They demonstrated remarkable resilience, persevering through numerous challenges and catastrophic events, the details of which will be explored further in this chapter. Their ability to adapt and thrive in adversity is a testament to their enduring legacy. The author dedicates this chapter to his beloved grandmother, Anna Den Dauw, honoring her memory and the rich heritage of her forebears.

67.2 Judocus Den Dauw & Elisabeth Vinck

67.2.1 Judocus Den Dauw

He was married to Elisabeth Vinck. Since we could not find him at Heestert and the registers need to be completed for Otegem, he was likely born in Otegem rather than Heestert. On the second wedding of his son Jean Den Dauw in 1742, the priest wrote that Judocus Den Dauw was from Otegem, confirming our assumption. He died at Otegem on July 15, 1740, in Figure 67.2.

Based on the information given in his death record, he must have been born around 1672. Note that there are traces of Den Dauw at Otegem, shown in Figure 67.3, in the 17th century, but we have yet to reach any further than Judocus. For instance, on July 5, 1716, there is a marriage at Kuurne of Rogerius Den Dauw, born around 1684, and Anna Maria Leupe, born in 1694, in which it is mentioned that Rogerius is from Otegem.

Further research would be required to find more details beyond Judocus Den Dauw.

67.2.2 Elisabeth Vinck

She was born in Anzegem in 1670, in Figure 67.4, and married to Judocus Den Dauw. She was from Ingooigem and was baptized at Anzegem. Her parents were Joannes Vincke and Magdalena Halsberghe. She died in Otegem in 1636, in Figure 67.5.

67.2.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1695, in Figure 67.6, in Heestert.

67.3 Jean Den Dauw & Françoise Depraetere

67.3.1 Jean Den Dauw

He was born in 1696, in Figure 67.7, in Heestert, as the son of Judocus Den Dauw and Elisabeth Vinck. He was married to Françoise Depraetere.

After his wife Françoise Depraetere had passed away in 1742, he remarried Petronella Fernoo, in Figure 67.8.

He died in 1772, in Figure 67.9, in Otegem.

67.3.2 Françoise Depraetere

She was married to Jean Den Dauw and died in 1742 in Figure 67.10, in Otegem. The couple had their first registered child, Petrus Den Dauw, in Otegem in 1727 on July 11. The child's godparents were Petrus Depraetere and Elisabeth Vinck.

Likely Petrus Depraetere was the father of Françoise Depraetere. However, we have yet to retrieve her birth document or wedding. Note that a DNA link is described in Chapter 73.12.4 on page 1601.

67.4 Pierre Joseph Den Dauw & Marie Thérèse Houttequiet

67.4.1 Pierre Joseph Den Dauw

He was born in 1727 in Figure 67.11, in Otegem as the son of Jean Den Dauw and Françoise Depraetere. He was married to Marie Thérèse Houttequiet and died in 1788 in Figure 67.12, in Otegem.

67.4.2 Marie Thérèse Houttequiet

She was born in 1742 in Figure 67.13, at Otegem, and died in 1817, in Figure 67.14. Her mother was Marie Thérèse Vallier.

67.4.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1758, in Figure 67.15, in Vichte. Pierre Joseph and Marie Thérèse lived at Ingooigem.

67.5 Jean Baptiste Den Dauw & Colette Regine Vereecke

67.5.1 Jean Baptiste Den Dauw

He was born in 1765 in Figure 67.16 in Otegem, as the son of Pierre Joseph Den Dauw and Marie Thérèse Houttequiet. He was married to Colette Regine Vereecke and died in 1835, in Figure 67.17, in Otegem.

67.5.2 Colette Regine Vereecke

She was born in 1773 in Figure 67.18, in Otegem. She was married to Jean Baptiste Den Dauw and died in 1845, in Figure 67.19, in Otegem.
Her father was Thomas Vereecke from Avelgem and descended from a du Vivier family from Maubray, near Tournai. DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.
Her mother was Adrienne Teerlinck from Otegem.

67.5.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1803, in Figure 67.20, in Otegem. Two of their children's baptisms are shown in Figure 67.21 and 67.22. Another child, our ancestor, is described in Chapter 67.6.1.

67.6 Jacques Joseph Den Dauw & Constance van Tieghem

67.6.1 Jacques Joseph Den Dauw

He was born in 1806, in Figures 67.23 and 67.24, in Otegem as the son of Jean Baptiste Den Dauw. He married Constance van Tieghem and died in 1864, in Figure 67.25, in Otegem. He was probably the first shoemaker in this bloodline. His ancestors had been farmers.

67.6.2 Marie Constance van Tieghem

She married Jacques Joseph Den Dauw and died in 1848 in Otegem. She was born at Waarmaarde on October 26, 1804, in Figure 67.26, as the daughter of Jean-Baptiste van Tieghem and Rose Depraetere. She died in Otegem in 1848, in Figures 67.27 and 67.28.

67.6.3 Their Marriage

They married in Waarmaarde in 1833, in Figure 67.29.

67.7 Charles Louis Den Dauw & Julie de Meurie

67.7.1 Charles Louis Den Dauw

He was born in 1836, in Figures 67.30 and 67.31, in Otegem as the son of Jacques Joseph Den Dauw and Constance van Tieghem. He was married to Julie de Meurie. For business regions, they moved to the French-speaking village of Leers-Nord, close to the border with France.

His military registration in 1856 is shown in Figure 67.32. Charles Louis had a brother, Auguste, who was born on March 17, 1840, at Otegem. The fact that they were manufacturers is, for instance, reflected in the fact that the witnesses on Auguste's birth certificate were a cartwright and a baker.

We had yet to find where and when Charles Louis Den Dauw died. We know it must have been after 1900 when his wife, Julie De Meurie, died at Leers-Nord.

In 1909, Charles Den Dauw was listed among the deceased in Otegem as number 9bis, but without page number and record. Because we could not find any other trace and since he was also absent from the family picture in 1919, we assume that he is the one and is, therefore, likely dead in 1909. The year 1900 had been an annus horribilis for the family. Indeed, three family members died that year at Leers-Nord, i.e., Julie de Meurie and two of her sons. Some impressions of Leers-Nord are shown in Figure 67.33.

67.7.2 Julie de Meurie

She was born in 1844 in Figure 67.34 in Ingooigem. She descends from the families of Van Den Broucke from the area of Desselgem-Waregem and Haedens from the region of Anzegem-Ingooigem. She was the daughter of Pierre François de Meurie and Sophie Van Den Broucke. She died in Leers-Nord in 1900, in Figure 67.35.

67.7.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1862, in Figures 67.36 and 67.37, in Ingooigem. Charles Louis and Julie lived at Leers-Nord (Hainaut), running a shoemaking business until a disaster struck.

67.7.4 Their Offspring

67.7.4.1 Richard Den Dauw

He is described in Chapter 67.8.

67.7.4.2 Alois Den Dauw

He was born in 1866 at Otegem, he died in 1900, in Figure 67.38, at Leers-Nord. He married Helena Windels, daughter of Eduard Windels and Pelagie Desle, at Moen on November 18, 1891.

67.7.4.3 Hippolyte Den Dauw

At Leers Nord, he was a cordonnier (shoemaker) with his parents and two brothers. In 1900, the year he died, in Figure 67.39, his mother and another brother died too. One brother, Alphonse, continued the business at Leers-Nord, while Richard Den Dauw, his brother, had stayed in Otegem, where he continued the Den Dauw line of shoemakers.

Figure 67.8: Otegem, October 9, 1742, was the second marriage of Jean Den Dauw. When he had become a widower, he remarried Petronella Fernoo from Otegem, daughter of Judocus Fernoo and Jacoba Verbrugghe.

geboren te OOTEGHEM, den 17 Juni 1851, en er na eene langdurige en pijnlijke ziekte met kristene verduldigheid verdragen, godvruchtig in den Heer ontslapen den 12 van Mariamaand 1927 versterkt door de Troostmiddelen onzer Moeder de H. Kerk.

Zij was Prefekte van de Congregatie van O. L Vr. en lid van alle godvruchtige genootschappen der parochie.

De smartelijke kwellingen binst hare ziekte heeft zij verdragen in een geest van christelijke boetveerdigheid. Terwijl hare krachten vergingen en zij de dood naderen voelde, scheen zij, gesterkt door de veelvuldige Communie en hare stichtende godsvrucht tot hare goede Hemelmoeder, geruster dan ooit, en was zoo tevreden alsof de overgang van het leven tot den dood, voor haar, maar een korte en gemakkelijke weg was geweest om tot haar vaderland terug te keeren en hoe menigmaal heeft zij niet welgemeend gezegd : «t'Is al, gelijk God het wil.»

Zij was een kristen mensch van den ouden stempel, ijverig om het goed met alle middelen te ondersteunen, ook waren hare wegen schoon en aangenaam voor God en allen die haar kenden zullen van haar de beste getuigenis geven.

Vaarwel, geliefde Broeders en Naastbestaanden, gij waart een gestadigen troost voor mij, weent niet en gedenkt uwe Zuster, Tante en Nicht in uwe gebeden, en gij beminde Congreganisten, bidt voor mij en blijft getrouwe kinderen van Maria, opdat eene gelukzalige dood eens uwe sterfelijke levensbaan kome bekroonen.

Akten van Geloof, Hoop en Liefde.

67.8 Richard Den Dauw & Irma Clemence de Meire

67.8.1 Richard Den Dauw

Richard Den Dauw is shown in Figure 67.41. He was born in 1864, in Figures 67.42 and 67.43, in Otegem as the son of Charles Louis Den Dauw and Julie de Meurie. He was married to Irma Clemence de Meire and died in Otegem.
Richard's military registration in 1884 is shown in Figure 67.44.
Richard Den Dauw was still alive at the end of 1918 because he appears in a picture, in Figure 67.51, with his son Alfred and other children where Alfred is wearing a received war medal. The photo was taken in 1919. He died before 1941, but we don't know yet when. He has served numerous times as a witness for the administration of Otegem.

Irma Clemence de Meire is shown in Figure 67.45. DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.
She appears in documents as 'Irma' and 'Irena.' Her birth document states 'Irema,' hence the endless confusion. She was born in 1869 in Beveren-Leie, in Figures 67.46 and 67.47, as the daughter of Pierre de Meire, an Innkeeper at Otegem. She died at Otegem. She descends from the families de Meire from the Zulte-Sint-Eloois-Vijve area, Vandorpe from Beveren-Leie, and Deldaele from Moen.
Irma died in Otegem in 1941, in Figure 67.48, the same year as her daughter-in-law, Augusta Waelkens, in Chapter 67.9.2.

67.8.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was at Otegem on February 4, 1891, in Figures 67.49 and 67.50.

67.8.4 Their Offspring

Richard Den Dauw and Irma Clemence de Meire had the following children: Alfred, Alida, Gentil, André, Jerome, and Remi. They are found in Figure 67.51.

67.8.4.1 Alfred Den Dauw

He is described in Chapter 67.9.

His father was Charles Den Dauw, and his mother was Julie De Meurie. The file indicates that his father was a 'cabaretier' at that time, which, if we read well, means that he was an innkeeper. Often, shoemakers and other professionals combine their profession with inn-keeping.*

67.9 Alfred Den Dauw & Augusta Emma Waelkens

67.9.1 Alfred Den Dauw

67.9.1.1 Introduction

He was born in 1892, in Figure 67.73, in Otegem as the son of Richard Den Dauw and Irma Clemence de Meire. He married Augusta Emma Waelkens and died in 1958, in Figure 67.75, in Deerlijk. He was a disabled war veteran who had entered the army in 1911 in Figure 67.74. He was called to service in the summer of 1914 and ultimately ended up in a German prisoner camp. The details of those events have not been retrieved yet. His brother was a shoemaker at Otegem, probably the last or second but last of the bloodline. He lived in Zolderstraat, Otegem, before he married.

67.9.1.2 His Life

Alfred Den Dauw, as depicted in Figure 67.78, was born in Otegem on February 24, 1892, as shown in Figure 67.73. He died in Deerlijk on March 10, 1958, as documented in Figures 67.75 and 67.76. He was married to Augusta Waelkens, and their wedding took place in 1914, merely three months before the German invasion of Belgium during World War I.

Before the war, Alfred completed his military service and subsequently endured the hardships of being a forced laborer during the conflict. It was towards the end of World War I, or shortly after that that Alfred was diagnosed with encephalitis lethargica, a devastating viral disease.

Encephalitis lethargica, often referred to as 'sleeping sickness' in the United States, emerged as an epidemic affecting many post-war patients before mysteriously disappearing in the 1920s. This condition led to profound lethargy and, in many cases, resulted in either death or post-encephalitic Parkinsonism. The latter is named for its symptomatic similarities to Parkinson's disease, manifesting in tremors, rigidity, and bradykinesia.

Alfred's contraction of encephalitis lethargica occurred abruptly in his youth, significantly impacting his life. The disease left him with a debilitating condition that persisted without notable progression until his death at the age of 66. This long-term illness severely curtailed his ability to pursue entrepreneurial ventures, unlike his brothers.

Despite his challenges, Alfred's wife, Augusta, provided unwavering care until her passing in 1941. After that, their children, including the author's grandmother, Anna Den Dauw, remained resilient and optimistic, working diligently to achieve success while caring for their father.

In his later years, Alfred resided at an elderly care home in Deerlijk.

Despite his condition, he maintained an active lifestyle, frequently walking and visiting his children whenever possible. It is indeed tragic how encephalitis lethargica abruptly struck a once-healthy young man, leaving a profound and lasting impact on his life.

His story is a stark reminder of the far-reaching consequences of wartime illnesses.

Figures 67.79 and 67.80 display various images of Alfred Den Dauw, including his tombstone, encapsulating the memory of a man who endured great hardship and displayed remarkable resilience in the face of adversity.

67.9.2 Augusta Emma Waelkens

She was born in 1891, in Figure 67.81, in Deerlijk. She was married to Alfred Den Dauw and died in 1941 Deerlijk, in Figure 67.87. The branch of Waelkens originates in Waregem and includes marriages with Laevens and Marie Catherine Thérèse van Poucke, with roots in Otegem in the 17th century.

DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.

Augusta's mother was Sidonie Verbeke and descended from the families of de Kerckhove and van den Berghe from Ingooigem. One can retrieve the family line of Waelkens until Jean-Baptiste Waelkens in Waregem, who was married to Marie de Ronse (born in 1708), and beyond. The details are given in Chapter 67.9.5, devoted to Sir Marc Waelkens.

Augusta Emma had a brother, Richard, born at Deerlijk in 1881, who died at 6. She also had a brother, Remi Cyrille (Deerlijk 1884), a sister, Alida Celina (Deerlijk 1886), a brother, Richard Ludolf (Deerlijk 1889), and a brother, Jules Ernest (Deerlijk 1894).

Augusta Emma Waelkens, her mother Sidonie Verbeke, and all her maternal ancestors are described in Chapter 72 and can be consulted there.

Documents of Augusta Emma Waelkens' ancestors are shown in Figures 67.82, 67.83, 67.84, 67.85 and 67.86.

Augusta Waelkens had brothers and sisters. Because of her early death in 1941, knowledge of the family has not been transmitted to the author.

Nevertheless, he remembers acquaintances of his grandmother Anna, whose names appear below and may have been her cousins. We will never know. Nonetheless, we have compared death announcements with data provided by other genealogists and found the following siblings and in-laws of Augusta Waelkens:

DE HEER

Gentiel DENDAUW

Weduwnaar van Mevrouw
Germaine VAN DE MEULEBROEKE

geboren te Otegem op 22 maart 1901 en godvruchtig overleden te Tiegem op 14 mei 1988, gesterkt door de Sakramenten der Zieken.

Ere-ondervoorzitter van de
Bond van de derde leeftijd.

Lid van de K.W.B. en Ziekenzorg.

Met Gentiel verdwijnt een gekend gezicht uit ons dorpsleven. Als goede stielman zorgde hij vele jaren voor het schoeisel van zijn medemensen. Vroeg ontviel hem zijn echtgenote, moedig heeft hij verder gedaan. Tot op hoge leeftijd bleef hij aktief en interesseerde zich aan alles. Hij was één van de medestichters van de Kristelijke Bond der Gepensioneerden in Tiegem, waaraan hij een groot deel van zijn tijd en zijn energie besteedde als ondervoorzitter. Maar een jaar en half terug kreeg zijn gezondheid een harde slag. Voor hem werd dit het einde van alle aktiviteiten, langzaam brokkelde zijn ijzersterk gestel af. Hij besefte heel goed dat het einde naderde en bewust heeft hij zich voorbereid op de grote Ontmoeting met de Heer.

Gentiel was een diep-gelovig man, die zich veilig geborgen wist in Gods Vaderhand. Met Hem leefde hij in nauw kontakt : bij Hem ging hij zijn nood klagen, bij Hem vond hij moed en kracht om de kruisen in het leven te kunnen dragen. Bij die Vader is hij nu thuisgekomen na zijn aardse pelgrimstocht. Laat ons dan samen bidden : « Heer onze God, leid Gentiel nu binnen in uw Vaderhuis en schenk hem de vreugde en het geluk dat Gij voor uw kinderen hebt bereid ? »

Dierbare kinderen en kleinkinderen, zoveel jaren mochten wij hier op aarde bij elkaar zijn en samen lief en leed delen in ons bestaan. De Heer heeft mij nu opgeroepen naar zijn Vaderhuis ... Danken we Hem voor alles wat we uit zijn Hand hebben ontvangen. Dank aan U allen voor alles wat gij voor mij hebt gedaan, vooral in mijn ziekzijn. Samen met moeder zaliger blijf ik nu waken over U allen van bij de Heer.

Beste familie en vrienden, zovele gelukkige momenten hebben we hier samen mogen beleven. Dank aan U allen voor alles. Nu ben ik aangekomen in ons echte Vaderland ... Over dit afscheid heen blijven we met elkaar verbonden door ons gelovig gebed en dit in afwachting van het blijvende samenzijn in de vreugde van Gods eeuwige Woning.

Je handen hebben voor ons gewerkt.
Je hart heeft voor ons geklopt.
Je ogen hebben ons tot het laatst gezocht.
Je wilde zo graag bij ons blijven en vocht zolang je kon.

"Schoenmaker blijf bij uw leest". Deze wijze Vlaamse spreuk heeft André letterlijk en figuurlijk zijn hele leven toegepast.
Letterlijk : Het schoenmakersambacht, bij vader geleerd, heeft André uitgeoefend tot hij op rust ging. In zijn atelier achter het huis zat hij van 's morgens tot 's avonds "zijn schoentjes te naaien". Gedurig had hij contact met mensen die schoenen brachten voor herstel, of er kwamen afhalen. Zij vertelden hun nieuwtjes en wat er omging in de grote en kleine wereld. Duivenpraatjes en voetbalverslagen waren er niet uit de lucht, want André was zo'n verwoed duivenmelker en hij stond in voor het herstel van schoenen en matchballen bij Blauwvoet Otegem.Ook figuurlijk is de schoenmaker bij de leest gebleven. Alle grote levenswaarden die hij van huis uit heeft meegekregen zoals rechtvaardigheid, liefde, trouw, geloof ..., heeft André bewaard en toegepast in zijn leven. Zijn liefde en trouw was onwankelbaar. Samen met zijn echtgenote heeft hij een mooi gezin opgebouwd. Daarbij hebben zij lief en leed altijd samen gedragen, en dat heeft precies 56 jaar mogen duren. In 1987 werd de gouden bruiloft gevierd. Zijn kinderen en kleinkinderen waren zijn oogappels. Als hij ze, door een verzwakt gezichtsvermogen haast niet meer kon herkennen, onderscheidde hij ze aan de klank van hun stem. André was een diep gelovig man en een overtuigd christen. Hij liep daar niet hoog mee op, maar heel zijn manier van leven was een stil maar klaar getuigenis. Voor niets ter wereld zou hij de zondagsmis hebben overgeslagen. Als het de laatste maanden echt niet meer kon, verlangde hij dat de h. communie hem zou gebracht worden. Stipt onderhield hij het dagelijks avondgebed. Zijn laatste levensdagen drukten zeer zwaar. Hij voelde het aan dat het niet lang meer zou duren. Hij bad dat Maria hem zou helpen en vroeg aan de kinderen of ze met hem mee wilden bidden.
Op Kerstdag wilde André thuis zijn. Nergens kon het lied van vrede op aarde mooier klinken dan in eigen familiekring. Nog voor het nieuwe jaar is ingetreden mocht hij zich aansluiten bij het "Eer aan God in den hoge" van de hemelkoren. Terwijl op de wereld de jaarwisseling wordt gevierd, viert André de wisseling van aarde naar hemel, van eindigheid naar eeuwigheid.
Mijn liefste Alida : Vanwaar heb je de kracht gehaald om mij dag in dag uit zoveel liefde en zorg toe te dragen ? Gij zijt toch zo bedankt ! Jullie ook, beminde kinderen en kleinkinderen, dank voor uw bezorgdheid en genegenheid. Bidden wij nu voor elkaar, dan blijven wij sterk verbonden in de Heer Jezus, Heiland en Verlosser. Draag goed zorg voor moeder.
Beste familie en vrienden, tot een blij weerzien.

Vader,
Wié je was kan in enkele woorden worden gezegd: een wijs, doordenkend, vernuftig man. Een doorzetter. Eerlijk, rechtvaardig. Dienstbaar en bezorgd. Eenvoudig man van weinig woorden. Geliefd bij de mensen. Godvrezend, zonder angstvalligheid, maar met schroom en eerbied voor uw Schepper. Het kan niet anders of de Heer heeft met welgevallen op u neergezien.

De talenten die je van God hebt gekregen heb je niet in de grond gestopt. Je hebt er mee gewerkt en ze hebben vrucht gegeven. Je hoeft niet te blozen bij de afrekening. De Heer zal u prijzen: "Uitstekend, goede en trouwe dienaar. Ga binnen in de vreugde van uw Heer." (Matt. 25,23)

Vader, niet heel onverwacht kwam uw sterven. De laatste dagen lag de dood op de loer. 's Nachts, in de slaap, is hij gekomen. De pijn van het afscheid nemen van alles wat je dierbaar was, is u bespaard gebleven. En er was zovéél dat u ter harte ging: je gezin en je familie, je bedrijf en de mensen in en betrokken met het bedrijf, je duiven en de duivenvrienden en nog zoveel anderen...

Of het pijnlijk is voor ons die achterblijven? Zéker! Ontroostbaar? Dat niet. Want dit is ons geloof: dat je nu mag verder leven in een heerlijk, eeuwig Licht. Dicht bij de Bron. Bij de Heer van alle leven.

Ons hart is vol dankbaarheid omdat ons zo'n goede man, zo'n trouwe echtgenoot, zo'n liefdevolle vader en grootvader, zo'n waardevolle vriend gegeven werd.

Vol overgave bidden wij:

Heer, onze God,
de naam van elke mens staat gegrift in de palm van uw hand.
Vader, die ons zo dierbaar was,
vertrouwen we aan U toe.
Wij geloven dat we over de dood heen in liefde met elkaar verbonden blijven, dank zij Jezus, uw Zoon, onze Heer, die Gij uit de dood hebt opgewekt.
Gij zijt een trouwe, liefhebbende God.

weduwe van de Heer Jerome Dendauw geboren te Otegem op 15 september 1914 en overleden te Kortrijk op 8 januari 2008.

Moeder, Meter,

We zullen u blijven herinneren: uw onvermoeibare werkkracht, de gulle gastvrijheid rond uw tafel, uw vriendelijke en gemoedelijke omgang met de mensen.
Een wakkere geest, diep gelovig, met ontzag voor de Heer, tradities in ere houdend, daadkrachtig, toekomst gericht.
Wij zullen over u blijven spreken: zo blijft ge bij ons en gaat uw leven ook verder.

We kunnen u niet meer zien, we hebben u niet meer tastbaar en voelbaar in ons midden, maar diep in ons hart weten we dat gij er nog zijt.

We kunnen niet geloven dat gij nu nergens meer zijt, geen thuis hebt, geen verblijf en dat ge in het ijle ronddoolt. Iemand - God - zal nu toch wel naar u omzien, zoals gij in uw leven naar anderen hebt omgezien.

Moeder, Meter, telkens we aan u zullen denken zal ons hart vol dankbaarheid zijn.

De laatste uren dat we samen waren verbonden ons onafscheidelijk en voorgoed, want ieder woord dat je nog zei was taal die enkel leven doet…

Ik voel je hand nog in de mijne:
een warme hand, een beetje klam…
die langzaam losliet bij het scheiden:
nu jou een and're leidsman kwam…

Nog even zocht je naar ons leven:
je laatste adem die glijdend verdween,
we noemden nog je eigen naam, maar je was al naar elders heen…

van Bernadette, Christine, Jo, Martine en Bert

Aan de hemel staat een ster dat is opa, heel hoog en ver.

Ik zou wel willen kijken waar hij nu is, vragen hoe het gaat
en zeggen dat ik hem mis.

Al was het maar voor even,
even kijken hoe opa leeft, even de groetjes doen en zeggen hoeveel men om hem geeft.

Dan denk ik maar aan eerder, hoe leuk het is geweest.
Ook al is opa hier niet meer, onze opa leeft nog steeds!

Een voorbeeldig Kristen mens, een wijze werkzame man en beste raadgever en bezieler voor al wat goed was, is van ons heengegaan, om bij den Heer loon te ontvangen voor al het goed dat hij verricht had. Van huis uit kreeg hij een vroom christen geloof mede dat de steun zou zijn in gans zijn leven. Hij was met rijke talenten begaafd en wilde hoger op, maar de omstandigheden hielden hem tegen, hij zou thuis blijven en in den thuis, waar moeder vroeg was weggehaald, heeft hij steeds, als tweede goede vader, alles wel begaan en bestuurd, zodanig dat de ganse familie zucht: Wij verliezen veel!. Met de familie treurt ook de ganse bevolking: Er is maar een woord: 't Is jammer, 't is te vroeg. Als burgervader aangesteld heeft hij getoond dat hij zijn volk beminde, dat hij vader wilde zijn; door raad en daad bood hij hulp. Hij leefde mee met zijn christen volk en toonde dat hij in alles steunde op zijn christen geloof - Otegem zal lang die kloeke stem onthouden die boven klonk: Wij willen God in gans ons leven.
Met allen die treuren, klagen ook mede zijn talrijke vrienden die zijn buitengewone begaafdheden en grote werkzaamheid waardeerden: Als 't voor 't goed was, 't was nooit te veel.
Helaas! het kon niet blijven: de tegenheden in zijn leven en de vele bekommernissen ondermijnden zijne krachten - noch de hulp der meesters noch de gebeden van zovelen konden baten - De Heer riep hem - lang heeft hij nog geleden en hij stierf gaarne, hij gevoelde dat hij, hersteld, niet meer zou kunnen wat hij wilde.
Overvloedig zal zijn beloning zijn en hierboven zal hij waken over zijn geliefden.
Beminde Broeders en Zusters, Neefjes en Nichtjes, ik bedank u voor uwe liefde en goede zorgen. Dat de Heer u zegene verder in 't leven. Tot wederziens in den Hemel bij onze duurbaren.
Geliefde Familieleden, Vrienden allemaal, zie wat mij is overgekomen, hebt medelijden met mij en bidt ook gij voor mij.

Duurbaar volk van Otegem, gaarn had ik voor u willen voortwerken - De Heer wilde het anders - Zijn Heilige Wil geschiede. Vaartwel. Tot hiernamaals.
Eerw. Zusters mijn verpleegsters ik bedank u om uw goede zorgen. Bidt voor mij.

BID GOD VOOR DE ZIEL
Heer ALFRED DENDAUW
Weduwnaar van
Mevrouw Augusta WAELKENS

geboren te Otegem, op 24 februari 1892 en godvruchtig overleden te Deerlijk (gesticht der H. Familie), op 10 maart 1958, na ontvangen te hebben de laatste H.H. Sacramenten.

Civiel-arbeider 1914-1918.

De slachtoffers van de oorlog vallen niet alleen op het front. Er zijn mensen die tientallen jaren in hun gestel of hun geest verzwakking of kwalen meedragen die als zware gevolgen van de oorlog op hun leven — en helaas ook op dat van hun dierbaren — blijven drukken. Velen onder hen bezwijken eer de volle avond van het leven wordt bereikt.

Alfred heeft als civielarbeider mensonwaardige en mensontwaardende behandeling ondergaan. Lichamelijk en geestelijk geschokt heeft hij er de sporen van meegedragen tot aan zijn levenseinde.

Op zijn sterfdag — derde maandag van de vasten — legt de H. Kerk bij het einde der H. Mis het mensdom volgend liturgisch gebed in de mond: „Buigt uw hoofden voor God" zingt de priester en dan vervolgt hij : „Moge ons, o Heer, uw barmhartigheid ter hulp komen, opdat wij uit de dreigende gevaren onzer zonden door Uwe bescherming gered, en door Uwe bevrijding verlost mogen worden. Door onzen Heer Jezus Christus, die met U leeft en heerst, samen met de H. Geest in alle eeuwen der eeuwen, Amen".

Dierbare kinderen, broeders en zusters, mij zo genegen, God heeft mij tot een beter leven geroepen. Hebt dank voor uw blijken van genegenheid en vergeet niet voor mij en moeder te bidden.

† ZALIGE GEDACHTENIS VAN

AUGUSTA WAELKENS
echtgenoote van ALFRED DENDAUW

geboren te Deerlijk den 17 Oogst 1891 en te St Lodewijk in den vrede des Heeren overleden den 28 Maart 1941 na ontvangen te hebben de H. Sakramenten.

Zij was lid der broederschappen van 't H. Hart van Jezus, den H. Benediktus en der St Annavergadering der Vrouwen.

"Hoe jammer en ze was er nog zoo noodig". Dat is de zucht die iedereen ontsnapt bij 't vernemen van de pijnlijke mare.

"Hoe jammer!..." Want het was eene brave, kristene vrouw die godsdienstig en plichtgetrouw door 't leven ging — al was het voor haar niet rooskleurig! — en zich niet liet beïnvloeden door de wereld met haar afschrik voor arbeid en last, met haar zucht naar gemak en eigenbelang: haar levensdoel was zich geheel wegschenken aan hen die God haar toevertrouwde...

"En ze was er nog zoo noodig!"... Zij was immers eene voorbeeldige echtgenoote en moeder, steeds bekommerd met het welzijn van haren man die in zijn onbeholpenheid zooveel verliest, van hare lieve kinderen die, zoo jong nog om het leven in te gaan, de toewijding en liefde eener moeder niet kunnen missen en — eilaas nu — moeten derven.

Eilaas, noch de kunde der wetenschap noch de gebeden en offers vermochten haar aan den dood te ontrukken; wij buigen diep het hoofd in innige smart maar ook in kristene onderwerping aan Hem die onze Vader is: Zijn wil geschiede.

Vaarwel, beminde echtgenoot, de dood komt ons tijdelijk scheiden, doch onze liefde — sterker dan de dood — blijft voortbestaan; bewaar in uw hart de gedachtenis uwer vrouw die veel voor u deed....

Lieve, lieve kinderen, ik moet u verlaten, maar God zal voor u zorgen als gij braaf blijft. Voor de H. Mis-Aktie hebben wij beloofd ieder dag met 3 de H. Mis bij te wonen voor den vrede, gaat voort naar de H. Mis, het groote zoenoffer, nu ook voor Moeder; helpt Vader zooveel gij kunt.

Bloedverwanten en medezusters der vergadering, ik smeek u allen om een gebed voor mijne ziele-zaligheid. Tot wederziens.

H. Hart van Jezus, bescherm België!

Wanneer de dood, die niet verlengt den wisselbrief van sterven brengt, als gij, o mensch, zult uitgestrekt daar liggen op een plank gerekt, wat zullen dan uw wenschen zijn door vreeze voor de helsche pijn?

Beken u, mensch, 't is tijd voorwaar, vernieuw u met het nieuwe jaar en zeg: O Heer, ik weet het wel, ik heb verdiend een eeuw'ge hel, maar, zoo Gij acht mijn droef gemoed en met mijn tranen mengt Uw Bloed... dan hoop ik heden nog gena.

'n Beetje ...

Sterven doe je niet ineens, maar af en toe een beetje.

En alle beetjes die je stierf,
't is vreemd,
maar die vergeet je.

Het is je dikwijls zelfs ontgaan, je zegt : Ik ben wat moe.

Maar op een keer,
dan ben je aan
je laatste beetje toe.

Toon Hermans.

Liefste lieve mémé,

De touwtjes van het leven loslaten kon je niet..
Je had de wil om te leven.
Je was een doorzetter, ondanks je ziekte, die jou op het laatst in je bed hield.
Hoe droomde je er niet van om weer te kunnen stappen...
Je was graag thuis met pépé, die jou maandenlang met liefde verzorgde.
Je zag pépé graag en je had hem graag dicht bij jou. Je gaf hem het beste van jezelf.
Je hield ook veel van uw kinderen en je was hen dankbaar om wat ze voor jou deden.
En wij mémé, je kleinkinderen, wij hielden ook van jou.
Bij mémé en pépé Kattestraat konden we thuiskomen. We waren altijd welkom !

We voelen nu een diepe leegte... die niets of niemand zal kunnen opvullen.
We blijven je koesteren mémé, als een kostbare parel.

danken U voor Uw aanwezigheid, Uw gebed

Vader,

Wij waren klein en jij was groot.
De grote held, die alles bood:

Sterk de schouders die ons droegen zacht de hand om in te toeven mild het hart om van te proeven jij ... het antwoord dat wij vroegen.

Wij werden groot en jij plots klein, omdat vaders geen helden zijn.

Eigenwijs gingen wij lopen, maar je schouder bleef ons dragen.
Je zei: "Je mag mij alles vragen, want mijn hart en hand staan open."

Jij ... nu aan de overkant.
Je zegt: "Ik zal er altijd zijn."
We voelen een leegte, jouw heengaan doet pijn.
Je zegt: "Draag zorg voor elkaar, geef elkaar de hand."

† BID GOD VOOR DE ZIEL

van de Heer

Maurits-Feliciaan Dendauw

Echtgenoot van Mevr. Marie-Louise VERHAEGHE geboren te Deerlijk, de 13 december 1922 en godvruchtig overleden, in de Sint-Vincentiuskliniek, te Kortrijk, de 3 november 1969, voorzien van de Heilige Sakramenten der Zieken.

«De Heer heeft mij gezien en onverwacht ben ik opnieuw geboren en getogen.
Hij heeft mijn licht ontstoken in de nacht,
gaf mij een levend hart en nieuwe ogen.
Zo komt Hij steeds met stille overmacht en neemt voor lief mijn onvermogen.»

Dit ogenblik schijnt niet gunstig om te dichten... de wrede werkelijkheid van vandaag maakt brutaal een einde aan alle dromerijen : een jonge man, midden de kracht van zijn leven, een man met een ontembare levensmoed en onvermoeibare werklust, een goede echtgenoot en vader, die maar één verlangen had eindeloos te werken en te wroeten om de zijnen gelukkig te maken, werd door een moorddadige ziekte onbarmhartig en onverbiddellijk om het leven gebracht.

Hij heeft gestreden en gehoopt... tot in de eeuwigheid.

En toch... wat baat bitterheid en wrok tegen dit noodlot dat, juist weer zo'n mens, treffen moest. Dit is de enige uitweg voor mensen die niet geloven.

Wij, die geloven, we weten niet waarom... maar we weten dat Hij het weet, die het heeft toegelaten. Wij zijn niet alleen op de wereld... Hij kent ons bij onze naam en Hij is onze Vader, nu meer dan ooit. Wij begrijpen niet en toch zijn we zeker dat Hij ons de hand boven het hoofd houdt... Zijn hand, dat zijn onze handen, de handen van zijn dierbaren, van zijn vrienden... al die handen die een sterke, vaste, trouwe hand worden door de vaste greep van Zijn Hand die de onze samenhoudt.

En deze hand zal de zijne vervangen... van hem die is heengegaan.

Maurits is heengegaan... en keert niet terug... maar hij is heen-gegaan... de dood heeft hem niet vernietigd... zijn heengaan was een overgaan in het nieuwe leven «waar geen dood meer is, geen smart, geen geween... want al het oude is voorbij». En daarom vatten wij moed, wij, zijn geliefde echtgenote en goede kinderen, zijn familieleden en vrienden... wij vatten moed om voort te leven, onze handen trouw in elkaar, niet alleen vandaag, maar altijd voort, betrouwend op de vaste greep van God, onze Vader, die ons niet loslaat, en in Wie onze goede echtgenoot en vader, rust en vrede heeft gevonden, en liefde genoeg om ons te beminnen vandaag en alle dagen tot in eeuwigheid !

Laten wij allen samen voor elkaar bidden en trouw zijn !

Je liet ons zo graag vliegen. 's Morgens vroeg in je bed de wereld rond, een spelletje waar al je kleinkinderen niet genoeg van konden krijgen tot je armen niet meer sterk genoeg waren om ons boven je hoofd te tillen.

Nancy

Jij en memé namen ons zo vaak mee op reis. Rochfort is ons intussen zo bekend door alle vakanties die we er samen met jullie doorbrachten, mooie boswandelingen maakten en plezier dat we er beleefden. Maar zelfs als we er niet waren dan was je in de weer voor ons door heerlijke sintkoeken of je eigen paaskoeken voor ons te bakken.

Twinky

Je was zo graag met je kleinkinderen bezig. Al van kleins af aan leerde je ons liedjes zingen maar je had je eigen repertoire. Met z'n allen kennen we de vriesman, de kraaien en den bok. Hoe vreemd ze voor ons ook klonken toen je ze ons leerde, zo zal ik ze ook doorgeven aan je achterkleinkinderen zodat ze samen met jou zullen blijven bestaan.

67.9.5 Marc Waelkens, a Distant Blood-relative

67.9.5.0.1 Genealogy Marc Waelkens, shown in Figure 67.109, was born in Waregem on April 12, 1948. He was an archaeologist and professor at Katholieke Universiteit Leuven. He is well-known for his work at Sagalassos in Turkey. The King of Belgium knighted him in 2008. He died on February 21, 2021, almost one year after exchanging information, and the text below was written.
The author is a distant blood relative of Marc Waelkens as follows:
The grandparents of Marc Waelkens are Henri Waelkens and Clementine Declercq (unrelated to the author).
Henri Waelkens is a son of Jean-Baptiste Waelkens (Waregem 1838 - 1909) and Marie Julie Garrez (1842-1906).
Jean Baptiste Waelkens is the son of Jean Baptiste Waelkens senior (Anzegem 1794—Gent 1857) and Barbara Theresia Deplancke (1797-1842).
Jean Baptiste Waelkens senior is the son of Ferdinandus Josephus Waelkens (Waregem 1772—Waregem 1844) and Joanna Regina Vindevogel (1754 - 1835).
Ferdinandus Josephus Waelkens is a son of Ferdinandus Waelkens (Waregem 1738 - Waregem 1738) and Maria Josepha Decostere (1739 - 1813).
Ferdinandus Waelkens is a son of Joannes Waelkens (Waregem 1705 - Waregem 1770) and Maria Joanna Theresia Demeester (1708-1749).
Joannes Waelkens and Maria Joanna Theresia Demeester had another son, Jean Baptiste Waelkens (Waregem 1723 - Deerlijk 1803), who married Maria Josepha Moreels (Otegem 1740 - Deerlijk 1811).
They were the parents of Petrus Antonius Waelkens (Waregem 1777 - Deerlijk 1847).
The latter married Isabelle Rose Malfait (Deerlijk 1777 - Deerlijk 1817).
Their son was Jean Baptiste Waelkens (Deerlijk 1808 - Deerlijk 1868), who married Barbara Theresia Laevens (Vichte 1814 - Deerlijk 1890). The couple had a son, Camille Waelkens (Deerlijk 1852 - Vichte 1927), father of Augusta Waelkens, and great-grandmother of the author.
In other words, Marc Waelkens and the author have common ancestors, Joannes Waelkens and Maria Joanna Demeester. Joannes Waelkens was born on February 28, 1705, at Waregem and died on March 7, 1779, in Waregem. Maria Joanna Theresia Demeester was born at Sint-Baafs-Vijve on February 25, 1708, and died on February 25, 1749, in Waregem.
The reader who is interested in going further back in history will find that Joannes Waelkens is the son of Joannes Waelkens senior (Waregem 1671—Waregem 1738) and Joanna Theresia Impe (1670-1742).
Joannes Waelkens senior is the son of Judocus Waelkens (Waregem 1631—Waregem 1678) and Anna Gossaert (1624-1690).
Judocus Waelkens was born in Waregem on February 13, 1631 and is a son of Jacobus Waelkens and of Marie Lelief.
This section was written with permission from Marc Waelkens; Figure 67.109 is his courtesy. He died at Oud-Heverlee on February 21, 2021, and the author attended a Leuven ceremony on December 3, 2022.

67.9.5.0.2 The Life and Career of Professor Marc Waelkens Marc Waelkens, born in Waregem, Belgium, on April 12, 1948, displayed an early interest in history and archaeology. This interest would shape his life and career, leading him to become one of the most renowned figures in his field. Growing up in Waregem, where the author also attended middle and high school, Waelkens was inspired by the local heritage and ancient artifacts he encountered. His early education in Belgium laid a solid foundation for his future academic pursuits.
Like the author, Waelkens pursued higher education at the prestigious Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (KU Leuven). There, he studied history and archaeology. His passion for uncovering the past was evident in his dedication to his studies and early research projects. He completed his doctoral studies at KU Leuven, focusing on the ancient civilizations of the Mediterranean. His thesis, which examined the trade and cultural exchanges in ancient Anatolia, earned him significant recognition and set the stage for future research endeavors.
After completing his doctoral studies, Waelkens joined the faculty at KU Leuven, where he would spend most of his academic career. He quickly rose through the ranks, becoming a full professor and chair of the Department of Archaeology. His work was characterized by a rigorous methodological approach, combining fieldwork with advanced analytical techniques.
Waelkens is best known for his groundbreaking work at the archaeological site of Sagalassos in Turkey. Sagalassos, an ancient city in the western part of the Taurus Mountains, was a major center of the Hellenistic and Roman periods. Waelkens began his work at Sagalassos in the mid-1980s, and his excavation project soon became one of the most critical archaeological undertakings in the Mediterranean region.
Under Waelkens' leadership, the Sagalassos project revealed a wealth of information about the ancient inhabitants' urban planning, architecture, and daily life. His meticulous excavation techniques and interdisciplinary approach, including collaboration with experts in geology, botany, and bioarchaeology, provided a comprehensive understanding of the site's historical significance. The discoveries at Sagalassos included well-preserved buildings, intricate mosaics, and a vast array of artifacts, all contributing to a deeper knowledge of ancient Anatolian culture.
In recognition of his contributions to archaeology and his significant impact on understanding ancient civilizations, Marc Waelkens received numerous honors throughout his career. One of the most prestigious accolades was his knighthood by the King of Belgium in 2008. This honor acknowledges his outstanding achievements and dedication to the archaeology field.
Waelkens' work also earned him international acclaim. He was invited to lecture at universities and conferences worldwide, where he shared his insights and research findings with colleagues and students. His publications, which include numerous articles and books on Sagalassos and related topics, are considered essential reading for scholars in the field.
Marc Waelkens was a dedicated scholar, mentor, and inspiration to many young archaeologists. His passion for uncovering the past and his commitment to academic excellence left a lasting impression on his students and colleagues. He was known for his generosity in sharing knowledge and his collaborative spirit, which fostered a vibrant academic community around the Sagalassos project.
Waelkens passed away on February 21, 2021, leaving a legacy of scholarly excellence and archaeological knowledge. His contributions to archaeology, particularly through his work at Sagalassos, continue to influence current research and inspire future generations of archaeologists. The information he exchanged and the texts he wrote remain valuable resources for understanding the ancient world.
Marc Waelkens' life and career exemplify the profound impact that dedicated scholarship can have on our understanding of history. His achievements at Sagalassos and his archaeological contributions will be remembered and celebrated for many years.

67.9.6 Ferdinand Waelkens, dissident soldier of Napoleon

According to the French military files, Ferdinand Waelkens was born on May 24, 1780, as the son of Jean Waelkens and Marie Josephe Moreels. He was a conscript of the republic year 9. He was convicted on November 17, 1804 (26 brumaire, an 13) by the court-martial of Hannover (Germany)[1]. We have no further details.

Delving into the church and civil records, we uncover the rich family lineage of Ferdinand Waelkens. He was the son of Jean Baptiste Waelkens (Waregem 1723 - Deerlijk 1803), and Maria Josepha Moreels (Otegem 1740 - Deerlijk 1811). His brother was Petrus Antonius Waelkens (Waregem 1777-Deerlijk 1847). The latter married Isabelle Rose Malfait (Deerlijk 1777-Deerlijk 1817). His brother was Petrus Antonius Waelkens (Waregem 1777 - Deerlijk 1847). The latter married Isabelle Rose Malfait (Deerlijk 1777 - Deerlijk 1817). Their son was Jean Baptiste Waelkens (Deerlijk 1808 - Deerlijk 1868), who married Barbara Theresia Laevens (Vichte 1814 - Deerlijk 1890). The couple had a son Camille Waelkens (Deerlijk 1852 - Vichte 1927), father of Augusta Waelkens, great-grandmother of the author.

67.9.7 Their Acquaintances

67.10 Anna Den Dauw & René Vangheluwe

67.10.1 Anna Den Dauw

Anna Den Dauw is primarily described in Part X as the wife of René Vangheluwe, a descendent of the Desclergues along a maternal line.

Furthermore, as she carries the same mtDNA as the author and is his grandmother, she also appears in Chapter 72.

67.10.2 René Vangheluwe

René Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the son of Zozyma Verhaeghe and Gerard Vangheluwe and as the father of Nelly Maria Vangheluwe. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: and Chapter 69, as the grandson of Maria Nathalie Surmont.

67.11 Nelly Maria Vangheluwe & Maurice Alois Declercq

67.11.1 Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

Nelly Maria Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the daughter of René Vangheluwe and Anna Den Dauw and as the mother of the author.

She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12; Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-granddaughter of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author, as his mother.

Aan ieder straathoek kunnen we God ontmoeten die ons vraagt: "Geef rekenschap„. "Wees bereid want ge weet noch het uur, noch de dag„. "Ik zal komen als een dief in de nacht„ zegt de Heer.

Wat kan ons veiligheid schenken?

Gezondheid, werklust, rijkdom, vreugde voor de opgedane oogst, een grote naam, veel vrienden? Niets van dit alles. IJdelheid der ijdelheden, alles is ijdelheid, tenzij God te beminnen en Hem te dienen.

Wat schenkt ons troost?

Hij was een KRISTEN MAN, die nauwgezet zijn kristelijke plichten volbracht, en God beminde bovenal.

Hij was een VOLKSVRIEND, bereid de last van een ander te verminderen, om het zwaarste en lastigste voor hem op te nemen. - Ware naastenliefde.

Hij was een NAARSTIG MAN, die van de vroege morgen, in dienst van God en zijn familie het bedrijf hooghield. De Heer zal hem zijn loon geven.

Beminde Broeders en Schoonzusters, Gij kent mijn liefde, ik ken uw leed. Mensenwoorden zullen U niet troosten, maar Gods zalvend woord in 't gebed. Aanbidt zijn ondoordringbare schikkingen, en vraagt aan de Moeder Gods, dat ik Maria-congreganist, Haar Hemelvaart in de hemel moge vieren.

67.11.2 Maurice Alois Declercq

Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) is primarily described in Chapter 46 as a descendant of the Desclergues and father of the author. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the son of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-grandson-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-grandson of Clemens Lammens.

67.12 Nico Felicien Declercq & Shirani Olupathage de Silva

67.12.1 Nico Felicien Declercq

Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) is the author of this book and is primarily described in Chapter 47 as a descendant of the Desclergues. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the grandson of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-great-grandson of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as the great-great-grandson of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author. Furthermore, he is equally referred to in Part XII as the husband of Shirani Oluphathage de Silva.

Shirani Olupathage de Silva is first described in Chapter 47.3, as the author's wife.
She is equally referred to, in much detail, in Part XII, and also in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the granddaughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

The ’t Kint Ancestry line

68.1 Introduction

The author senses that this family line may be interesting to investigate further by future generations. They were somewhat mobile and also formed a link with the De Patin family. We traced them back to Waregem, although we still need to exclude a connection with Zwevegem. The ancestry is shown in Figure 68.1.

68.2 Catherine ’t Kint & François Camerteyn

68.2.1 Catherine ’t Kint

The mystery of Catherine’s birthplace adds an intriguing layer to our research. The two potential candidates, one from Zwevegem and the other from Waregem have captured our attention. While the Waregem candidate seems more likely, further investigation is needed to confirm.
Catherine ’t Kint was born in 1618, in Figure 68.2, in Zwevegem as the daughter of Pierre ’t Kint and Antonia de Dievel. Her godfather was Amandus de Dievel, and her Godmother was Catherine de Dievel.
Her parents, Pierre ’t Kint and Antonia de Dievel, were married in Zwevegem in 1614, in Figure 68.3.
Still, Catherine ’t Kint can also be born in Waregem on March 25, 1618, in Figure 68.5, as the daughter of Joannes ’t Kint and Judoca Nolf. If so, it must have been her father Joannes ’t Kint, who was the godfather of her son Jean Camertyn at Waregem in 1640, as shown in Chapter 68.3.1.

68.2.2 François Camerteyn

He was married to Catherine ’t Kint.

68.3 Jean Camerteyn & Judoca Geldof

68.3.1 Jean Camerteyn

He was born in 1640, in Figure 68.6, in Waregem as the son of François Camertyn and Catherine ’t Kint. His godfather, Jean ’t Kint, may have been his grandfather, i.e., Catharina’s father, although more investigations are necessary to be sure. We found a Jean ’t Kint, brother of Catharina, who was married to Judoca Geldof so that the situation might have been more complicated. Potegem Castle, still a landmark in Waregem, is shown in Figure 68.7.

68.3.2 Judoca Geldof

She was born around 1640. She died in 1710, June 22, in Figure 68.8, in Waregem.

68.3.3 Their Marriage

They married before 1667, but not at Waregem.

68.4 Pierre Camerteyn & Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit

68.4.1 Pierre Camerteyn

He was born in 1677 in Waregem, the son of Jean Camertyn and Judoca Geldof. He married Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit and died in 1754 in Waregem.
His life events are shown in Chapter 66.2.13.1.

68.4.2 Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit

She was born in 1680 in Waregem. She was married to Pierre Camertyn, and she died in 1724 in Vichte. Her parents were Ludovic Benoit and Claire Lagodt. She also appears in Chapter 66.2.12.2. Her descendants are also documented there. Her life events are shown in Chapter 66.2.13.2.

68.4.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1703 at Waregem and is shown in Chapter 66.2.13.3.

68.5 Marie Jeanne Camerteyn & Pierre Dewanckele

68.5.1 Marie Jeanne Camerteyn

She was born in 1710 in Waregem as the daughter of Pierre Camerteyn and Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit. She was married to Pierre Dewanckele, and she died in 1779 in Geluwe. Her life events are shown in Chapter 66.2.14.1 and also in Chapter 65.16.1.

68.5.2 Pierre Dewanckele

He was born in 1701 at Geluwe, shown in Figure 68.9. He was married to Marie Jeanne Camertyn, and he died in 1779 in Geluwe. Some genealogists assume that Pierre Dewanckele is (1) the son of Marinus Dewanckere, who, as they believe, is (2) the son of Bertrand Dewanckere (death at Geluwe in 1720) and Judoca de Halewyn (death at Geluwe in 1720) (married at Menen in 1669). However, no evidence for (1) and (2) has been found so far. His life events are shown in Chapter 66.2.14.2 and also in Chapter 65.16.2.

68.5.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1734 in Menen and is shown in Chapter 66.2.14.3.

68.6 Charles Ignace Dewanckele & Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch

68.6.1 Charles Ignace Dewanckele

He was born in 1743 in Geluwe, Belgium, as the son of Pierre Dewanckele and Marie Jeanne Camertyn. He was married to Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch and died in 1794 in Rumbeke, Belgium.
He was a Landed Gentry Farmer and only child. His life events are shown in Chapter 65.16.2.

68.6.2 Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch

She was born in 1751 in Geluwe, Belgium. She was married to Charles Ignace Dewanckele and died in 1831 in Hooglede, Belgium. She was a landowner and rentier. Her Godfather was Jean-Baptiste Stagier, and her Godmother was Anna-Clara Soene. She also appears in Chapter 65 , in particular, Chapter 65.16.1. Her descendants are also reported there.

68.6.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1779 at Geluwe, Belgium, and is shown in Chapter 65.16.3.

68.7 Pierre Charles Dewanckele & Barbara Goddyn

68.7.1 Pierre Charles Dewanckele

He was born in 1789 as the son of Charles Ignace Dewanckele and Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch. He was married to Barbara Goddyn, and he died in 1860 in Hooglede, Belgium.
He was in the military at Napoleon's Grande Armée.
He was a Landed Gentry Farmer.
Pierre Charles Dewanckele is primarily described in Chapter 65, as the son of Charles Ignace Dewanckele and Marie Jeanne Claire Vermeersch.
For the same reasons, he is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 66.2, as the great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit; His life events are shown in Chapter 65.17.

68.7.2 Barbara Goddyn

She was born in 1789 in Hooglede, Belgium. She was married to Pierre Charles Dewanckele and died in 1832 in Hooglede, Belgium. Barbara Goddyn was a farmer and was the daughter of Joseph Goddyn (1754-1824) from Lichtervelde and Anastasie Verstraete (1753) from Hooglede.
Joseph Goddyn was the son of Bartholome Goddyn and Marie Catherine Meersman, married in Lichtervelde in 1743. Bartholome Goddyn descended from a long Goddyn bloodline of farmers and landowners at Lichtervelde dating back to the 1500s with first names 'Roger' alternating with 'Bartolome' and married to the families Ghijsen, Goddyn, and Fiers.
Barbara Goddyn is primarily described in Chapter 65 as the wife of Pierre Charles Dewanckele. She is equally referred to in Chapter 66.2, as the mother to Rosalie Dewanckele and mother in law of Louis François Lesage; Her life events are shown in Chapter 65.17.2.

68.7.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1815 at Hooglede, Belgium, and is shown in Chapter 65.17.3.

68.8 Rosalie Dewanckele & Louis François Lesage

68.8.1 Rosalie Dewanckele

She was born in 1816 in Hooglede, the daughter of Pierre Charles Dewanckele and Barbara Goddyn. She was a farmer, married Louis François Lesage, and died in 1872 in Westrozebeke, Belgium.
Rosalie Dewanckele's life is meticulously chronicled in our research. In Chapter 65, she is introduced as the daughter of Pierre Charles Dewanckele and Barbara Goddyn. Her role as a wife and mother is highlighted in Chapter 64, where she is the wife of Louis François Lesage and the mother of Emile Theophile Lesage. In Chapter 66.2, her lineage is traced back to the great-great-granddaughter of Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit. For a comprehensive understanding of her life, her life events are detailed in Chapter 65.18.1.

68.8.2 Louis François Lesage

He was born in 1813 in Langemark, Belgium. He was married to Rosalie Dewanckele and died in 1877 in Westrozebeke, Belgium.
Louis François Lesage was the son of Jean Lesage, who was born at Staden and lived in Langemark, and of Barbe Thérèse Reynaert from Passchendaele. They married at Passchendaele in 1780. The witnesses were Pierre Lamaire, Louis Reynaert, Joseph Reynaert, and David Reynaert, all farmers.
Louis François Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 65 as the husband of Rosalie Dewanckele.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64 in the de Patin ancestry and Chapter 66.2 as the great-great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit. His life events are shown in Chapter 64.5.1.

68.8.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1844 at Staden, Belgium, and is shown in Chapter 64.5.3.

68.9 Emile Theophile Lesage & Eudoxie Romanie Lammens

68.9.1 Emile Theophile Lesage

He was born in 1857 in Westrozebeke, Belgium, the son of Louis François Lesage and Rosalie Dewanckele. He married Eudoxie Romanie Lammens and died in 1938 in Beselare, Belgium.
Emile Theophile Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 64 as the author's great-grandfather.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit; and Chapter 71 as the son-in-law of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker. His life events are shown in Chapter 65.19 and the chapter on the Lesage ancestry, Chapter 64.

68.9.2 Eudoxie Romanie Lammens

She was born in 1868 in Zonnebeke, Belgium. In 1888, her residence was Passchendaele, Belgium. She was married to Emile Theophile Lesage and died in 1931 in Beselare, Belgium.
Eudoxie Romanie Lammens is primarily described in Chapter 64 as the wife of Emile Theophile Lesage and as the author's great-grandmother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit; and Chapter 71, as the daughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

68.10 Irma Helena Lesage & Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15)

68.10.1 Irma Helena Lesage

She was born in 1905 in Moorslede, Belgium, the daughter of Emile Theophile Lesage (DP12V03DW02L01) and Eudoxie Romanie Lammens. She married Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq and died in 1953 in Kortrijk, Belgium.
Irma Helena Lesage is primarily described in Chapter 45.2, as the wife of Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq and the author's grandmother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter of Emile Theophile Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; and Chapter 71, as the granddaughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.

68.10.2 Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15)

He was born in 1906 in Wielsbeke, Belgium, the son of Ernest Constant Declercq and Marie Elodie Devenyn. He married Irma Helena Lesage and died in 1963 in Deerlijk, Belgium.
Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15) is primarily described in Chapter 45 as a descendant of the Desclergues and grandfather of the author.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the husband of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the husband of Irma Helena Lesage, and as a great-great-great-great-great-grandson-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the husband of Irma Lesage, who was a great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; and Chapter 71, as the grandson-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

68.10.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1932 in Beselare, Belgium, and is shown in Chapter 45.3.

68.11 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) & Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

68.11.1 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16)

Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) is primarily described in Chapter 46 as a descendant of the Desclergues and father of the author.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the son of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the son-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 69, as the great-grandson-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-grandson of Clemens Lammens.

Nelly Maria Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the daughter of René Vangheluwe and Anna Den Dauw and as the mother of the author.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1 as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the daughter of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 69, as the great-granddaughter of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as the great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author, as his mother.

68.12 Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) & Shirani Olupathage de Silva

68.12.1 Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17)

Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) is the author of this book and is primarily described in Chapter 47 as a descendant of the Desclergues and also in Part X.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the grandson of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the grandson of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 69, as the great-great-grandson of Marie Nathalie Surmont; Chapter 71, as the great-great-grandson of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author.
Furthermore, he is also referred to in Part XII, as the husband of Shirani Oluphathage de Silva.

68.12.2 Shirani Olupathage de Silva

Shirani Olupathage de Silva is first described in Chapter 47.3, as the author's wife.
She is equally referred to, in much detail, in Part XII, and also in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the granddaughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the granddaughter-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 69, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and Chapter 71, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

The Surmont - de Croock Ancestry line

69.1 Introduction

The Surmont ancestry line is depicted in Figure 69.1. This genealogy marks the first studied by the author, initially known to him in his childhood through his great-grandparents, Gerard Vangheluwe and Zozyma Verhaeghe, and later his foster father and granduncle, Pierre Vangheluwe.

The author learned that this branch was historically referred to as kroekskens and barbiers in Deerlijk, piquing his curiosity about the origins of these nicknames. This chapter elucidates the etymology of these terms, revealing that barbier originated from Jan Vangheluwe and Marie-Nathalie Surmont, while kroekskens derived from the Surmont family through their De Croock ancestors.

Tracing the genealogy of the Surmont family proved challenging due to the numerous Surmont clans and their frequent name changes to Sulmont, Sulmon, Surlemont, or Desurmont, influenced by location and era. The research required an open-minded approach and a comprehensive study of Surmont families from Gent to Kortrijk, focusing on mobility within a 30 km radius between the Leie and Schelde rivers. The term kroeksken is found in the stories of René Declercq from Deerlijk, illustrated in Figure 69.2.

The author expresses particular sympathy for two ancestors in this branch who died in their early 40s in the same year, a tragedy that left their children seeking refuge in the economically stable Deerlijk. The emotional toll of abandoning young children is profound, and the author reflects on how these ancestors might find solace in knowing their descendants are commemorated in this work.

After a prolonged hiatus due to the unavailability of documents, the investigation resumed and identified the 17th-century origins of the Surmont family in the Sulmon clan from Kaster-Kerkhove in the Flemish Ardennes, near the ancestral roots of families such as Den Dauw, D' Huyvetter, and Devenyn. It is accurate to state that half of the author's Flemish origins are between Leie and Schelde, with the remaining half in the region enclosed by Kortrijk, Menen, Ypres, and Roeselare. The family integrated with de Croock (hence kroeksken) with ancient roots in Gent. Unlike many farmers in the author's ancestry, the Surmont ancestors were professionals: weavers, carpenters, veterinarians, horse harness makers, etc. Their mobility likely correlated with their professions, moving to where work was available. Notably, a self-educated veterinary professional combined this work with her husband's barbershop, leading to the dual names defining this clan.

The arrival of this family branch in Deerlijk must be understood in the context of Deerlijk's activities. Despite its small size, the village was an industrialized textile center replete with pubs and intellectual exchange opportunities. Early-established schools supported the industry, fostering an environment that produced or attracted several writers and intellectuals such as Verriest, Declercq, and Renier. Combining these activities contributed to Deerlijk's cultural and intellectual richness.

69.2 François Surmont & Joanna Veys

Families such as Surmont or Sulmon, Veys, and Notebaert frequently appeared in Kaster in the early 17th century. Although we have yet to dig deep into these families due to time constraints, we must locate their early origins in that village. Given the French-sounding name of Surmont, they were probably Catholics from the French-speaking South of Flanders who moved to Kaster after the religious conflicts in the late 1500s. François Surmont died in 1682, in Figure 69.3, in Kaster, and Joanna Veys in 1693, in Figure 69.4.

69.3 Judocus Surmont & Catharina Notebaert

69.3.1 Judocus Surmont

The roots of Surmont are found in Kerkhove, shown in Figure 69.5, and Kaster. However, we suspect they may have migrated to that area shortly before the earliest traces, for instance, just after the religious troubles in the 16th century.

The second marriage of Judocus Surmont ('Sulmon') is shown in Figure 69.6. Judocus Surmont died in 1739, in Figure 69.7, in Kerkhove.

In Chapter 69.3.2, we find that Catharina Notebaert, first wife of Judocus Surmont and our ancestor, passed away in 1707. Judocus remarried Maria Vande Meulebroucke in 1739, and she died in 1746 in Figure 69.8.

69.3.2 Catharina Notebaert

Catharina Notebaert was born at Kaster in 1659, in Figure 69.9. She married Judocus Surmont in 1686 and was his first wife. She died in 1708 at Kerkhove.

69.3.3 Their Marriage

The couple married in Kaster in 1686, in Figure 69.11, but would soon move to neighboring Kerkhove.

69.4 Louis Joseph Surmont & Petronilla Verhaeghen

69.4.1 Joseph Louis Surmont

Joseph Louis Surmont was born in Kerkhove in 1704, in Figure 69.12. He would find his bride in neighboring Elsegem, where he died in 1775, in Figure 69.13.

69.4.2 Petronilla Verhaeghen

Petronilla Verhaeghe was born at Elsegem in 1725, in Figure 69.14. Her parents were Egidius Verhaeghen and Petronilla Vansteenbrugghe. She died in Elsegem in 1785, in Figure 69.15. Elsegem is shown in Figure 69.16.

69.4.3 Their Marriage

They married in Kerkhove in 1750, in Figure 69.17.

The couple, Joseph Louis Surmont and Petronilla Verhaeghen, had the following children: Anne Marie (Kerkhove, July 14, 1765), Marie Anna (Kerkhove, October 30, 1762), Isabelle Rose (Kerkhove, September 15, 1761, who passed away at the age of 3 months), Pierre Amand (Kerkhove, January 28, 1760) in Chapter 69.5, Jacques Louis (Kerkhove January 7, 1759, who passed away at the age of 77 days), Maria Theresia (Kerkhove, November 19, 1750).

69.5 Pierre Amand Surmont & Marie-Jeanne De Meulemeester

69.5.1 Pierre Amand Surmont

Pierre Amand Surmont was born in Kerkhove in 1760, in Figure 69.18. He died in Kruishoutem in 1818, in Figure 69.19. Kruishoutem is shown in Figure 69.20.

69.5.2 Marie-Anne De Meulemeester

Maria Anna De Meulemeester was born in 1761, in Figure 69.21, in Wortegem. She died in Kruishoutem in 1829 in Figure 69.22.

69.5.3 Their Marriage

They married in Wortegem in 1788 in Figure 69.23.

69.6 Pierre François Surmont & Marie Thérèse de Croock

69.6.1 Pierre François Surmont

He was born in 1790, in Figure 69.25, at Petegem, shown in Figure 69.24, and baptized in Wortegem, shown in Figures 69.25 and 69.26. He would marry Marie Thérèse de Croock. The couple died at an early age in the same year.
Their children moved with their grandfather to Deerlijk. Pierre François Surmont died at Bevere in Oudenaarde in 1833 in Figure 69.27.

69.6.2 Marie Thérèse de Croock

69.6.2.1 Her connection to Van Flandern

Common sense and statistics indicate that the de Croock family is from Ghent-Eeklo. DNA analysis shows links with close family members of the astronomer Thomas Van Flandern (Cleveland, Ohio, 1940 - Seattle, Washington, 2009), shown in Figure 69.41, indicating that they are related to the author through their ancestor, Tom van Flandern. Further investigation is necessary to make conclusive statements. However, the indications point to Van Welden and De Croock as the link with Van Flandern in the West and North-West of Ghent, such as Eeklo, Bassevelde, and Boekhoute. Charles Van Vlaanderen was the first immigrant of this family line, who arrived in New York around 1880. [1] 69.6.2.1.1 Astronomer Thomas Van Flandern Thomas Van Flandern was a notable American astronomer born in Cleveland, Ohio, on June 26, 1940. His early fascination with the cosmos led him to pursue an education in astronomy, culminating in a bachelor's degree from Xavier University in 1962. He furthered his academic journey at Yale University, earning a master's degree in 1964 and a Ph.D. in astronomy in 1969.

Van Flandern's professional career began at the United States Naval Observatory (USNO), where he joined the Nautical Almanac Office. During his tenure at the USNO, he focused on improving the accuracy of celestial predictions and ephemerides, which are essential for navigation and space missions. His work significantly contributed to the refinement of lunar and planetary ephemerides, ensuring more precise data for various applications, including space exploration.
One of Van Flandern's key contributions was his involvement in developing the "Nautical Almanac" and the "Astronomical Almanac," publications critical for navigational and astronomical purposes. His expertise in celestial mechanics and astrometry was widely recognized, and he played a vital role in the international efforts to synchronize and improve the accuracy of timekeeping and astronomical data.
In addition to his work at the USNO, Van Flandern had a deep interest in the fundamental questions of astronomy and cosmology. He was particularly intrigued by the mechanics of the solar system and the nature of gravitation. His research extended into areas such as the analysis of lunar occultations, which provided valuable insights into celestial bodies' precise positions and movements.
Van Flandern was an active member of the astronomical community, frequently sharing his knowledge and findings through publications, conferences, and public lectures. He was known for his ability to explain complex astronomical concepts easily, making him a popular figure among his peers and the general public.

[1] Research has, however, excluded a certain Charles Van Vlaenderen, born in Boekhoutte in 1857. Therefore, Charles Van Vlaanderen, the forefather of Tom Van Flandern, must be a different one.

After leaving the USNO in the early 1980s, Van Flandern founded the Meta Research organization to explore and support innovative ideas in astronomy and related fields. Under his leadership, Meta Research promoted various projects and theories, encouraging open scientific inquiry and critical thinking.
Thomas Van Flandern's legacy in astronomy is marked by his dedication to advancing our understanding of the universe through meticulous research and his commitment to improving the precision of astronomical data. He passed away on January 9, 2009, in Seattle, Washington, leaving behind a legacy of scientific contributions that continue to influence the field of astronomy.

69.6.2.2 Her Life

She was born in 1791, in Figure 69.30, in Huysse. She was the daughter of Pierre François de Croock (Zingem 1751 - Deerlijk 1841) and Marie Thérèse Balderdoot (from Wannegem and died at Ooike in 1837).
Pierre François de Croock was a son of Pierre Jean de Croock and Josephine Vanwelden. Zingem can be seen in Figure 69.29.
Marie Thérèse de Croock died in Bevere in 1833, in Figure 69.32.

69.6.2.3 Her Parents

Her parents, Pierre François de Croock and Maria Theresia Balderdoot raised her children after their parents died in 1833.
The whole family moved to Deerlijk after the death of Marie Thérèse in 1837. At Deerlijk, they were called de kroekskens because of their family name.

69.6.2.3.1 Pierre François de Croock Pierre François de Croock was born in Huyse in 1764 in Figure 69.33, and he died in Deerlijk in 1841 in Figure 69.34.
Note that 'de Croock' is a family name originating from East Flanders. There is indeed an area in Ghent nowadays called de krook located between two rivers already known in the Middle Ages for trade. It is known that the 'de Croock family fought on the side of the 'Lelyaards' during the revolt organized by Jacob van Artevelde.
When her father died in Deerlijk, far from Ooike, where they originated from, his grandchildren provided incorrect information about his ancestors: They said that his father was Pierre Jean instead of Jacques and that his mother was Josephine Van Welden instead of Jossine (Judoca) Van Welden. His age was also wrong, though we could correct it by checking the document on which he had reported the death of his wife.

69.6.2.3.2 Maria Theresia Balderdoot Maria Theresia Balderdoot was born in 1767, in Figure 69.35, in Ooike, where she died in 1837 in Figure 69.36.

69.6.2.3.3 Her Parents' marriage Pierre François De Croock and Maria Theresia Balderdoot married in Huyse, shown in Figure 69.31, in 1786, in Figure 69.38.

69.6.3 Their Marriage

Pierre François Surmont and Marie Thérèse de Croock married in 1822, in Figure 69.39, in Ooike.

MOONWATCH TEAM

On October 4, 1957 the Soviet Union surprised the world with the launching of Sputnik I, the world's first artificial satellite. The Cincinnati Astronomical Society's Moonwatch Team, organized in 1956 as part of its participation in the International Geophysical Year, was immediately activated by the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory (S.A.O.). First observations of satellites were made December 15, 1957. On these grounds, from 1957 to 1964, the Cincinnati Moonwatch Team, principally under the leadership of Tom Van Flandern (1940-2009), spent thousands of man-hours optically observing and recording data to verify the positions of satellites in space. Many times the team compiled the best satellite tracking records in the world. Because of this work The Moonwatch Team and the Cincinnati Astronomical Society were recognized by the S.A.O. as one of its leading teams worldwide.

69.7 Jean Baptiste Surmont & Susanne d' Huyvetter

69.7.1 Jean Baptiste Surmont

He was a horse harness manufacturer and merchant. He was born in Ooike on May 6, 1825, in Figure 69.42, and died in Deerlijk on February 16, 1900, in Figures 69.43 and 69.44.

He came to Deerlijk as a minor with his grandfather, Pierre François De Croock. He lost both his parents in 1833 when he was eight years old and was further raised by his grandparents. When his grandmother died, his grandfather Pierre François De Croock moved with him to Deerlijk. Jean Baptiste became a successful merchant and manufacturer. Despite his family name, Surmont, he received the nickname Kroekske in Deerlijk because his grandfather was de Croock. His son-in-law was Vangheluwe and had the nickname Barbier, whence both nicknames ran through this clan until after WWII.

69.7.2 Susanne d' Huyvetter

69.7.2.1 Her Life

Susanne d' Huyvetter is shown in Figure 69.47. She was born in 1837, in Figure 69.46, in Ingooigem. She was a veterinarian of the practice and descended from a long bloodline at Ingooigem, with marriages with Windels, Van Hulle (DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.13.3 on page 1602), Demeester, Saelens and de Noreille. Her husband was a barber; therefore, the family was nicknamed barbiers at Deerlijk, shown in Figure 69.48.

The combination of offering veterinary services and that of a barber was not unusual. Barbers in those days were also responsible for blood-letting and simple medical treatments such as human or animal tooth extractions. This is why there was traditionally a red post outside barber and hairdresser's shops: it symbolized the pillars on which red cloths used during blood-letting practice were dried. Such a post is known in many countries as a barber's pole.

The Barber tradition ran through the Vangheluwe family. For instance, Joannes Vangheluwe was a Barber at Nieuwmolenhoek in Deerlijk and died in 1853. He was the grandfather of V. François Vangheluwe and son of Emiliana Vangheluwe.

69.7.2.2 Her Relatives

69.7.2.2.1 Ursula D' Huyvetter Susanne D' Huyvetter had a sister Ursula D' Huyvetter, born at Ingooigem on January 11, 1832.

69.7.2.2.2 Jean Baptiste D' Huyvetter Jean Baptiste D' Huyvetter was born in 1842, in Figure 69.49, at Ingooigem. He married Julie Vandenheede in Kaster in 1870, in Figures 69.50 and 69.51. Kaster and Ingooigem are shown in Figures 69.52 and 69.53.

69.7.2.2.3 Georges D' Huyvetter Georges D' Huyvetter married Françoise Vanhulle at Ingooigem in 1826, in Figures 69.54 and 69.55. DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.

69.7.3 Their Marriage

Their wedding was in 1858, in Figures 69.56 and 69.57, in Harelbeke, Belgium.

69.8 Marie Nathalie Surmont & V. François Vangheluwe

69.8.1 Marie Nathalie Surmont

Marie Nathalie Surmont is shown in Figure 69.59. She was born in Deerlijk on March 18, 1873, in Figure 69.58, and died in Deerlijk on February 15, 1955, in Figure 69.59.

Her brother and only sibling was Eduard Camille Surmont, a horse harness manufacturer and merchant at Deerlijk who appears in works (e.g., Harmen Riels, 1913, p. 6) of poet René Declercq (Deerlijk 1877 - Sint Maartensdijk 1932) as his friend Kroeksken.

The nickname Kroeksken originated from the ancestors of Marie Thérèse de Croock, as described above. Eduard Camille Surmont was born in the same year as René Declercq and they went to school together at Deerlijk. Marie Nathalie Surmont was married to V. François Vangheluwe.

It may be worthwhile highlighting Eduard Camille Surmont, brother of Marie-Nathalie Surmont, a little better here. His marriage is shown in Figure 69.60. He was a member of the Sint-Elooisgilde (Guild of Saint Eloise) and appeared in some of the works of poet René Declercq because they had both been born in the same year and were friends.

René Declercq called him Kroeksken in his works. In reality, people either called him Kroekie or Kroekske in the local dialect. He had had Poliomyelitis as a child, and as a result, one leg was shorter than the other. Those days, people were rather harsh when using nicknames.

From 'Harmen Riels,' written by René Declercq in 1913, we can cite (in Flemish) the following paragraph, which expresses a flavour of how René Declercq wrote tales. The citation places the appearance of manke Kroeksken in the correct context of what Harmen (i.e. René Declercq) undertook as a child in Deerlijk. The text brings contemporary children and their language during Marie-Nathalie Surmont's youth back to life.

'Dat was niet wel, Harmen, niet schoon van u. En het was ook niet braaf dat ge aan het hoofd van een bende medeschavuiten draafdet rondom Kabijntjes berdenkot, scherend onder zijn venster weg, waarachter het dreigde met zijn kromme sikkel. Maar gij waart al voorbij, en schateren, tieren en tergen weder ! En gemeen was het dat ge een een heelen korf puiten uitstortted over de halve deur van Trezeke-mijn-Bezeke, bij wie ge later zoo dikwijls gingt zitten met Jan Veyt en Fontje Soete pijpkens dampen in de duik, al luisterend naar haar ronkend spoelewiel, haar spookvertellingen en rijke rare liedekens. Scherfstukken hebt ge laten schijveren, oneerbiedige, naar het grauwgroene standbeeld van Plaetsier op het kerkhof en manke Kroeksken hebt ge opgestoken over het tralieschot, en sneeuw opgegeven om den rijmelaar warm te kleeden in de versche wat ; en als ge over de witte haag een zwarte soetane gewaar werdt, hebt ge stillekens den bijs gestoken, en over den muur heen hebt ge Kroeksken zien klauwieren en schruwelen, totdat de goedzakkige pastor het zelf verlossen moest. Doch erger kon het met u afloopen toen ge een krieksteen gooidet op het oorlelleken van bult Lamoen die u achternazat met zijn moordenaarsmes ! Rappe beenen hadt ge, dat is bekend.'

Leon Defraeye was a friend of Gerard Vangheluwe, son of Marie-Nathalie Surmont. They were born in the same year and went to school together. From 'Geschiedenis en folklore van Deerlijk' published by Leon Defraeye in 1942 we can cite (in Flemish):

'Harmen was een kwaperterik gelijk alle andere jongens, hij en andere kapoenen stortte eens een heelen korf puiten uit boven de halve deur van Trezeke-mijn-Bezeke, winkelierster. Met Jan Veyt ging Harmen Riels veel luisteren naar de spookvertelsels van Trezeke en naar haar rare liedekens. Hij gooide met scherfstukken naar het grauw groene standbeeld van Plaetsier op het kerkhof en manke Kroeksken stak hij over het traliewerk om den rijmelaar met sneeuw te bedekken. Toen hij een zwarte soetane zag naderen (de pastoor) liet hij Kroeksken in den brand zoodat de pastoor het venthe moest helpen om eraf te komen.'

69.8.2 V. François Vangheluwe

69.8.2.1 His life

He was born in 1872 in Figure 69.61, in Deerlijk, on December 23, and was married to Marie Nathalie Surmont. There is a legacy that he was complex because of his short height. He overcompensated by sometimes defending himself quite aggressively when he deemed it necessary. In Figure 69.62, the reader can find that he was exactly 160 cm tall, which was indeed shorter than average but not abnormal. He voluntarily became a Chasseur 'a Pied (comparable to modern commando troops and shown in Figure 69.63); therefore, he was a strong man.

His father was Joannes Vangheluwe, a farmer at Deerlijk, who was married to Frederica Herman, daughter of Ivo Herman and Victoria Vandeputte. Joannes Vangheluwe was born in 1830 and was the son of Joseph Vangheluwe and Maria Constancia Vanhoutteghem. Joseph was born at Deerlijk in 1806 and was a son of Jean-Baptiste Vangheluwe, born at Deerlijk in 1777, and Maria Anna Dewaele, born at Desselgem in 1779.

Jean-Baptise Vangheluwe was the son of Amelia Vangheluwe and an unknown father. The Vangheluwe family, i.e., the paternal

van

Vrouw MARIE SURMONT
weduwe van Heer Victor Vangheluwe

geboren te Deerlijk, de 18 Maart 1873, en aldaar godvruchtig overleden de 15 Februari 1955, gesterkt door de laatste H. Gerechten.

De ouderdom is een kroon van eer, zo hij op de weg der gerechtigheid gevonden wordt.

Deze vrouw was eenvoudig, rechtvaardig en godvrezend; ze had een grote genegenheid tot het gebed. Maria was haar troost gedurende haar leven, haar hoop en haar vreugde in het uur der dood. Zij is gestorven met de gerustheid en onderwerping van een christelijke ziel.

Zalig zijn zij die voortdurend het uur der dood voor ogen hebben. Gelukkig en voorzichtig zijn zij die trachten zo te leven als ze willen bevonden worden in het uur der dood.

Vaartwel, dierbare kinderen en kleinkinderen, bemint God boven al en dient Hem trouw, vereert vooral Gods lieve Moeder. Dank om uw goede zorgen, vooral aan u, Julia, die mij dag en nacht hebt bijgestaan. Bidt voor vader en mij opdat we eensdaags malkander mogen weerzien bij God.

Zoet Hart van Maria, wees mijn zaligheid.
Akten van Geloof, Hoop en Liefde.
R. I. P.

De kinders en kleinkinders van wijlen Heer en Vrouw Victor Vangheluwe-Surmont, De familie Surmont,

De familie Vangheluwe, danken om uwe gebeden en blijken van deelneming.

For many generations, his father was a barber (hence the family's nickname, 'de barbiers'). He was recruited on March 5, 1892. On April 21, 1892, he joined the 1st Chasseurs à pied, in Figure 69.63, as a voluntary soldier, number 174576. He was released from his military obligations on October 1, 1905.*

BID GOD VOOR DE ZIEL
VAN DE HEER
GUSTAAF DESCHEEMAEKER
weduwnaar van Mevrouw
PHARAILDE VANDE KERCKHOVE
geboren te Deerlijk op 29 augustus 1884 en haastig overleden te Oostrozebeke, op 21 januari 1966.

In de stilte van de nacht is vader van ons heengegaan zachtjes... uit vrees iemand te storen. Nooit heeft hij in zijn lang en vruchtbaar leven iemand kommer willen berokkenen en dat was ook zijn laatste wens. Maar dat het zo vlug en zo onverwachts zou geschieden heeft vader waarschijnlijk nooit durven denken. Steeds is het uur van ons afsterven nader dan we denken ; onze jeugd gaat voorbij, wij worden grote en weldra oude mensen vóór we het merken of willen toegeven. Mochten wij zo leven dat we steeds bereid zijn uit dit aardse leven te vertrekken.

Sedert verschillende jaren was Gustaaf noodgedwongen op rust gegaan, maar had het buitengewoon lastig om zich los te rukken van het vlasbedrijf dat hij met taaie werkkracht had opgebouwd. Zijn grootste en laatste voldoening bestond erin van in gedachten en met raad het bedrijf te volgen.

Hoewel hij, sinds jaren, in zijn huis alleen was, leefde hij er verre van eenzaam. Aanhoudend was hij omringd door de tederste zorgen van Zita. Gedurig kreeg hij bezoek van zijn kinderen. waarop hij met een vaderlijke fierheid mocht terugblikken. Hoe blij was hij niet toen iemand hem een bezoek bracht en dan was het het ogenblik om eens rustig te vertellen van een rijk en diep verleden, maar al vulg voegde hij eraan toe dat die tijd voorbij is en dat wij ons nu moesten aanpassen aan de moderne tijd. Ja, op zijn hoge ouderdom stond hij open voor vernieuwingen die... verbeteringen betekenden.

Zijn diepe kristelijke levenszin, zijn betrouwen op Gods Voorzienigheid, zijn stoere werkkracht zijn het rijke erfdeel dat zijn nakomelingen in ere moeten houden.

Dierbare kinderen en kleinkinderen : 't viel me hard van u afscheid te nemen. Ik dank u voor uw genegenheid en nimmer afgevende bezorgdheid. Van u allen draag ik de beste herinneringen mee. Bidt veel voor moeder, mij en alle familieleden die reeds bij de Heer zijn.

Akte van geloof, hoop en liefde.

Heer en Mevrouw André Descheemaeker-Vanluchene en kinderen, Heer en Mevrouw Honoré Descheemaeker-Mourant en dochter, zijn kinderen en kleinkinderen ;

De families Descheemaeker - Vande Sompele en Vande Kerckhove - Poelvoorde, danken U om uw gebeden en blijken van deelneming.

ancestors of Amelia Vangheluwe, were farmers in Deerlijk in 1572 and had probably lived in the village even long before[2][3]. V. François Vangheluwe died in Deerlijk on January 10, 1951, according to Geneanet ®.

69.8.2.2 His Relative Octavie Vangheluwe

Octavie was the auntie of V. François Vangheluwe. She was a daughter of Joseph Vangheluwe (1805-1855) and Marie-Constance Van Houtteghem (1801-1850). She had the following siblings: Joannes, Lucia, Ivo, Agnelys, Cordula, and Franciscus. Her brother Joannes (Deerlijk 1830 - Vichte 1901) was married to Frederica Herman (Waregem 1832 - Deerlijk 1882) and they were the parents of V. François Vangheluwe (Deerlijk 1872), described in Chapter 69.8.2, who married, in 1895 to Marie Nathalie Surmont (1873-1955). The son of V. François Vangheluwe and Maria Nathalie Surmont was Gerardus Vangheluwe, described in Chapter 69.9, and is the author's great-grandfather.
Octavie Vangheluwe is known in Deerlijk for the miracle in 1884, found in Chapter 49.13.6. On April 2, 1884, Octavie Vangheluwe, born on May 1, 1845, and who would die on May 7, 1893, lived in the Leegstraat (Shown in Figure 69.64, nowadays René Declercqstraat), had been in bed for 2 two and a half years, was suddenly healed and showed herself to the neighbors to prove that she was cured. The entire village was very much under the impression of this miracle. The miracle was associated with the chapel 'Kapel-ter-Ruste.' We refer to Chapter 49.13.6 for more information. An acquaintance is shown in Figure 69.65.

69.8.2.3 His Sibling Valerie Vangheluwe

She is the originator of the family branch, which would live in Waregem as Vynckier and remained in good contact with the family throughout the 20th century. Valerie Eudolie Vangheluwe married in 1894, in Figures 69.66 and 69.67. Her husband was Amadé Usmare Vynckier, and some documents of their children are shown in Figures 69.68, 69.69 and 69.70.

69.8.2.4 His Sibling Emile Vangheluwe

On the military registration of Gustave Felix Vangheluwe, son of Emile Vangheluwe, in Figure 69.71, we discovered that Emile was married to Sylvie Leonie Eeckhout. This is important to note because Chapter 48.9.5.3 described how Marie Elodie Eeckhout was connected to the Verhaeghe family. It's perfectly possible that they were related.

69.8.2.5 His Paternal Ancestry Line

The name-line begins with Joannes Baptiste Vangheluwe in 1777, in Figure 69.72. The father was officially not known. Therefore, Joannes Baptiste Vangheluwe started a new bloodline with a name not his but his mother's. We do not know the circumstances, but in general, such is considered a high treason of the blood. It means the author's mother's name should, in fact, not be Vagheluwe, but different.

69.8.3 Marriage and Family

V. François Vangheluwe and Marie Nathalie Surmont married in 1895, in Figures 69.73 and 69.74, in Deerlijk. They had the following children: Michel, André and Gerard. The latter is described in Chapter 69.9. Figures 69.75 and 69.76 show the military registrations of Michel and André, in the family memory engraved as nonkel Michel and nonkel André.

danken U voor de vriendschap, gebeden en uw aanwezigheid bij dit afscheid.

De Heer heeft een goede vrouw tot zich teruggeroepen.
Vervuld van dankbaarheid voor wat haar leven is geweest, geloven wij dat zij ons over de dood heen nabij blijft.
Haar leven was schoon en verdienstelijk, eenvoudig en werkzaam, menslievend en behulpzaam, zo was Leonie.

Gezegend met een goede gezondheid wist moeder een zeer hoge ouderdom te bereiken.
Dagelijks heeft zij haar paternoster gebeden en er was ook de dagelijkse babbel met de buren.
Zij was heel dankbaar - ''Ge zijt fraai'' - en ze was blij met de vele kleine attenties die haar geschonken werden door haar kinderen, klein- en achterkleinkinderen.

Haar eenvoudig voorbeeld van goedheid, hard werken, van bezorgdheid en meeleven met andere mensen zullen wij blijvend in ons hart meedragen.
God wij danken U voor al het goede in haar leven.

In Uw handen geven wij nu moeder af.
Wij weten dat zij in goede handen is.
Laat haar nu Uw barmhartigheid ondervinden en voor altijd bij vader zijn.
Dat zij ruste in vrede.

69.9 Gerard Vangheluwe & Zozyma Zulma Verhaeghe

69.9.1 Gerard Vangheluwe

69.9.1.1 Introduction

Gerard Vangheluwe, depicted in Figure 69.80, is a notable ancestor of the author and is also mentioned in Part X as the spouse of Zozyma Zulma Verhaeghe. During World War I, he was subjected to forced labor under German occupation, working in the forests near Charleville-Mézières and Sedan. In recognition of his acts of sabotage against the Germans while in captivity, King Albert I awarded him an honorary medal. Born in Deerlijk in 1898, as illustrated in Figure 69.77, Gerard attended school with Leon Defraeye and Joseph Ovelacq, prominent figures in Deerlijk. Following his internment as a forced laborer during World War I, Gerard Vangheluwe served as a Belgian soldier, as shown in Figure 69.78, and participated in the military occupation of Germany after the war.

69.9.1.2 His Youth

Gerard Vangheluwe's youth was filled with the charming and adventurous spirit typical of a small-town boy. One anecdote he often recounted, which has become legendary within the family, involved a daring escapade at seven or eight. One day, young Gerard decided to climb the church tower of Deerlijk. Although he had no fear of heights throughout his life, he could not descend the tower on this occasion. The local fire department had to be summoned to rescue him, creating a story that echoed through the decades. However, it has largely faded from the collective memory of the current generation.

The author has pondered Gerard's motivation for this climb, speculating that it was likely influenced by a high opening in the tower known as a rave hole. This aperture was used to display flags during festivities and offered a magnificent view. The poet René Declercq reminisced[4] about his youth, describing how he and a friend ascended the tower to smoke a pipe and enjoy the splendid panorama of Deerlijk. It is plausible that young Gerard sought the same breathtaking view. However, the difference in Gerard's adventure was his unconventional approach; family lore suggests he climbed the exterior of the tower, which led to his predicament.

The military registrations of his contemporaries further illustrate the charm of Gerard's youth, Leon Defraeye, and Joseph Ovelacq, shown in Figures 69.81 and 69.82. Images of Gerard's schooldays are displayed in Figures 69.83 and 69.84, and the streets he roamed are also depicted in Figure 69.84. Like many young boys in Deerlijk, Gerard's early life was filled with joy and simplicity until the shadow of war loomed in the summer of 1914.

In Figure 69.85, we see a photograph of Gerard Vangheluwe taken early during World War I, before he was coerced into forced labor by the Germans in southeastern Belgium. His lifelong friend, Leon Defraeye, is also featured in Figure 69.85, symbolizing the enduring bonds formed in their idyllic youth.

69.9.1.3 WWI, Ziviel Arbeiter Bataillon 3, nr 186

69.9.1.3.1 Introduction The story of Gerard Vangheluwe from Deerlijk during World War I is a gripping narrative of survival, resilience, and the brutal realities of war. Like many others, Gerard was thrust into a situation that tested the limits of human endurance and spirit. This account delves into the dramatic events that shaped his life and those around him, drawing on the broader context of World War I to provide a comprehensive understanding of his experiences. It is helpful to first check the map of his Journey to Sedan in Figure 69.89.

On October 18, 1916, the tranquil town of Deerlijk was plunged into chaos. The German occupiers ordered all fit young men to report to the town hall. The tension was palpable as families bid tearful farewells to their sons, husbands, and brothers, knowing the uncertain and dangerous future.

69.9.1.3.2 The Selection Among the 250 men selected was Gerard Vangheluwe, a young man whose life would be irrevocably changed. The selection process was fraught with controversy. Mayor Renier's refusal to provide the names of the unemployed, seen as an act of defiance, led to arbitrary choices that sowed seeds of discord in the community. Gerard was convinced he was targeted due to personal vendettas, found himself among the chosen, and his fate was sealed by subjective biases rather than objective need.

Mayor Renier stood in his office, the weight of the decision heavy on his shoulders. He looked out the window at the gathered crowd, faces etched with fear and anxiety. Turning to his aide, he sighed,

"I cannot hand over this list. To do so would be to betray my people."

"But, sir," the aide replied, "the Germans have threatened to execute those who do not comply. Are we not putting our citizens at greater risk?"

Renier shook his head. "Better that we choose our own, even if the process is flawed. At least we can try to protect those who would suffer most."

69.9.1.3.3 The Farewell The scene on October 22 was heart-wrenching. Mothers wept, fathers stood stoically, and siblings clung to their departing brothers. The entire village turned out to witness the departure, their shouts of encouragement and resistance echoing in the crisp autumn air.

"Don't work," "Don't sign anything," and "Remember your brothers at the Yser River," they cried, urging the men to hold fast to their principles. Gerard stood in the doorway of his home, his mother clutching his arm.

"Please, Gerard, be careful,"

she whispered, tears streaming down her face. His father, a stoic man, placed a hand on his shoulder.

"You are strong, my son. Remember that. And remember us."

His sister hugged him.

"Come back soon, Gerard," she pleaded.

He knelt, ruffling her hair.

"I will, little one. I promise." The men were transported to Kortrijk, the journey filled with uncertainty and fear. Gerard and his companions were acutely aware that they might be forced into labor that would aid the enemy, a thought that gnawed at their consciences.

69.9.1.3.4 The Kortrijk Barracks

Upon arrival at the Kortrijk military base, shown in Figure 69.88, the men were stripped of their identities, assigned numbers, and given caps emblazoned with 'ZAB 3,' marking them as members of the Ziviel Arbeiter Bataillon 3. Gerard became number 186. For three days, they were confined to the barracks, their every move monitored by German soldiers armed with bayonets.

The barracks were cold and unwelcoming, starkly contrasting to the homes they had left behind. The men were packed into cramped quarters, the air thick with the smell of sweat and fear.

Gerard looked around at his fellow detainees.

"We must stay strong,"

he said quietly to the men around him.

"They want to break us, but we cannot let them."

One of the men, Jules, nodded.

"You're right, Gerard. We stick together. We survive together."

69.9.1.3.5 The Departure

On October 25, under the cover of darkness, the men were herded to the train station. The atmosphere was tense as they were loaded into cramped, foul-smelling beast wagons. The journey took them through familiar and foreign landscapes, each mile taking them further from home and deeper into the unknown.

The train ride was long and grueling. Packed tightly into the wagons, the men struggled to find space to sit or lie down. The smell of unwashed bodies and fear permeated the air.

Gerard leaned against the wall of the wagon, trying to catch some sleep. Beside him, a young man named Henri whispered,

"Where do you think they're taking us?"

"I don't know," Gerard replied.

"But we must be ready for anything."

69.9.1.3.6 Arrival in France

After an arduous journey, the train finally arrived in France. Gerard and his fellow Deerlijkers were separated into groups and sent to various locations. Gerard ended up in Sedan, a place that would test his mettle and resolve.

69.9.1.3.7 Life in Sedan

In Sedan, the men were subjected to grueling labor. Gerard, tasked with chopping wood, found the work backbreaking and the conditions harsh. Food was scarce, and survival depended on rationing meager supplies. Gerard's slender frame, once a sign of fragility, became his saving grace. Unlike the burly workers who perished quickly, Gerard's ability to stretch his provisions allowed him to endure.

A typical day in Sedan began before dawn. The men were woken by the harsh sound of a whistle, signaling the start of another day of labor. They were given a meager breakfast, usually a piece of stale bread and some watery soup, before being marched to the forest to begin their work. Gerard swung his axe with steady determination, his hands blistered and sore. Each strike of the wood felt like a small victory, a testament to his will to survive.

"Keep going, Gerard," he muttered to himself. "Just one more day."

69.9.1.3.8 A Brush with Death

One of the most harrowing episodes in Gerard's account involved a daring theft. Driven by hunger, he sneaked into a German meat store and stole a salami.

It was a cold, moonless night when Gerard decided to steal the salami. He moved silently, avoiding the guards as he slipped into the store. His heart pounded in his chest as he grabbed the salami and turned to leave, only to come face-to-face with a German soldier.

"Was tun Sie hier?" the soldier demanded.

Thinking quickly, Gerard replied, "Ya Russkiy."

The soldier hesitated, then shrugged and walked away, leaving Gerard to make his escape.

69.9.1.3.9 The Brutal Realities

The camp in Sedan was notorious for its brutality. Gerard was beaten by a guard, an injury that would plague him for life. The men were subjected to inhumane conditions, their days marked by relentless toil and their nights by fitful sleep. The toilet was a simple tree branch, a stark reminder of their dehumanized state.

The beating happened on a cold winter's day. Gerard had been working for hours, exhausted, when he collapsed from fatigue.

Figure 69.103: The author is on Zozyma Verhaeghe's lap, with Gerard Vangheluwe on the other side. In the back are the author's parents, Maurice Declercq and Nelly Maria Vangheluwe. The picture in the back is René Verhaeghe. The old radio was the first radio in the neighborhood, while the clock on the wall had a warm and pleasing sound. There was a smell of butter, coffee, and tobacco in the living room and perfectly baked bread made by baker Casteele. (Declercq de Silva Archive)

Seeing him on the ground, a German guard approached with a scowl.
"Aufstehen!" he barked, kicking Gerard in the ribs.
Gerard struggled to his feet, but the guard wasn't satisfied. He struck Gerard with the butt of his rifle, the blow landing squarely on his chest. Gerard fell to the ground, gasping for breath, the pain searing through his body.
The guard sneered. "You work, or you die."

69.9.1.3.10 The Aftermath and Legacy Despite the hardships, Gerard survived the ordeal. His resilience and cunning saw him through the darkest days. After the war, he, like many others, received a diploma recognizing his suffering and endurance. However, the memories of those years lingered, casting long shadows over his life.

Gerard's story, though not formally documented by him, was passed down through generations. His accounts, corroborated by others who shared his fate, paint a vivid picture of the trials faced by forced laborers during World War I. His great-granddaughter, Joko Vanmeerhaeghe, confirmed vital details, ensuring that his legacy lives on.

Gerard's diploma after the war was a small piece of paper, shown in Figure 69.90, but it represented a world of suffering and endurance. It was a testament to his strength and resilience, a symbol of the hardships he had overcome.

Gerard Vangheluwe's experiences during World War I are a testament to the human spirit's capacity to endure unimaginable hardship. His story is a vital piece of the larger tapestry of the war, offering insights into the lives of those caught in its grip. As historians, we must strive to preserve and honor these narratives, ensuring that the sacrifices and resilience of individuals like Gerard are never forgotten.

Joseph Ovelacq, a friend of Gerard Vangheluwe, had a brother, André, who died in the military in 1914, as shown in Figures 69.87. Figure 69.92 shows additional items and memorabilia from Gerard Vangheluwe's time in forced labor.

Gerard Vangheluwe passed away in 1978, precluding the possibility of the author's direct questioning. Consequently, the author sought to obtain all available information from family members who recalled the narratives shared by Gerard in earlier times. Adhering to scientific rigor, the author endeavored to verify all details meticulously. To ascertain Gerard Vangheluwe's presence in Sedan, the author consulted Joko Vanmeerhaeghe, the great-granddaughter of Aloïs Bijttebier (identified as no. 507 in Figure 69.91). She corroborated that her great-grandfather had been in Sedan, substantiating the account. It is acknowledged that war veterans and forced laborers were sometimes prone to embellishing their stories over time. While it is conceivable that Gerard may have amplified certain aspects, he consistently reiterated the mentioned facts without significant exaggeration.

De Heer Leon DEFRAEYE

geboren te Deerlijk op 6 juni 1899 en er haastig overleden op 22 maart 1977, gesterkt door het Ziekensakrament
van de H. Kerk.

Ereschepen van Deerlijk - Ereburger van Zoutenaaie - Conservator museum Pauselijke Zouaven Kortrijk - Folklorist - Sekretaris Oud-strijders 1914-18 - Vereremerkt met Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice - Ridder in de Kroonorde - Talrijke militaire en burgerlijke eretekens - Erevoorzitter, sekretaris en lid van talrijke verenigingen.

Hoe oud hij ook mocht worden, voor zijn naastbestaanden en vrienden is zijn dood te vroeg gekomen. Een leven zo boordevol werk en zorg om zijn gezin en het algemeen welzijn als hij geleid heeft is een zegen voor de gemeenschap. De geschiedenis van Deerlijk en omgeving zal niet kunnen geschreven worden zonder zijn naam en faam als oud-strijder, gemeentelijk mandataris, heemkundige, beoefenaar van de plaatselijke geschiedenis en verzamelaar van kostbaar erfgoed te vermelden. Wie denkt aan Pieter-Jan Renier, Deken Lenaert De Bo, Hugo Verriest en René De Clercq, denkt meteen aan Leon Defraeye.

Wij dragen de herinnering aan de levendige, in alles belangstellende kunstenaar, want dat was hij in het hart, in ons mee als een voorbeeld van veelzijdige en open menselijkheid. Zij zijn talrijk degenen die hij baatloos geholpen en dienst bewezen heeft, ofschoon er zoals het gaat op de wereld wel zullen geweest zijn die dat daags daarna reeds vergeten hadden. Een minderheid toch, want de overledene heeft ook veel vriendschap en achting terug gekregen. Moge hem dat een vreugde en bemoediging zijn geweest.

Als persoonlijk denkend man heeft Leon Defraeye zijn eigen overtuiging gevormd. Zij omsloot zoals bij de grote streekgenoten wier bewonderaar hij was geloof in God, hoop op de uiteindelijke opstanding van zijn volk en liefde voor de mensen, wie en hoe zij ook waren. Dat alles heeft hij verenigd met veel begrip en bereidheid tot samenwerking, ook met humor gewonnen op tegenheid en beproeving.

Laten wij zijn nagedachtenis in eer houden en wie in een geest van geloof zich met hem verbonden weet, bidden voor zijn eeuwig heil. Met het besef dat hij evenmin voor Vrouw en Kinderen, Familieleden en Vrienden onverschillig zal zijn en voor hen ten beste zal spreken om hun geluk. Zo wordt niemand aan zich zelf en zijn lot over gelaten, maar getroost en gesterkt in zijn aardse leven, door de verwachting en het licht van een onsterfelijk bestaan.

geboren te Wortegem-Petegem op 21 mei 1912

Lid van de Vriendenkring Derde Leeftijd Statiewijk.

"Waar is Mémé nu naartoe ?" vraagt een achterkleinkind wanneer hij de kamer binnenkomt waar zijn overgrootmoeder zoveel jaren heeft gerust en geslapen. Wat antwoord je op die vraag ? Want zelf heb je er ook moeite mee. Want je mist je moeder ook. De kamer waar ze zoveel tijd, ziek te bed heeft gelegen, is leger geworden. Je beseft dat vader nu alleen zal achterblijven, dat hij zijn gesprekspartner zal missen. En nog veel meer, dat samenzijn dat was uitgegroeid tot een sterke verbondenheid doorheen al die jaren, doorheen die samen gedragen verantwoordelijkheid voor het gezin en voor de winkel. Je herbeleeft de tijd dat je thuis was als kind en toen moeder ervoor zorgde dat de schaarse vrije dagen uitgroeiden tot een feestelijk gebeuren. Hoe zij hield van het leven en die levensvreugde uitzong in vele liederen. Zonder het echt te bemerken werd ze ouder en kwam de verzwakking en geraakte ze stilaan aangewezen op de hulp van vader en de diensten van de thuisverzorging en verpleging. En toch komt haar afsterven nog een beetje onvoorzien omdat je dat moment altijd voor je uitschuift.

"Waar is Mémé nu naartoe ?" Het is moeilijk uit te leggen aan een kind omdat ook wijzelf de vraag zo moeilijk kunnen beantwoorden. We zeggen wel dat ze naar de hemel is, maar dan bedoelen we meer een situatie, een toestand dan de ene of andere plaats. Dan denken we eerder dat haar pijn en zwakte voorgoed voorbij zijn. Dat ze nu een vreugde mag ervaren waar wij hier op aarde alleen maar kunnen van dromen. Dat God haar gelukkig maakt omdat ze het verdiende.

Beste Marcel, kinderen, kleinkinderen en achterkleinkinderen, medewerkers van thuiszorg : dank voor je hulp, je aanwezigheid, je bezoeken, voor je woorden van bemoediging en sterkte. Zo hebben jullie mijn levensavond kleur gegeven.

Uw aanwezigheid, gebed en blijken van medeleven zijn voor ons een steun waarvoor wij u danken :

De volheid zijner jaren bereikt hebbende is hij, van krachten uitgeput, in een gezegenden ouderdom gestorven.
Gen. XXV.

Hij was een brave christen die Godsdienst en Kerk met hert en ziel aangekleefd was. Hij heeft den goeden strijd gestreden, den schat van het Geloof bewaard en de Heer zal hem de kroon der onsterfelijkheid geven.
II Tim. 4. 7.

De goede gevoelens zijner ziel verwierven hem, binst zijn leven, het vertrouwen zijner Medeburgers en de algemeene achting. Eenvoudig, minzaam, dienstveerdig te allen tijde, zocht hij eenieder te bevredigen. Hij wilde de vriend zijn van zijn volk, een ware Burgervader : nooit viel de opoffering hem te zwaar, noch de arbeid te vermoeiend. Alléén, iets ontzeggen was boven zijn macht. Zóó is zijn veertigjarig burgemeesterschap bekroond met algemeen rouwbeklag.

Gansch de bevolking beweent hem ! (I Mach.) Van God en de menschen bemind, zal zijne gedachtenis in zegening blijven.
Wijsh.

Komt, Heiligen Gods, hem tegen : Gij Engelen des Heeren, komt hem te gemoet : onthaalt zijne ziel en draagt haar voor het aanschijn des Allerhoogste. Rit. rom.

Dierbare Bloedverwanten, vaartwel, God loone uwe liefdevolle zorgen ; helpt mij nog door uwe gebeden ; en Gij allen die mij gekend en bemind hebt, blijft mij bij God indachtig.

Allerh. Hert van Jesus, ons toekome uw rijk!
300 dagen aflaat.

Zoet Hert van Maria, wees mijne zaligheid!
300 dagen aflaat.

gesterkt door de genademiddelen
van de H. Kerk.

Bestuurslid van de Zivielarbeiders.

Een goede vader en grootvader is van ons heengegaan.
Een zo plots afscheid doet ons pijn ;
graag hadden wij hem nog wat woorden willen spreken, woorden van liefde en genegenheid,
van vriendschap en dank.
Maar doorheen dit droeve afscheid willen wij het beeld van een schoon leven ophangen.
Vader was een goed mens met een liefdevol hart, wij konden met hem omgaan als met een vriend, iemand die je altijd mag nemen op zijn woord, iemand die je door dik en dun kan vertrouwen.
Want zo was vader ook voor ons en voor anderen :
Hij zag in ieder mens een betrouwbare vriend.
Hij was graag onder de mensen ;
ze noemden hem een joviale man die zo gemoedelijk kon zijn.
Vader heeft in zijn leven hard gewerkt, naast vreugden zijn ook tegenslagen
zijn deel geweest.
In oorlogstijden werd hij gedwongen in den vreemde te werken.
Die 22 maanden hebben een diepe stempel gedrukt op zijn verder leven ;
hij kon er uren over praten.
Hij aanzag het als een grote plicht « er bij » te zijn telkens als één van zijn lotgenoten ten grave werd gedragen.
Dierbare echtgenote,
Wij zijn altijd gelukkig geweest met elkaar, méér dan 50 jaar waren wij verbonden in lief en leed.
Wees God dankbaar daarvoor.
Ik blijf over U waken.
Dierbare kinderen en kleinkinderen, dank U wel voor al die genegenheid en al die huiselijke gezelligheid die ik samen met moeder heb mogen ondervinden in onze ouden dag.
Goede vrienden en geburen, vaart allen wel en blijft mij gedenken.

Om uw gebeden en blijken van deelneming
danken U :

Zozyma Verhaeghe, zijn echtgenote ;

Gerard Vangheluwe's military registration is shown in Figure 69.78, on page 1430. Images from that period can be seen in Figures 69.93, 69.94 and 69.95.

69.9.1.5 Life and Hobbies

As a child, the author was very much intrigued by the pigeon-house left when Gerard died. For several years the pigeons remained and, later, the author started his own pigeoneering hobby until he went to study in Leuven. Several times he raced on Barcelona, but it's hardly possible to combine modern life with sedentary pigeoneering. Gerard hardly ever visited a pub. Instead, he liked to invite people at home to drink something and chat the whole evening. One of his favourite visitors was the butcher nearby (Marcel Van Ryckeghem), who came almost every weekend. Still, from time to time, he could not refuse an invitation. One evening, in the winter of 1964-1965, he attended a party of someone who retired from the army. It was frozen and very foggy. He returned through de Gavers, a shortcut, and got stuck in a cart track and fell into the icy Gaverbeek Creek. It was pitch dark, misty and freezing. He was soaking wet and got out of the stream with incredible difficulty. When he did not retrieve his bike and had no orientation, he started to run to keep warm. Eventually, he ended up in a house in Stasegem-Harelbeke, where the residents coAs with many persons in this book, the memories of Gerard Vangheluwe are vividly clear concerning certain events, while others remain shrouded in the mists of time. Often, a sequence of photographs speaks volumes more than an attempt to reconstruct a life through words. Some impressions of Gerard can be seen in Figures 69.96, 69.97, 69.98, 69.99, 69.100, 69.101, 69.102, and 69.103.
A profound love marked Gerard's life for simple yet fulfilling pastimes.
Among his many hobbies, pigeoneering was a passion that shaped much of his leisure time. The pigeon-house he left behind after his death fascinated the author as a child. For several years, the pigeons continued to inhabit this dovecote, and later, the author adopted this hobby until his academic pursuits in Leuven took precedence. Gerard's pigeons were not merely for pleasure; he was actively involved in pigeon racing, a pursuit requiring dedication and patience. Despite the challenges of modern life, Gerard managed to race pigeons on long-distance routes such as Barcelona, an endeavor that highlighted his commitment and love for the sport.
Socially, Gerard was a man who cherished the warmth of home and the company of friends over the bustling atmosphere of pubs. His home became a welcoming haven where he hosted evenings filled with conversation and camaraderie. One of his frequent visitors was Marcel Van Ryckeghem, the local butcher, who came almost every weekend. These gatherings were a testament to Gerard's hospitable nature and ability to foster meaningful connections.
However, Gerard was open to occasional outings. One notable event occurred on a frosty, foggy evening in the winter of 1964-1965. Gerard attended a retirement party for an army acquaintance. He faced an unexpected peril when he chose a shortcut through de Gavers on his way home. The night was pitch dark and misty, and Gerard found himself stuck in a cart track, eventually falling into the icy waters of Gaverbeek Creek. Soaked and disoriented, he struggled to extricate himself from the frigid stream. Gerard resorted to running to stave off the cold, but his bike was lost, and he had no sense of direction. His resilience and determination saw him through this harrowing ordeal until he found refuge in a house in Stasegem-Harelbeke, where the residents contacted his family, who then came to his rescue. This incident underscored Gerard's tenacity and the sheer force of will that defined his character.
Through his hobbies and lifestyle, Gerard Vangheluwe exemplified a spirit of warmth, resilience, and dedication. His legacy, as captured in these memories and anecdotes, offers a glimpse into a life richly lived and deeply cherished by those who knew him.uld phone home. He was consequently picked up. He could have died that night.

69.9.1.6 Their Acquaintances

Gerard Vangheluwe has always been a very welcoming and liked person. He had numerous friends but was never seen entering a pub, except perhaps at WWI commemorative events or pigeon racing. Some acquaintances are shown in Figures 69.104, 69.105 and 69.106.

69.9.1.7 His Death

When Gerard Vangheluwe passed away, he received the honors typical for war veterans. Impressions and documents are shown in Figures 69.107, 69.108 and 69.109.

69.9.2 Zozyma Zulma Verhaeghe

She was a haute couture tailor who specialized in wedding dresses. She was a sister of Maurice Florimond Verhaeghe (Harelbeke February 15, 1892), who was killed as a soldier during WWI on September 28, 1918, on the battlefield of Langemark-Houthulst (Rank: Solder 2kl OV, Unit A.B.L., nr 134/1210, 4 Karabiniers.), as described in Chapter 48.9.5.4. His body has never been found. He received the Victory Medal and the Croix de Guerre.

Zozyma Verhaeghe is primarily described in Part X as the daughter of Marie Louise De Vos and Theophile Verhaeghe. She is the author's great-grandmother. He remembers her very well, and he was alongside her bed when she died in 1981.

69.9.3 Their Offspring

69.10 René Vangheluwe & Anna Den Dauw

69.10.1 René Vangheluwe

René Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the son of Zozyma Verhaeghe and Gerard Vangheluwe and Nelly Maria's father.

He is referred to in Chapter 67 as the husband of Anna Den Dauw.

69.10.2 Anna Den Dauw

Anna Den Dauw is primarily described in Part X as the wife of René Vangheluwe, a descendent of the Desclergues along a maternal line.

Being a 'Den Dauw,' she is also listed in Chapter 67 and Chapter 72 in the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author as his grandmother.

69.11 Pierre Frans Vangheluwe & Jeanette Leona Verbrugghe

69.11.1 Pierre Frans Vangheluwe

69.11.1.1 Introduction

Pierre Frans Vangheluwe (1939-1991), depicted in Figure 69.111, played a significant role in the author's upbringing when his parents were preoccupied with other commitments. His importance in this narrative parallels the author's grandfather, his eldest brother. From a sentimental perspective, Pierre was akin to a brother to the author's mother, Nelly Maria Vangheluwe, thus positioning him as an uncle figure to the author. His placement in this book is multifaceted, reflecting his profound impact on the author's formative years, serving as a steadfast figure upon whom the author relied.

Pierre Vangheluwe was the son of Gerard Vangheluwe and Zozyma Zulma Verhaeghe, as well as the grandson of Maria Nathalie Surmont. His influence extends into Part X of this book. Pierre was married to Jeanette Verbrugghe, who continued her role as a foster mother and later as a grandmother following his passing.

The author considers himself privileged to have been partially raised by such an extraordinary granduncle, who regarded him as a foster son. Pierre was inherently a philosopher, sparking the author's interests in history, travel, politics, and existential inquiries. Despite the author ultimately pursuing a career in physics and engineering, he maintains a profound appreciation for the subjects that Pierre introduced him to. Pierre's extensive travels, including visits to countries like Sri Lanka, instilled in the author a deep respect for diverse cultures and peoples, irrespective of race, nationality, or religion.

Pierre Vangheluwe was a man of integrity, possessing excellent diplomatic skills and high moral standards. His political views were aligned mainly with Socialist ideals, yet he also held Royalist sympathies. Whether he believed in God or was an atheist remains ambiguous; perhaps such distinctions are inconsequential for men of true righteousness. As the youngest child in his family, Pierre was close in age to the author's mother, creating a sibling-like bond between them and their younger brother, who was also partially raised alongside Pierre. Consequently, although technically the youngest, Pierre functioned more as a middle child, caring for his younger 'siblings.'

Pierre has always enjoyed discovering new places, cultures, and people. The picture with the author was taken in Senegal in 1981 at a Mauretanian restaurant. Pierre taught the author how to swim in Morocco (Hotel Solazur in Tanger). In 1983, we see both swimming in Tunisia. For Pierre, swimming was never close to the beach but in deep water. Here, he was swimming with the author not far from the shore of Sousse. (Declercq de Silva Archive)*

Al te vroeg moeten we afscheid nemen van een sterke, moedige man, Pierre.
Een slepende ziekte waartegen hij hard gevochten heeft, is hem fataal geworden...

Hij hield van reizen,
van Marokko en Sri Lanka,
en hij kon zo enthousiast vertellen.
Maar bovenal was Pierre een ware "vriend" van mensen, die zich voluit jeunde in het gezelschap.
En hij hield zielsveel van de kinderen...

Heer Jezus,
Gedenk in Uw goedheid het werken en zorgen van Pierre, zijn lijden en strijden tot het laatste moment.
Hij heeft zijn kruis gedragen, zonder klagen, zonder verwijten.
Geef hem nu voorgoed een plaats in Uw Rijk van liefde en vrede...

Pierre's aspiration to become a teacher was curtailed by circumstances that interrupted his education. This setback, however, always maintained his kindness and enthusiasm for engaging with others. Pierre was a philosopher at heart with a wide array of interests. A self-taught polyglot, he was fluent in English and French and conversant in German and Italian. He was also a skilled chess player and harbored a profound love for children and a commitment to their education.

This book acknowledges and honors Pierre Vangheluwe's contributions, reflecting his profound and lasting impact on the author's life.

69.11.1.2 His Youth

During his school years, Pierre Vangheluwe's intelligence was quickly recognized by his teacher, Meester Frans Viaene (who passed away in 2015 at 91). Mr. Viaene promoted Pierre a year ahead of his peers, frequently encouraging him with the belief that he could achieve anything he set his mind to. After World War II, several families in Deerlijk opted to send their children to public schools rather than Catholic ones.

Consequently, Pierre attended the Rijksmiddenschool in Waregem, where he excelled and prepared for high school (Atheneum).

However, a significant issue arose: Pierre was too young to officially receive his diploma, which was granted as a courtesy rather than a right.

Known for his strong sense of justice, Pierre was in trouble after protesting against a school employee who had disrespected female students. This protest led to the refusal of his diploma. He would have needed to repeat a year in middle school to obtain the necessary certificate to proceed with his education.

Despite his teachers recognizing his academic potential, pressing matters at home required Pierre to leave school, a temporary measure that unfortunately became permanent, marking a devastating turn in his educational journey.

Throughout his life, Pierre maintained a close friendship with Marcel Demeyere, who is mentioned in this book's acknowledgments. Marcel remained in touch and sympathized with Pierre's situation.

Figures 69.112, 69.113, 69.114, and 69.115 provide visual insights into Pierre's youth, capturing the essence of his early years and the challenges he faced.

69.11.1.3 Military Service: A Sailor in the Belgian Marine

Pierre's love for people, nature, and swimming found a harmonious blend during his service with the Belgian Marine in 1958. Stationed in the harbor of Ostend, Pierre's military service was a significant period that shaped his character and reinforced his passions. The Belgian Marine, known for its rigorous training and demanding duties, provided Pierre with an environment where he could physically and mentally thrive.

Life in the Belgian Marine involved a strict regimen that focused on discipline, physical fitness, and maritime skills. As a sailor stationed in Ostend, Pierre was part of a strategic naval force responsible for patrolling the Belgian coastline, ensuring maritime security, and participating in various national and international missions. The harbor of Ostend, a bustling port city, was a crucial base for naval operations and training exercises.

Pierre's daily routine included intensive navigation, seamanship, and combat readiness training. He and his fellow sailors were

As a child, Jeanette was an excellent Banjo player. Her Parents' house in Wielsbeke was near 'Hof van Brussel' and in the suburb of Molsten. tasked with maintaining the ships, performing drills, and staying prepared for any emergencies at sea. Despite the demanding nature of military life, Pierre found joy and solace in the marine environment. The sea, with its vastness and unpredictability, was a source of inspiration and a reminder of nature's grandeur.

His passion for swimming, which he nurtured during his naval service, became a lifelong pursuit. Pierre's swimming skills were a recreational activity and a crucial aspect of his military training. He took great pride in offering swimming lessons to children, passing on his love for the water to the next generation. Among those who benefited from Pierre's teaching, the author learned to swim under his guidance in Morocco. This foundation led the author to win several medals and achieve remarkable feats in swimming, given his young age, including earning two 1500 m diplomas in one afternoon at the Deerlijk swimming pool.

Swimming, for Pierre, was more than a skill; it was a passion intertwined with his identity as a sailor. His military service with the Belgian Marine, depicted in Figure 69.116, was a defining period that impacted his life. It instilled in him a sense of pride and discipline, a love for the sea, and a commitment to teaching and helping others, which he carried with him long after his naval days were over.

69.11.1.4 Their Marriage

Pierre married Jeanette Verbrugghe, his auntie's neighbor, in Wielsbeke. They both adored children but never had one of their own. The author became like a foster son to them. Some impressions are presented in Figures 69.116 and 69.117.

69.11.1.5 A Globe Trotter

Pierre Vangheluwe harbored a profound passion for travel and a genuine desire to discover the world and continually expand his horizons. This love for exploration was not just about visiting new places; it was an insatiable curiosity about different cultures, landscapes, and the diverse features of humanity. Accompanied by his wife Jeanette, who shared his enthusiasm, Pierre embarked on numerous journeys, transforming himself into a true globe trotter. From 1980 onwards, the author joined them on these adventures, creating lifelong memories and a deep appreciation for the world's beauty and diversity.

This book contains a vivid collection of photographs documenting the myriad places they visited, including Portugal, Senegal, Morocco, Tunisia, and Sri Lanka. Each destination offered Pierre a unique opportunity to immerse himself in its culture, engage with its people, and absorb the distinct characteristics of the nation. He reveled in conversations in multiple languages, connecting with locals and fellow travelers alike. His linguistic skills, honed through self-teaching, allowed him to communicate effectively and foster meaningful relationships wherever he went.

Pierre's travels were more than just sightseeing; they were immersive experiences. He delighted in the sensory richness of each place—feeling the heat and humidity of tropical climates, smelling the spices in bustling markets, and hearing the myriad sounds of different environments. His journeys celebrated the world's diversity, and he relished every moment spent learning about new customs, tasting exotic foods, and exploring historical sites.

Between travels, Pierre maintained his connections with numerous international friends through letters, sharing stories, and keeping the bonds strong despite the distances. His correspondence was a testament to his enduring friendships and his genuine interest in the lives and cultures of people around the globe. He radiated this sense of humanism onto the author, and it shaped his life story.

Pierre's travel experiences vividly brought to life through the photos in this book (as shown in Figure 69.118), capture only a fraction of the richness of his adventures. To honestly convey the essence of his travels, one would need to evoke the sounds, smells, and atmospheres of the places he visited. While a book is limited to pictures and words, it serves as a window into Pierre's world of exploration, offering a glimpse of his boundless enthusiasm for discovering the wonders of our planet.

His deep respect marks Pierre Vangheluwe's legacy as a world traveler for different cultures, his joy in engaging with people from all walks of life, and his unwavering passion for exploring the unknown. His journeys left an indelible mark on those who accompanied him, the author in particular, and inspired many others to look beyond their horizons and embrace our vast, beautiful world.

69.11.1.6 His Death came too Soon

Pierre Vangheluwe passed away in 1991 with the author by his side. In his final moments, he looked the author in the eyes and, with an attempt to speak, departed for his Nirvana. His wish was to be cremated, as is customary in India or sometimes in Sri Lanka, a practice that was still uncommon in Belgium at the time. This poignant period is depicted in Figures 69.119 and 69.120, capturing the sorrow and loss felt by those who knew and loved him.

The author's sadness was profound, as Pierre was a guiding figure and a source of inspiration and joy. The sorrow for a life that ended too soon is palpable; Pierre's character, marked by kindness, wisdom, and an unquenchable thirst for knowledge and adventure, left an enduring legacy. His passing left a void that was felt deeply, a stark reminder of the fragility of life and the loss of a remarkable person.

Pierre always advised the author not to cry upon his death but to smile, celebrating their shared life rather than mourning his departure. Perhaps this book, written with fond memories and deep respect, can be seen as a smile—an homage to Pierre's life and his indelible impact on those around him. Thirty years after his death, this book is a testament to his enduring spirit and the love he spread during his lifetime.

Pierre's last wish, communicated to his wife in the days before he died, was for the author to continue his education and fully realize his academic potential. Honoring this heartfelt request, the author pursued his studies with determination and passion, ultimately achieving a professor position in the United States. This accomplishment is a fulfillment of Pierre's dream, a testament to the influence of his foster father's guidance and encouragement. While the author's inherent passion for science and scholarly achievements drove his success, the memory of Pierre's hope and belief in his potential was a powerful motivator, weaving a thread of purpose and dedication through his academic journey.

69.11.2 Jeanette Leona Verbrugghe

69.11.2.1 Introduction

Jeanette Leona Verbrugghe is the wife of Pierre Vangheluwe. With her husband and alone long after his death, she served as a foster mother to the author when his parents were too busy with other matters. She is equally referred to in the Part X as the daughter-in-law of Zozyma Verhaeghe and Gerard Vangheluwe.

Her parents, Gerard Verbrugghe and Maria Van den Abeele, are described in Chapter 77.

As Mark Twain said, 'Action speaks louder than words but not nearly as often...'

Indeed, this person's actions prove that actions speak louder than words. Still being with us, hopefully, for many more years to come, a eulogy is avoided, and instead, a depictive story is told here and throughout this book.

69.11.2.2 Her Youth

69.11.2.3 Their Marriage

Impressions are found throughout this book. Two additional images are shown in Figure 69.121.

69.11.2.4 A Globe Trotter

Jeanette has traveled worldwide with her husband Pierre and, from 1980 onward, with the author. The examples shown in this book are only the tip of the beautiful iceberg. Some memories are shown in Figures 69.122 and 69.123.

69.12 Maurice Alois Declercq & Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

69.12.1 Maurice Alois Declercq

Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) is primarily described in Chapter 46 as a descendant of the Desclergues and father of the author.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the son of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the son-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the great-grandson of Clemens Lammens.

69.12.2 Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

Nelly Maria Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the daughter of René Vangheluwe and Anna Den Dauw and as the mother of the author.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12; Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the daughter of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 71, as the great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author, as his mother.

69.13 Nico Felicien Declercq & Shirani Olupathage de Silva

69.13.1 Nico Felicien Declercq

Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) is the author of this book and is primarily described in Chapter 47 as a descendant of the Desclergues and also in Part X.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the grandson of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2 as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the grandson of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 71, as the great-great-grandson of Clemens Lammens; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author.
Furthermore, he is also referred to in Part XII as the husband of Shirani Oluphathage de Silva.

69.13.2 Shirani Olupathage de Silva

Shirani Olupathage de Silva is first described in Chapter 47.3 as the author's wife.
She is equally referred to, in much detail, in Part XII, and also in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the granddaughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the granddaughter-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 71, as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens.

Chapter 70

The Side-Branch of de Patin de Langemarck

70.1 Introduction

This branch could also be called 'the Mare Liberum branch'. In Chapter 65, we describe our ancestors' 'de Patin' branch.
Along that branch, we found that the children of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy were: Pierre de Patin (DP12a), Philippe de Patin (DP12b), Jacques de Patin (DP12c), Marie de Patin (DP12d), Adrienne de Patin (DP12) and Hubert de Patin (DP12e). Here we continue with the descendants of Philippe de Patin (DP12b). Indeed, we descend from Adrienne de Patin (DP12), whereas the descendants of Philippe de Patin (DP12b) are described in this chapter. We focus primarily on the line from Philippe de Patin (DP12b) to Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yyy), in Chapter 70.10, who passed away in 1888. One of the persons in this particular branch is Charles Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1), in Chapter 70.6, who has played an essential role in the history of Belgium.
To include all known side branches of this illustrious family, we have logically used codes behind each name as in a family tree. However, the sequence of persons appearing as sub-chapters is somewhat independent of that code and may need clarification. It's because we had no other option: in a book where this branch is considered a side branch, it looks better to present the different personalities linearly rather than parallel. However, a graphic tree has been added here and there to maintain clarity. We have used several sources to write this chapter, including civil and church records, genealogy books, and documents in our archive. The branch finds its roots in the deep south of West Flanders, and in Cambresis, it should not be confused with families carrying a similar name in Bruges.
Le Carpentier has, indeed, not been able to relate to any of the Patin families described in this book to the Pattyn family that inhabited the city of Bruges.

70.2 Philippe de Patin

Philippe de Patin (DP12b) was, just like our ancestor Adrienne de Patin (DP12) in Chapter 65.13, a child of Pierre de Patin (DP11) and Marie Douchy. He was born in Menin on January 20, 1637, and was baptized in the parish church of St-Vast, in Figure 70.1. He was the Lord of Terbeke, etc.
He married Anne Vermeersch (of noble blood). Anne Vermeersch was a sister of Marinus Vermeersch, in Chapter 65.13, our ancestor, who married Adrienne de Patin (DP12), Philippe de Patin's (DP12b) sister. He would consequently marry Joanna Duthoo.
Philippe de Patin (DP12b) and Anne-Thérèse Vermeersch had the following children: Pierre de Patin (DP12by1), Philippe de Patin (DP12by2), Monique de Patin (DP12bx1), Marie de Patin (DP12bx2), Anne de Patin (DP12bx3), Philippine de Patin (DP12bx4) and Josephine de Patin (DP12bx5). The death, at Bixschote, of Philippe de Patin (DP12b) on September 8, 1720, and his second wife Joanna Duthoo on September 15, 1741, is shown in Chapter 70.3.

70.2.1 Philippe de Patin

Philippe de Patin (DP12by2) was born in Dadizele in 1667 in Figure 70.6.
He married Katrien de Roo, and they had one daughter who married Antoon de Lavael (DP12by2).

70.2.2 Monique de Patin

Monique de Patin (DP12bx1) was born in Dadizele in 1664 in Figure 70.7.
She married first Jan Ghisdael and later Jacob van den Bulcke at Ledegem.

70.2.3 Marie Catherine de Patin

Marie Catherine de Patin (DP12bx2) was born in Dadizele in 1664 in Figure 70.8. She married Joris Brouwere.

70.2.4 Anne de Patin

Anne de Patin (DP12bx3) married Willem Braye at Kortrijk.
The Braye family is the one who is also found in our Desclergue ancestry, as described in Chapter 34.13.7.1.

70.2.5 Philippine de Patin

Philippine de Patin (DP12bx4) was the daughter of Philippe de Patin (DP12b) and Anne Vermeersch and was born in Dadizele in 1661 in Figure 70.9.
Philippine de Patin (DP12bx4) first married Ignaas Boullioau (or Morlion) and, consequently, Jacob van Baere at Reninghe.

70.2.6 Josephine de Patin

Josephine de Patin (DP12bx5) was the daughter of Philippe de Patin (DP12b) and Anne Vermeersch.

70.2.7 Jean de Patin

Jean de Patin (DP12by3) is not found in genealogy books. Therefore, it is likely that he died at a young age. He was born in Geluwe in 1662, in Figure 70.10.

70.3 Pierre de Patin & Catherine-Thérèse de Smet

Pierre de Patin (DP12by1) was born in Dadizele on September 17, 1660, in Figure 70.11. He was the Lord of Terbeke, Burgcautere, Schaepweide, Nonneland, Langemarck, etc. He became Lord of Ter Beke in 1719 after purchasing it from Joos Andries de Patin (DP12ay1) and became Lord of Burghcoutere in 1696 after purchasing it from Charles Philippe Blomme. Several times, he has also been an alderman of the hall and Castellany of Ypres. He has often been a deputy on behalf of the noble vassals as Bailiff of the Barony of Guise and Coutsy.
Pierre de Patin married first Catherine-Thérèse de Smet, born in Ypres, shown in Figure 70.15 on page 1454, on May 26, 1663, the daughter of Martin de Smet and Jacqueline de Ghekiere, granddaughter of Jean de Smet and Jeanne de Wostyn. He then married his second wife, Jeanne Gryson, the daughter of Jean Gryson and Jeanne Marre. She died on December 18, 1741.
The couple had no children. But from his first marriage, Pierre de Patin (DP12by1) had four children: Charles Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1), described in Chapter 70.6, Charles Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2), Caroline Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1x) (She died without any offspring), Maximilien-Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y3) (born in Ypres on January 11, 1686), Pierre Xavier de Patin (DP12by1y4) (He died without any offspring) and Josse David de Patin (DP12by1y5) (He died without any family).
Pierre de Patin (DP12by1) died at Bixschote on August 27, 1735, in Figure 70.12 and was buried there with the following epitaph: '*Grafsteen van d' heer Pieter Patyn, Heere van Langemarck, Schaepweide, Ter Beke, Burgercautere , Nonneland, Alderman der stede ende Casselrie van Ypre , Bailliu der Baronnie van Guysen dit Coudtsy tot syn overlyden den 27en Ougst 1735 in den ouderdom van 75 jaeren; Ende van Jonkvrouw Joanna Gryson fille de Jans ende van Joanna Marre, syne tweede gheselline overleden sonder kinderen op den 18° October 1741 oudt 75 jaeren, de welcke hebben ghefondeert een eeuwigh jaerghetyde binnen dese kerck van Bixschote met distributie van broodt voor den armen. 70.3.1 Charles Joseph de Patin & Marie-Jacqueline de Voldere

Charles Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2) was born on March 24, 1691. He was the Lord of Letuwe, Nonneland, etc. He was a counselor and master of the waters and forests of His Imperial Majesty in the district of Ypres ('water- en woudmeester der Keizerlijke Majestijd voor het Yppersche'), and collector-general of the hall and Castellany of Ypres and Bailiff of Ypres.

He was married twice.

On May 20, 1717, he first married Marie-Jacqueline (or Marie Jacoba) de Voldere, who died on March 6, 1728. She was the daughter of Jean-François de Voldere and Marie-Pétronille EIbo; She was the granddaughter of Jacques de Voldere and Jacqueline Gallieu.

He married a second time on December 1, 1732, to Genevieve Mombry or Mombrey, who died on November 26, 1760. She was the daughter of François-Jacques and Dame Anne-Catherine des Rameaulx; she was the widow of Jean-Jacques de Baune or de Barne, an alderman of the city of Ypres.

Charles Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2) received nobility letters from Maria Theresia of Austria on October 15, 1755, with the noble title of Knight de Patin.

He died on February 7, 1763. From his second marriage, he had a son, Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2y1).

Charles Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2) and Marie-Jacqueline de Voldere had the following children, also depicted in Figure 70.13: Marie Josèphe de Patin (DP12by1y2x1), Jeanne Jacqueline de Patin (DP12by1y2x2), Thérèse Rose de Patin (DP12by1y2x3), Anne Caroline de Patin (DP12by1y2x4), Isabelle Dorothée de Patin (DP12by1y2x5), Isabelle Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1y2x6).

Charles Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2) and Dame Genevieve Mombry or Mombrey had the following children: Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2y1), Colette de Patin (DP12by1y2x7), Geneviève Constance de Patin (DP12by1y2x8), Anne Charlotte de Patin (DP12by1y2x9), Charles Marie de Patin (DP12by1y2y2), Louis Augustin Benedict de Patin (DP12by1y2y3), and Marie Thérèse de Patin (DP12by1y2x10).

70.3.1.1 Marie Josèphe de Patin

Marie Josèphe de Patin (DP12by1y2x1) was born on August 26, 1720, and was a religious nun at Nonnenbossche at Ypres. She died on July 20, 1750.

70.3.1.2 Jeanne Jacqueline de Patin

Jeanne Jacqueline de Patin (DP12by1y2x2) was born on August 23, 1721. She became a religious nun at Coninckxdale in 1748.

70.3.1.3 Thérèse Rose de Patin

Thérèse Rose de Patin (DP12by1y2x3) was born on August 30, 1722, and became a religious Carmelite nun on May 8, 1745.

Figure 70.11: Dadizele, September 17, 1660, the baptism of Pierre de Patin, the son of Philippe de Patin ('Philippus Patijn') and Anne Vermeersch. The godfather was Petrus Vanackere from Geluwe, and the godmother was Maria Stagiers from Geluwe.

70.3.1.4 Anne Caroline de Patin

Anne Caroline de Patin (DP12by1y2x4) was born on December 17, 1723, and died as a nun on September 14, 1749.

70.3.1.5 Isabelle Dorothée de Patin

Isabelle Dorothée de Patin (DP12by1y2x5) was born on March 17, 1725, and died on July 10, 1726.

70.3.1.6 Isabelle Joséphine de Patin

Isabelle Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1y2x6) was born on August 20, 1726. She was a religious nun and later became Abesse of the abbey of Wevelgem, where she also died.

70.3.1.7 Colette de Patin

Colette de Patin (DP12by1y2x7) was born in January of 1735.

70.3.1.8 Geneviève Constance de Patin

Geneviève Constance de Patin (DP12by1y2x8) was born on January 15, 1736, died at a young age, and was buried at Bixschote.

70.3.1.9 Anne Charlotte de Patin

Anne Charlotte de Patin (DP12by1y2x9) was born on July 10, 1737, and died on May 17, 1794.

70.3.1.10 Charles Marie de Patin

Charles Marie de Patin (DP12by1y2y2) was born on September 8, 1738. He was a captain of a military infantry regiment of Kollerwuth in the Imperial Austrian Army. He died at Ypres on May 20, 1825, and was buried in Bixschote.

Figure 70.14: Painting of Caroline Joséphine de Patin (1692-1784). The shape of her chin is characteristic of de Patin and was also prevalent with the Lesage branch in Chapter 64.

Figure 70.15: The Lakenhalle of Ypres, a grand Gothic edifice, was initially constructed between 1200 and 1304. Serving as a cloth hall, it was central to the medieval wool trade, with lower floors for commerce and upper floors for storage and quality control. The 70-meter belfry symbolized municipal autonomy, housing communal charters and serving as a watchtower. During World War I, the Lakenhalle was almost totally destroyed but was meticulously reconstructed between 1933 and 1967. Now a UNESCO World Heritage site, it hosts the In Flanders Fields Museum, commemorating the war's impact. The Lakenhalle remains a testament to Ypres' historical and cultural heritage.

70.3.1.11 Louis Augustin Benedict de Patin

Louis Augustin Benedict de Patin (DP12by1y2y3) was born on November 4, 1740. He was a captain of a dragons regiment of Wurtemburg in the Imperial Austrian Army. He died at Ypres and was buried in Voormezeele.

70.3.1.12 Marie Thérèse de Patin

Marie Thérèse de Patin (DP12by1y2x10) was born on March 4, 1745. She was a Benedictine religious nun at Poperinge and died on February 17, 1800.

70.3.2 Caroline Joséphine de Patin

Caroline Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1x), shown in Figure 70.14, was born in Ypres on March 4, 1692, and died at Wevelgem in 1784. She was the sister of Charles Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1).
Note that Ypres was French at that time. Therefore, Caroline Joséphine de Patin would later be assumed to be French. Indeed, she was the 36th abbess of Guldenbergabdij at Wevelgem from 1769 until 1784. Apart from the fact that many believe she was French, the only known information about her is a painting that survived, found at the presbytery of St Hilarius parish of Wevelgem. During Caroline's 'reign,' only four new nuns would join because Maria Theresia of Austria had decided that novices should be older than 25 and that donations from their families were forbidden. The Abby would ultimately end its activities because of a shortage of income. After her death, Caroline was succeeded by Albérique de Madre.

70.4 Joseph de Patin & Catherine Thérèse Françoise de Ghelcke

Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2y1) was born on October 17, 1733. He was the Lord of Letuwe, an alderman of the Castellany of Ypres, and he died on October 18, 1792.
His tomb is shown in Figure 65.4 on page 1300, at the beginning of Chapter 65.
He married on September 13, 1763, Catherine-Thérèse-Françoise de Ghelcke, who was born on January 19, 1733, and died in Ypres on July 4, 1819, aged 83, and was buried in Brielen. Catherine de Ghelcke was a daughter of Jacques-Laurent de Ghelcke and Genevieve Antoinette de Wavrans, daughter of Eugene and Marie-Jeanne Queval, daughter of Nicolas Queval. Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2y1) and Catherine Thérèse Françoise de Ghelcke had the following son: Joseph Jacques Benoît de Patin (DP12by1y2y1y1).
Note that the de Patin family also had links with the Hynderick family. Figures 70.16 and 70.17 are the marriage announcement and the mortuary card of Auguste Hynderick, who was married to Ida de Ghelcke.

née

Irène de Kerckhove d'Exaerde

né à Ixelles le 15 Janvier 1844, décédé à Ypres, le 2 Juillet 1903, muni des Sacrements de notre Mère la Sainte-Église.

PRIÈRE.

Ecoutez, Seigneur, favorablement les prières par lesquelles nous supplions votre miséricorde de placer dans la région de la paix et de la lumière, l'âme de votre serviteur EMILE, que vous avez retirée de cette terre, et de vouloir ordonner qu'elle soit admise dans la société de vos saints. Par Jésus-Christ notre Seigneur. Ainsi soit-il.

Mon Jésus, miséricorde. (100 J. D'IND).

O doux cœur de Marie, soyez mon salut. (300 J. D'IND.).

Que la très juste, très élevée et très aimable volonté de Dieu soit accomplie en toutes choses, qu'elle soit louée et à jamais glorifiée. Ainsi soit-il. (100 J. D'IND).

EMILE CHARLES-JOSEPH-MARIE-GHISLAIN

Chevalier HYNDERICK,

PRÉSIDENT HONORAIRE A LA COUR DE CASSATION, GRAND OFFICIER DE L'ORDRE DE LÉOPOLD, né à Ypres le 5 Août 1815, y décédé le 10 Décembre 1892.

Ce n'est pas un mince éloge de dire de quelqu'un qu'il a été l'homme du devoir, qu'il a su se faire respecter et aimer de ses enfants qu'il a gouvernés par le bon exemple, et qu'il a su faire vénérer et aimer sa chère compagne.

St. François de Sales.

Sa vieillesse était une couronne d'honneur, parce qu'elle se trouvait dans la voie de la justice.

Prov. XII, 31.

Seigneur, prêtez l'oreille à mes paroles; entendez mes cris: Soyez attentif à la voix de ma prière, vous qui êtes mon roi et mon Dieu; car c'est vous que je prierai. Seigneur, bientôt vous exaucerez ma prière; bientôt je me présenterai devant vous.

Me confiant dans l'abondance de votre miséricorde, j'entrerai dans votre maison, et rempli de votre crainte, je vous y adorerai.

Ps. V. 1, 2, 3, 4, 8.

Actes de Foi, d'Espérance et de Charité.
Qu'il repose en paix ! Ainsi soit-il.

IMPR. CH. DEWEERDT.

PIEUX SOUVENIR
de Messire
CHARLES-JOSEPH-FRANÇOIS DE PATIN
Ecuyer, Officier de l'Ordre de Léopold, Époux de Dame
Lucie Dehem;
NÉ A YPRES, IL Y DÉCÉDA LE 25 DÉCEMBRE 1858,
A L'AGE DE 61 ANS.

Cet homme était droit et craignait Dieu; il chérissait son épouse comme J. C. a aimé son Église: il aimait ses enfants comme la prunelle de ses yeux.

PROCUREUR DU ROI A YPRES DEPUIS LE 17 JANVIER 1826 ET VICE-PRÉSIDENT DE LA COMMISSION ADMINISTRATIVE DES PRISONS DEPUIS LE 1er JANVIER 1827:

Il s'est toujours revêtu de la justice et l'équité lui a servi comme d'un vêtement royal et d'un diadême; il s'instruisait avec soin des affaires qui lui étaient soumises; il brisait les mâchoires de l'injuste et lui arrachait sa proie; il écoutait le petit comme le grand et n'avait aucun égard à la condition de qui que ce fût; ceux qui l'écoutaient recevaient son avis avec un silence plein de respect; toutes ses voies furent pacifiques; il était le consolateur des affligés.

PRÉSIDENT DE LA FABRIQUE DE L'ÉGLISE DE St. MARTIN:

Il a soutenu et restauré la maison du Seigneur; en suite de ses pieuses démarches le temple fut vénéré et honoré de larges présents; il les mit entre les mains de ceux qui faisaient travailler les ouvriers au temple pour le restaurer et pour en réparer les ruines. — Après qu'il eut réparé le temple, le Roi Josias mourut et fut déposé dans le tombeau de ses pères; tout Juda et Jérusalem le pleura, et Jérémie plus que tous les autres.

ANCIEN PRÉSIDENT DES HOSPICES CIVILS D'YPRES, MEMBRE DE LA COMMISSION ADMINISTRATIVE DE L'INSTITUTION ROYALE DE MESSINES DEPUIS LE 6 DÉCEMBRE 1849:

Il était le père du pauvre et le protecteur de l'orphelin; celui qui était près de périr le comblait de bénédictions et il remplissait de consolation le cœur de la veuve.

Qu'il reçoive une pleine récompense du Seigneur!
Textes tirés de l'Écriture Sainte.

Louée soit la Sainte et Immaculée Conception de la Bienheureuse Vierge Marie.

Jésus, Marie, Joseph! je vous donne mon cœur et mon âme!
Jésus, Marie, Joseph! assistez moi à l'agonie!
Jésus, Marie, Joseph! que mon âme avec vous repose en paix.

ancien Procureur du Roi près le tribunal de 1e instance à Ypres, née à Ypres le 14 Juin 1800, et y décédée le 21 Mars 1878.

Seigneur, vous nous l'aviez donnée pour notre bonheur, vous la réclamez de nous, nous vous la rendons sans murmure, mais le cœur navré de douleur....Qui pourrait condamner les pleurs que nous répandons?..Ils coulent, non pas seulement sur nous qui ne l'avons plus, mais sur vous tous qui l'avez perdue; ils coulent sur les nécessités des pauvres dont elle fut la mère... Elle a passé au milieu de nous comme un souffle bienfaisant. Mère au cœur si bon, si affectueux, toujours chrétienne dans la plus large acception du mot, bénie et chérie dans sa famille dont elle fut l'inspiration et l'ange consolateur... La bonté de son caractère et les nobles sentiments de son âme, joints à une douce affabilité, lui valurent l'estime générale. Aussi personne ne dit une parole à son désavantage... Qu'elle est heureuse cette chère défunte, d'avoir vu venir peu à peu et de loin, l'heure de son départ! Car ainsi elle s'est préparée pour le faire saintement.. Au moment suprême, s'inspirant de son divin Jésus-crucifié, Seigneur, s'écria-t-elle, je souffre dans mon corps de grandes douleurs, mais dans mon âme, je les endure avec joie par amour pour vous!.. Je mets ma confiance en Marie, je fonde sur elle toute mon espérance!

Mes biens-aimés enfants et petits-enfants, vous qui êtes ma joie et ma couronne, mon pèlerinage est fini, le vôtre continue... Adieu! priez pour moi.... N'oubliez pas mes soupirs; pensez à mes souffrances et aux soins que j'ai eus pour vous ... Soyez unis entre vous, vivez et demeurez en paix... Aimez-vous les uns les autres.,.. Pratiquez constamment ce que vous avez appris et reçu de moi; et le Dieu de paix sera avec vous. — S. Ephr.; S. Bern.; Fénélon; Cheverus; Judith. VIII.; S. Fr. de S.; II. Mach.; S. Bern.; S. PRIEZ POUR LE REPOS DE L'AME
DE MADEMOISELLE
HÉLÈNE, AMELIE, JOSÈPHE
de PATIN,
MEMBRE DU CONSEIL DES ŒUVRES CHARITABLES, DE LA SOCIÉTÉ MATERNELLE, DE L'ADORATION PERPÉTUELLE, DES ÉGLISES PAUVRES, ET DES SALLES D'ASILE, née à Ypres, le 16 Octobre . . . 1829, y décédée, le 10 Octobre . . . . 1886.

O qu'elle est belle la race chaste!.... Son souvenir est immortel et sa gloire sera célébrée devant Dieu et devant les hommes. Sag. IV.

Jeune encore, avant qu'elle pût s'écarter des sentiers de la justice, elle a cherché la vraie sagesse. La prière, une tendre dévotion à la très-sainte Vierge Marie, et à la Passion de notre divin Sauveur, faisaient toutes les délices de sa vie.

Ne s'inspirant que de la sainte Foi, elle faisait beaucoup d'aumônes et pratiquait les bonnes Œuvres, sans ostentation et dans la simplicité de son cœur. Act. des Ap.

Elle a supporté les souffrances d'une longue et cruelle maladie avec une résignation et une patience admirables, sachant que les afflictions de cette vie, endurées pour N. S. J. C., sont comme les fleurs qui précèdent les fruits de la gloire. Rom. VIII — S. Grég. Naz.

Adieu! ma Sœur chérie et vous tous qui m'avez toujours aimée; je pars, mais mon cœur vous reste; je le plongerai dans le cœur de mon Sauveur et avec ce cœur deux fois tendre, deux fois aimant, je vivrai avec vous, je penserai, j'aimerai avec vous, je prendrai part à toutes vos espérances, à toutes vos douleurs, jusqu'à ce que nous soyons réunis là où jamais nous ne serons plus séparés. Ravignan.

Doux Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, soyez mon refuge! (300 j. d'ind,)

70.5.1 Aline Caroline Joséphine de Patin

Aline Caroline Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1y2y1y1y1x1) was born in Ypres on September 28, 1824, and married Amand Vercruysse of Kortrijk on May 6, 1846. She died in Kortrijk on November 24, 1896, in Figure 70.32. Amand Vercruysse was born in Kortrijk in 1818 and died in Kortrijk in 1907. His father was Henricus Vercruysse (1789-1857), and his mother was Maria Joanna Bruneel (1789-1853).

Amand Vercruysse and Aline Caroline Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1y2y1y1y1x1) had a son, Albert Raphael Vercruysse, born in Kortrijk in 1851, who died in 1923. He married Lucie Charlotte Marie Van der Straeten in 1886, who was born in Brussels in 1862 and died in Foy-Notre-Dame in 1931. They had one son, John Vercruysse, born in 1891 and killed at the beginning of WWI in Pervijze in 1914. He was a law student in Leuven when the war began. His full name was John Pierre Henri Marie Ghislain; he was soldier 2 kl mil 1913, 24 Linie 2/1 (5 Cie - E.M.) and died on October 22, 1914. His place of birth was Minister Tacklaan 5 at Kortrijk.

Amand Vercruysse (1818-1907), whose death announcement is shown in Figure 70.31, was a son of Henri Vercruysse (1789-1857) and a grandson of Charles Jacques Joseph Vercruysse (1751-1825), who was the son of Jean Antoine Ignace Vercruysse (1720-1795) and Marie Isabelle Claire van de Maele (1709-1772). The latter couple also had a son, François Xavier Vercruysse (1746-1805), whose son was Dominicus Vercruysse (1797-1880), father of Arséne Vercruysse (1823-1882), who was married to Mrs Ellebout.

Other souvenirs are shown in Figures 70.33, 70.34, 70.35 and 70.36.

An interesting topic in the family Vercruysse de Patin framework is that their second residence near Ypres, close to the Zillebeke border, called Chateau de Langhof, formed a dramatic episode in WWI and, after the war, only a surviving tree witnessed the events which took place on this site.

Langhof Castle, shown in Figure 70.37, was located along the Rijselseweg, across the Ypres-Komen canal in the direction of Ypres. The castle was also called de Patin or Vercruysse's castle. From 1800 onward, it was the second residence of the de Patin family, which passed on to the Vercruysse family from Kortrijk by inheritance. The castle was destroyed in WWI.

When banker Destamaudt died in 1725, the mansion was occupied by Count François Mombrey, who died in 1712 and was succeeded by Count Charles de Patin, who died in 1763. Later, the mansion was rebuilt and inhabited by the then-Mayor of Vormezeele, Joseph Jacques Benedict de Patin.

Unfortunately, he converted the estate into a castle and was located on the front line during the First World War. It was safe for three years and in British hands until the Germans moved further south of the frontline and destroyed it at the end of the war. The castle was destroyed, but the British shelters survived. The farm which belonged to the court was rebuilt after the war.

The last owner was Albert Vercruysse de Patin, born in 1851 and died in 1923. He and his wife, Marie van der Straeten, used the castle as a summer residence. Their son was John Vercruysse, who died as a soldier during WWI.

More information about Joseph Jacques Benedict de patin (1764-1843) can be found in Dierickx Visschers[1]. We found an subscription of Joseph Jacques Benedict de Patin at the Catholic University of Leuven in 1785 in Figure 70.40 on page 1463.

70.5.2 Jules Philippe de Patin

Jules Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y2y1y1y1y) was born in Ypres on February 3, 1827, and died in Ypres on August 8, 1839.

70.5.3 Hélène Emélie Joséphine de Patin

Hélène Emélie Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1y2y1y1y1x2) was born at Ypres on October 16, 1829. She died at Ypres on October 10, 1886, in Figures 70.38 and 70.39.

70.6 Charles Philippe de Patin & Thérêse Waltrude du Bois

70.6.1 Introduction

The author has Charles Philippe de Patin's great-grandparents in common, as explained in Chapter 70. Furthermore, his grandparents, Philippe de Patin, and Anne Thérèse Vermeersch, were both siblings of Adrienne de Patin and Marinus Vermeersch, the author's ancestors.

Charles Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1) was the son of Pierre de Patin (DP12by1) and Catherine Thérèse de Smet. He was born in Ypres on April 19, 1687. He received a noble title from Emperor Charles VI, introduced in Chapter 8.17.1, on December 5, 1735, and became Viscount de Pattyn or de Patin. He was the Lord of Ter Beke, Burghcoutere, and Langemarck. In 1721 he was regent-raadsheer of den Hoogen Raad van Mechelen.

In 1729, he was a counselor for the secret Imperial Council. In 1733, he was Regent of the Hoogen Raad der Nederlanden (The Council of Flanders) at Vienna.

He married Trees-Waltrudis van de Bossche, the daughter of François du Bois and Catherine De Vos, on April 10, 1715, at Ghent. He often stayed at his home, Ter Beke, in Geluwe, in 1766, where he appeared to have signed several documents.

He died in Ghent on July 17, 1773, and was buried at Langemarck. Charles-Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1) and Thérèse Waltrude du Bois had nine children: Sabine de Patin (DP12by1y1x1), Caroline de Patin (DP12by1y1x2), François-Guillaume de Patin (DP12by1y1y1), Jean-Baptiste-Benedict de Patin (DP12by1y1y2), Léopold-Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y1y2), Thérêse-Catherine de Patin (DP12by1y1x3), Jeanne de Patin (DP12by1y1x4), Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1y1x6), Marie-Louise-Bernardine de Patin (DP12by1y1x5).

The blood relationship between the author and Charles Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1) is shown in Figures 70.41 and 70.42. Figure 70.43 gives a souvenir of the concerned period.

Charles Philippe de Patin (Ypres, April 19, 1687 – Ghent, July 17, 1773) was a Flemish writer, a poet, a magistrate, and a legal and fiscal expert. He is well known for his work 'Mare Liberum ex jure naturae, gentium & civili assertum, vindicatum, redevivum' (1726) and his prominent role as a statesman in Austrian Belgium[2] during the age of enlightenment,[3] and his Presidency of the Council of Flanders from 1742 until his death.

The family name 'de Patin' [4][5] was consistently used late in the life of Charles Philippe de Patin and was also used by all his descendants. The French version 'de Patin' originates from the knowledge that a genealogical survey, when he received the title 'viscount,' revealed that the oldest known ancestors were from Cambrai in France and spelled their name as 'Patin.'

Pseudonyms are Charles Philippe burghgrave de Patin[6], Charles Philippe de Patin[7], Carolus Philippus Pattyn Iprensis[8], Patin van Ieper[9], Charles Philippe de Pattyn[10], Karel Filips Pattijn [11], M. Pattyn[12], or his birth name Carolus Philippus de Patin. The descendants of Charles Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1) are shown in Figure 70.44.

70.6.2 Parents and Ancestors

Charles Philippe de Patin descends from an ancient noble family[13] [14][15] described by G. Van Hoorebeke as 'noble of race,' [16][17] with early roots in France at the castle of Selles at Cambrai in the 13th century.

The name de Patin would also be used in more recent times by descendants in maternal line combined with a word from a paternal line, such as Cotteau de Patin, Struye de Patin, Vercruysse de Patin, etc. and when explicitly referring to family members who lived at Langemark, the expression de Patin de Langhemarck can be found although in civil records the latter appear simply as de Patin, hence de Langhemarck was not (always) a part of their name. There are no direct descendants in the paternal line, carrying the name de Patin, alive anymore as can be found in several references.[18][19]

His father was Pierre de Patin (DP12by1; Dadizele, 1660 - Bikschote 1735), shown in Figure 70.45, who was the Lord of Langemarck, Shaepweide, Ter Beke,[20] Burgcautere and Nonneland. At Ypres, Pierre de Patin (DP12by1) had been the Bailiff of the Barony of

Note that in this dissertation, the author has systematically translated each person's name, even when English, Spanish, French, or Austrian, into a Dutch version except for the Dutch 'Hugo de Groot' whom he calls by his Latinized name 'Grotius.' For instance, the spelling 'Pattijn' never occurred in any of the historical references, neither did 'Filips,' and are hence merely a 20th-century creation by De Pauw.

[12] Name in Flemish as written by the publisher Vander Elst on de Patin's book printed in 1727, 'M' stands for 'Mister,' or 'Magister,' or 'Mesire'; 'Pattyn' is the most common way this family name is spelled in Flanders by families that are not related to Charles Philippe de Patin.

This 'Jan de Patin' is most probably 'Jean de Patin', who appears in the reference of G. Van Hoorebeke and is the son of Wautier de Patin and grandfather of Michel de Patin who was married in 1500 to Proese Ambrosine vanden Berghe (or ' de Berghes') from Kortrijk.

Guysen[21] and clerk at Geluwe.[22]

Furthermore, he had also been a deputy magistrate for the noblemen and vassals at the Chamber and Lordship of Ypres, for which he also served various times as an alderman and representative of the government, in 1699 he had become a council of the city of Ypres and in 1705 he became responsible for distributing bourgeoisie rights for the citizens.[23]

Charles Philippe's grandfather was Philippe de Patin (Menin 1637 - 1712) and was married to Anne Vermeersch (1637), while Philippe's eldest sister Adrienne de Patin (DP12; Menin 1634 – Geluwe 1710) was married to Anne's brother Marinus Vermeersch.[24][25][26]

The family of Vermeersch were landowners at Geluwe.[27]

In contrast, the family of de Patin was wealthy, partially due to possessions inherited by Philippe de Patin's mother, Marie Douchy (Geluwe 1610 – Geluwe 1681). The latter had inherited possessions from her grandfather's family de Peutevin.[28] De Pauw[29] also mentions that the uncle of Charles Philippe de Patin was a brewer at Ypres and that his father, Pierre de Patin, sold goods to the French.

Charles Philippe de Patin (DP12by1y1) had a brother, Charles Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y2; 1691-1762)[30], Lord of Nonneland and Letuwe, responsible for forest management in Austrian Belgium. Charles Joseph was first married to Marie Jacqueline de Voldere in 1717, and after her death, he married Genevieve Mombry in 1732.

70.6.3 Early Years and Education

When Charles Philippe was born in 1687, the city of Ypres had been French since the treaty of Nijmegen of September 17, 1678, under Louis XIV. It had been heavily fortified by Sebastien de Vauban.[31] Despite growing up in French Ypres, Charles Philippe decided to study at the Catholic University of Leuven, on the Belgian side of the border in the Spanish Netherlands, and not at a French university; this indicates loyalty of the family de Patin to what would later be called Austrian Belgium and was later mentioned in his letter of nobility when awarded the title of Viscount by Emperor Charles VI, introduced in Chapter 8.17.1, Holy Roman Emperor[32]. The same document also indicates the family's loyalty to Catholicism during the French wars of religion. Despite a tradition in the Spanish Netherlands to spell his family name as Pattyn or Patyn by registrars, the family would hold on to their

French name de Patin.[33][34][35][36]

In 1710, amid the Spanish Succession war, Charles Philippe received a Master's Degree in Law from the Catholic University of Leuven, then called Studium Generale Lovaniense.[37]

At the University of Leuven, shown in Figure 70.46, Charles Philippe was fiscus in 1709 and later decanus of the Collegium Baccalaureorum.

70.6.4 Career in Austrian Belgium During the Reign of Charles VI and Before Becoming a Viscount

Charles Philippe de Patin quickly became a renowned lawyer[38] at the end of the Spanish Netherlands period. Austrian Belgium came into being in 1715. On October 12, 1720, de Patin was appointed, being a lawyer, as the counsellor of the Council of Flanders by Prince Eugene de Savoy, who was the governor of the Netherlands (1716-1725).[39][40]

By a decree of April 8, 1721, Charles Philippe received the title of Conseiller et Maitre aux Requêtes ordinaire de notre Grand Conseil.

He took the oath on April 12, 1721, before the Council's President Christophe Ernest, count of de Baillet[41]. This was amid the early disputes between Austrian Belgium and the two Naval Powers of Britain and the United Provinces of the Netherlands[42] concerning the plans to establish an Indian Company (comparable to the East and West Indian Companies): the Ostend Company in Austrian Belgium, for which Charles VI issued a patent on December 19, 1722.

Soon after, Charles Philippe would write the first version of his book Mare Liberum in 1726. At that time, the Austrian Emperor had not yet employed de Patin. Therefore, according to De Pauw[43], his work was written to defend the economic freedom of his country, Austrian Belgium, against the established monopolies of Britain and the Dutch East India, safeguarding the legitimate rights of the Ostend Company.

Nevertheless, newspapers published very positive comments on his work. They encouraged the idea of bestowing de Patin with higher positions in society[44][45].

Soon, ordered by Charles VI, de Patin was sent to the Congress of Soissons by the Emperor's sister Maria-Elisabeth[46] to negotiate with France, England and the Dutch East India Company about the Ostend Company. De Patin's French background enabled him to weaken the bonds between France and the other partners in favor of preserving the Ostend Company[47].

The Austrians were prepared to give up the Ostend Company in the framework of higher diplomatic goals. They hoped to receive favors from Spain and the negotiating countries at Soissons. De Patin, however, kept defending the Ostend Company and the principles of the free seas as described in his Mare Liberum.

However, he was unable to save the Ostend Company because the Treaty of Vienna of March 16, 1731, involved Charles VI refraining from further attempts to establish an Austrian trade route to India. The Belgian Austrians and Charles VI remembered de Patin's [33] In de Patin's nobility letter by Charles VI and reconfirmation by Maria Theresa, introduced in Chapter 8.17.2, he is referred to as de Patin, Patin, Pattyn, de Patyn and de Pattyn, which clarifies an ambiguity that also existed during his life.

passionate attempts to save the Ostend Company and nominated him on August 5, 1733, for a position in the High Court[48]. For this reason, de Patin went to Vienna in the Fall of 1733, leaving his sick wife behind in Austrian Belgium.[49]

Finally, by Imperial decree of December 5, 1735, at Vienna[50], de Patin was ennobled as Viscount because of his values and because of his noble ancestors and their merits dating back to the 13th century.[51][52]

70.6.5 Career as a Viscount in Austrian Belgium during the reign of Charles VI

After receiving the noble title of Viscount, de Patin became Conseiller-Regent (Regent Advisor) in the Supreme Court of Austrian Belgium. The Supreme Court was the authority dealing with the national politics of Austrian Belgium and offered the ability to de Patin to defend the interests of his fellow citizens.[53]

Charles Philippe de Patin was also a member of a junta at Vienna that, on October 10, 1737, expressed its disapproval of governess Maria-Elisabeth's plans to install severe censorship on literature in Austrian Belgium.[54]

Furthermore, against the wishes of Maria-Elisabeth, de Patin advised publishing a decree to limit legal immunity for clergypersons on December 6, 1737.[55]

Meanwhile, De Patin's wife, Thérèse Waltrude du Bois, died in Brussels in 1737.

After her death, de Patin remained active and was very concerned about Austrian Belgium's trade with India and the Ostend Company.[56] He was also been approached several times in 1738 by different bankers and by Meijer Zum Goldstein to establish a new company in Hamburg to replace the Ostend Company.[57]

In a letter to her brother Charles VI on April 9, 1738, Governess Maria-Elisabeth insisted on sending de Patin, because of 'his competence and his gentle and polite manners,'[58] to Antwerp where on August 27, 1737, tedious negotiations had begun between representatives of the maritime powers and Charles VI. The purpose was to agree on a new trade treaty planned in article XXVI of the Barrière-Traktaat of 1715. The problem with item XXVI was not that very detrimental tax rates would have to be paid by Austrian Belgium on trade with England and the United Dutch Provinces originating from the English-Batavian occupation until a new one would replace that article, but that England and the United Dutch Provinces continued, for more than 22 years, to delay such negotiations in an attempt to maintain the established tax regime for as long as possible in their favour. De Patin made proposals to England and the United Dutch Provinces founded on reciprocity principles: the free passage of citizens and an equal tax regime for trade in each direction between Austrian Belgium and England and the United Dutch Provinces.

The maritime powers rejected his proposals and claimed that Austrian Belgium was occupied. Despite many attempts by de Patin, a new agreement was not made.[59][60][61][62]

Between 1738 and 1740, an exciting episode in the life of de Patin occurred. After the death of Pierre Van Volden[63], a position became available in the Grand Court of Austrian Belgium. Usually, a candidate for that position would be sought in the High Court. De Patin was the favorite candidate, proposed by Count de Fonseca[64]. However, de Patin was also requested to be in Vienna to serve the Emperor in the High Court, and Governess Maria-Elisabeth did not favor cumulating both positions. Letters being sent back and forth between Maria-Elisabeth and the High Court show how well de Patin was appreciated in Austrian Belgium and Vienna.[65]

Charles VI had to send four letters to Brussels to remind them to call de Patin back to Vienna.

De Patin, being disappointed by the refusal to let him cumulate both positions, arrived in Vienna 6 days before the death of Charles VI on October 20, 1740.[66]

De Patin joined the High Court again, and it appears he was the only representative with roots in Austrian Belgium.[67]

70.6.6 Career in Austrian Belgium during the reign of Maria Theresa

Maria Theresa was born in 1717 and succeeded Charles VI on October 20, 1740, as Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, and Archduchess of Austria, to become tenured Holy Roman Empress consort on September 13, 1745.

Marie Theresia, introduced in Chapter 8.17.2 and shown in Figures 70.48 and 70.49, favored Charles Philippe de Patin very much and offered him, on October 5, 1741, the Presidency of the Council of Flanders.[68]

On December 19, 1742, de Patin, a widower since 1737, arrived with his children at Ghent. Maria Theresa had offered him the famous Prinsenhof Palace as an official residence to accept the Presidency. A horse parade and fireworks have celebrated his entry in Ghent.

As a curiosity, we cite exactly what was written:[69]

'Op den 19en decembre 1742 heeft Mesire Charles Philippe Burghgrave de Patin als President sijnen publicquen intrede ghedaen op den Raedt, de neeringe vande vleeschauwers hem te peered cavalcadensgehwyse gheaccompagneert hebbende als near oude ghewoonte, ende hebben d' heeren van het Hof ende alle supposten 's avonts gheviert met illumination, mitsgaeders andere inwoonders der stede ghelijck in diergelijcke occasion altyt is geplogen geworden.'

De Patin took the oath before Count de Silva Tarouca[70] and accepted his function as President from Counselor Coppens.[71]

As President of the Council of Flanders, one of the most important courts of Austrian Belgium, de Patin was a very important magistrate. His position would allow him to play a significant political role in his country, being such a close affiliate and first representative of the Empress. We can cite his responsibility as follows:[72]

''Le président du conseil en Flandres non seulement préside a ce corps et en a la direction interne suivant ses instructions, mais il est le chef de la justice et représente immédiatement le souverain par toute la province.'

The war of the Austrian succession (1740-1748), provoked by most of the Powers of Europe and based on the excuse that Maria Theresa, being a woman, was an illegitimate successor of Charles VI, would significantly impact the career of de Patin.

When, in the early morning of June 12, 1745, the armies of French King Louis XV conquered the city of Ghent after an assault between Sint-Pieters-Poort and the Schelde River, the Council of Flanders decided to send de Patin as an emissary to the French King, who was at that moment located at the Castle of Rooborst, to greet the Sovereign. De Patin held a speech for Louis XV, after which the Sovereign decided to preserve and protect the Council of Flanders. De Patin himself, being very loyal to his Empress, requested the French Marquis d' Argenson[73] to explain to Louis XV that,

'he would instead give up his position as President of the Council of Flanders to join his Empress rather than to operate under Louis XV.'

Marquis d' Argenson told de Patin that Louis XV would probably approve his request to abdicate and that he wished he also had such loyal subjects,[74] as follows:[75]

'La harangue faite, de Patin parla en particulier au Marquis d' Argenson, qui les avait conduit a l' audience et lui dit que, plus étroitement lie par les bienfaits et les devoirs des charges dont la Reine de Hongrie l' avait honore, il demandait au Roi la permission de se retirer pour vivre sous les ordres de la Reine sa Maitresse. Mr. d' Argenson lui répondit qu' il en ferait rapport au Roi, mais qu' il osait lui dire d' avance que sa Majesté approuverait son zèle, et qu' elle souhaiterait, que dans ces occasions tous ses sujets lui fussent aussi fidèles.'

De Patin received a passport and permission to depart; he took leave of the Council in an uttermost polite fashion[76] and went to Brussels and later Roermond, Aix-la-Chapelle (Aachen) and Vienna[77] until the war was over.

Meanwhile, his residence, Prinsenhof, was being used as a military hospital.[78]

The other members of the Council remained in office during the occupation.[79]

Meanwhile, de Patin was planning to expand the international trade of his country. De Patin initially proposed constructing a highway between Liege and Germany.[80] This plan would later be realized by Marquis de Botta-Adorno.[81]

After the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle of October 18, 1748, Austrian Belgium was governed by a State Council. Charles Philippe de Patin played the most prominent role,[82] and he resided at Roermond. The State Council presided until it passed its power to Charles of Lorraine on April 23, 1749.[83][84]

Marquis de Botta-Adorno, a plenipotentiary minister from 1749 until 1753, was well informed about the qualities of de Patin[85],

'puisque ce sont autant de bras qui concourent à la perfectionner l' exécution de ses idées et à conduire les choses au but qu' on se propose d' atteindre.'

The era after 1750 was one of peace and prosperity for Austrian Belgium. It was also in that period that the Age of Enlightenment flourished.

Charles Philippe de Patin, trustee of the central authority at Brussels and Vienna and the President of the Council of Flanders, has played an important political role. Maria Theresa trusted de Patin to establish fair trade treaties with the naval powers of Europe. However, those powers demanded that Austrian Belgium construct a defense line against France to keep itself and the Dutch Provinces protected from further invasions by the French. These constructions would be costly, which would result in high financial pressure on the cities of Austria and Belgium. Triggered by the age of enlightenment, the cities no longer accepted privileges for specific cities in the country's decision-making process at the expense of the other cities. In contrast, all towns had to share the costs of the country.[86]

Hence, governmental and financial reforms were necessary, starting with better transparency to avoid illicit expenditure,[87]
'Viscount de Patin, charged in 1765 with the search for the origin of this institution, could go back to a deed from 1367, in which approximately the later form of government could be recognized. From this, de Patin deduced that the establishment of the college probably went back to the first transport of Flanders in 1317.'
It was Charles Philippe Jean viscount de Cobenzl who was in charge of modernisation of the economy and the politics of Austrian Belgium, while continually being advised by Charles Philippe viscount de Patin and Jean Jacques Philippe viscount Vilain XIIII.[88][89]
Proost et al.[90], states,
'2 mai 1750 - Sur un avis du vicomte de Patin, chargé de constater l' état des biens et revenus de l' abbaye de Terhaeghen, à Gand, à l' effet de savoir s' ils sont suffisants pour justifier l' imposition d' une pension sur ce monastère (folio 1). 1750-1750 (Les consultes sont adressées à Charles de Lorraine, gouverneur général des Pays-Bas et au marquis de Botta Adorno, ministre plénipo-tentiaire.).'
De Patin, having a similar mindset[91] as H.M. King Juan Carlo I and Adolfo Suárez in 1977, wrote to Cobenzl that it made no sense to destroy all the fundamental laws but that it was better to make corrections where needed, avoid any abuse of power or financial means, for every class of society to fully support the implementation of the reforms. De Patin wrote[92]
'Le grand art et le meilleur moyen est d' y parvenir sans détruire les lois fondamentales, mais plutôt de les assister, et rectifier pour autant qu' elles sons défectueuses, en retranchant les abus qu' on en a fait, afin que le clergé, la noblesse, et la plus saine partie du people embrasse avec plaisir et satisfaction le règlement et le projet a faire entre le gouvernement et les dites châtellenies pour ensuite le faire gouter a un chacun, et avec un concours mutuel l' exécuter.'
From that time, voting rights in Austrian Belgium were no longer based on historical privileges but preferably commensurate with the importance and financial capacity while the economy was being rationalized.
As an impartial examiner, De Patin oversaw several investigations of financial irregularities within the country.[93]
De Patin continued to play an essential role in Austrian Belgium[94] until blindness prevented further activities in 1771[95].
On March 25, 1772, Maria Theresa consequently allowed him to retire while retaining all privileges, as the Secret Council, Charles of Lorraine and Chancellor Kaunitz proposed. In her letter, Maria Theresa famously called de Patin her loyal servant, 'ce bon serviteur,' and exceptionally granted him this favor[96] as follows,
'J' accorde a ce bon serviteur sa jubilarisation comme vous le propose hors que par grâce spécial je veux que par le gestos secretos on lui paie les épices en entier,' which was the most significant distinction one could be bestowed with upon retirement.[97]
On July 17, 1773, at the age of 86, de Charles Philippe de Patin passed away at the Prinsenhof in Ghent. He would be buried inside the church of Langemark. Unfortunately, his grave was destroyed during WWI, together with the church, the castle constructed by his descendants, and the entire village of Langemark.
Maria Theresa declared through a decree on October 25, 1779, that de Patin's descendants were allowed to carry the noble title of Knight and Viscount[98] simultaneously. This honor is unique in the history of nobility and nobles' titles.[99][100]

70.6.11 Poem in Honor of Charles Philippe de Patin

This poem (in Dutch) was written by Philippe Jacques de Neckere for de Patin and was later published[109] in 1815[110]. The publication stated:
" Le grand art et le meilleur moyen est d' y parvenir sans détruire les lois fondamentales, mais plutôt de les assister, et rectifier pour autant qu' elles sons défectueuses, en retranchant les abus qu' on en a fait, afin que le clergé, la noblesse, et la plus saine partie du people embrasse avec plaisir et satisfaction le règlement et le projet a faire entre le gouvernement et les dites châtellenies pour ensuite le faire gouter a un chacun, et avec un concours mutuel l' exécuter' ', and was preceded by the following information " about the Viscount de Patin (State Council and President of the Council of Flanders), who was the son of Pierre de Patin (the Bailiff of the Baronny of Guysen, or Coutsy, and the Lord of Burgcoutre, dead and buried at Bikschote in 1735)' '.
The poem was:

' ' Hoe snel, de Patin, verdryven onse jaeren !
Hoe ras draeyt Lachesis ons Levens-garen af!
Men koomt, men groeyt, men bloeyt, men krankt, men kruypt in 't graf,
Den tyd verdwynt als rook, het leven als de baeren.

De nooyt versoenbre dood, den schrik van alle vleys,
En spaert geen leegen man, en swigt geen hooge koppen,
Maer met gelyken voet het schrik-dier gaet vast kloppen
Aen eene herdershut, en aen een trots paleys.

Wy, die hier onbekend en sonder luyster leven
In een verschove vlek, een onbekende kust,
' T en sy om dat hier 't stof van uwen vader rust,
Wy sullen twyffel-vry 't spook synen tol ook geven

En gy, beroemden Heer, by Vorsten hoog geacht,

70.6.12 Additional works on Charles Philippe de Patin

Besides the numerous works referred to in this book, the reader may also look at the works of Baelde,[111] for a concise biography of Charles Philippe de Patin in Dutch.
A biography of Charles Philippe de Patin can equally be read in 'Biographie des Hommes Remarquable de la Flandre Occidentale' [112]. A diary of Ferdinand Vander Eecken[113] states that 'de Patin was chairing the selection committee as representative of Charles of Lorraine'. A description of the coat of arms of Charles Philippe de Patin and his brother Charles Joseph de Patin (1691-1762) can be found in 'Nobiliaire des Pays-Bas' [114].
Gérard et al.[115] printed the announcement of ennoblement of Charles Philippe de Patin and his brother Charles Joseph de Patin (1691-1762) on the basis of ancient nobility of his ancestors; he equally printed the announcement of the title of Viscount for all descendants of Charles Philippe de Patin. The role of Charles Philippe de Patin in Austrian Belgium is described briefly between 1733 and 1750 by Bernard and Couvreur[116].
Vander Straeten states that a tragedy stage performance in 1737 at Geluwe was dedicated to Charles Philippe de Patin[117].
Charles Joseph de Patin became a student at the Catholic University of Leuven on September 1, 1713.[118]

70.6.13 Offspring of Charles Philippe de Patin and Thérèse du Bois

70.6.13.1 Caroline de Patin

Caroline de Patin (DP12by1y1x2) married in Ghent on December 24, 1763, in Figure 70.57 to Alexis de Stern et de Legesfeld, War Commissioner of Her Imperial Highness.

70.6.13.2 Jean Baptiste Benedict de Patin

Jean Baptiste Benedict de Patin (DP12by1y1y3) was born in Mechelen on July 12, 1726, in Figure 70.58. He was advisor and master of the Chamber of Accounts of Her Imperial Majesty in Brussels, then Grand Bailiff of Oudenaarde.
He died in Brussels on January 24, 1820. On May 1, 1777, he married Elisabeth-Anne Leighton, widow of M. Joseph Labina, who died in Brussels without offspring. A souvenir is shown in Figure 70.59.
We found a subscription of Jean Baptiste Benedict de Patin at the Catholic University of Leuven in 1745 in Figure 70.66 on page 1476.

70.6.13.3 Léopold Joseph de Patin

Léopold Joseph de Patin (DP12by1y1y2) was born in Brussels. He was a captain in the Wolfenbuttel regiment in the service of His Imperial Majesty in 1762, then became colonel, then deputy mayor of Bruges. He died in Ghent on April 2, 1812, in Figure 70.61.
He married in Ghent on May 3, 1762, in Figure 70.60, to Jeanne Marie Philippine de Heems, who died in Ghent on November 12, 1815, and who was a daughter of Mr Jean-Baptiste de Heems, Bailiff of the city of Ghent, the Lord of Luchteren, Ten Buysere, etc., and Marie Elisabeth de Stappens, his first wife.

70.6.13.3.1 Charles de Patin Charles de Patin (DP12by1y1y2y1) was a lieutenant in service of the Emperor of Austria in the Murray regiment and was killed in the battle near Arlon during the patriotic revolution.

70.6.13.3.2 François de Patin François de Patin (DP12by1y1y2y2) died at Revel and was captain of a Fregate in service of his Imperial Majesty of Russia.

70.6.13.3.3 Reine Anne Marie Colette Félicité de Patin Reine Anne Marie Colette Félicité de Patin (DP12by1y1y2x) was the countess of Zeveren. She was married to Jean-Guillaume Mawhood, an English captain, and they had children.

70.6.13.4 Thérèse Catherine de Patin

Thérèse Catherine de Patin (DP12by1y1x3) died in Ghent on November 6, 1803, in Figure 70.63, without any posterity. She had been married in Ghent on October 9, 1762, to Jean de Magenis, knight of the Royal and Military Order of St-Louis, a valiant captain in the Bulkeby regiment in the service of France, and later a colonel in the service of the Austrians, who died at Lille towards the end of the 1700s.

Le Carpentier in his 'Histoire générale des Pays-Bas ou Histoire de Cambrai ou du Cambrésis, II, 861' describes an interesting episode... He has found a birth certificate at Saint Peter's church in Ghent which reads, 'Joanna-Genoveva f. Nicolai-Garoli La Croix-Le Cocq et Mariae-Genovevae Le Sénéchal conjugum, baptisata est sub conditione 4 januarii 1771, nata heri Vesperi quadrante post Sextam. Susceperunt Franciscus Fayan nomine D Joannis de Magenis, Colonelii in Servitio Regis Gallici, equitis ordinis militaris et regii Sancti Ludovici , et .Joanna Francisca Le Caslez. (Signé) S. Declercq.'

As can be seen in this certificate, it is that of Jeanne-Geneviève La Groix-Le Cocq, daughter of Nicolas-Charles and Marie-Geneviève Le Sénéchal. The latter belongs to the illustrious 'Le Sénéchal de Kerguisé-Kercado' and, according to Le Carpentier, she must be a daughter of Luc-Julien Le Sénéchal de Kerguisé, the Count of Kerguisé, the Lord of Tredudai, and Lieutenant of the Marshals of France, and Alexandrine-Rosalie Bruc de Montplaisir his first wife.

However, according to information the Marquis de Carcado-Molac of Toulouse has conveyed to Le Carpentier, Marie-Géneviève widow Le Senechal, the married couple's daughter, just mentioned, died without having been married. But then, Le Carpentier notes that this is impossible because no death certificate authentically states that Marie-Geneviève Le Sénéchal, daughter of Luc-Julien and Alexandrine-Rosalie de Bruc de Montplaisir, died unmarried. And still, in that case, one must question who would be the daughter of the sister of M. Le Senechal de Kerguis de Tretade, lieutenant of the Marshals of France at Vanne.

Indeed, according to Le Carpentier, a letter emanating from this statesman proves, with more or less certainty, that his consanguineous sister, probably when she was almost at the end of her pregnancy, must have written to her to receive the number of her annuities. The concerned letter is signed 'Your elder brother The Seneschal Kerguis de Tretade, lieutenant of our lords the marshals of France in Vanne, (sic).'

It is dated January 19, 1771, and was written to Marie-Geneviève Le Sénéchal. Le Carpentier believes that it makes sense to assume that Marie-Geneviève Le Sénéchal is very much the daughter of Luc-Julien and Alexandrine-Rosalie of Bruc de Montplaisir. Therefore, Le Carpentier is convinced that it is a mistake or ignorance that the genealogical tables of this illustrious house carry her as 'dead without having allied.'

The death certificate, recorded in the registers of the same church of Saint Peter, proves, moreover, that Marie-Geneviève Le Sénéchal has died as the wife of Nicolas-Charles La Croix-Le Cocq, fifteen days after the birth of the child. Nothing is missing from this act except the filiation, but it is nevertheless almost sure that this act is indeed that of the death of the daughter of Luc-Julien de Kerguise. Indeed, as her age tells, she must have been born in 1739, and it is known that in 1737 Alexandrine-Rosalie de Bruc de Montplaisir married Luc-Julien Le Senechal de Kerguise; therefore, she must have been the eldest child of this marriage.

70.6.13.5 Jeanne de Patin

Jeanne de Patin (DP12by1y1x4) married Charles Marquis de Belcredi and had children.

In Chapter 70.6.13.2, a Jeanne de Patin existed, daughter of Charles Philippe de Patin, godmother in 1726, i.e., 11 years after her father married Thérèse du Bois. This concerns another daughter, Jeanne de Patin, who was from a previous marriage and was not reported in the literature.

70.6.13.6 Joséphine de Patin

On December 1, 1746, Joséphine de Patin (DP12by1y1x6) married, in Milan, Joseph de Somariva, who lived at the Villa de Lodi, close to Milan. They had no children.

70.6.13.7 Marie Louise Bernardine de Patin

Marie Louise Bernardine de Patin (DP12by1y1x5) was married in Ghent on October 23, 1744, in Figure 70.64, to Nicolas de Nobili, Noble Lucuois, senator, advisor of his Imperial Highness at Brussels. He was the son of Count de Nobili and Eléonore Sarde.

They had the following children:

Alexandre-Charles-Marie de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y1), César de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y2), Mgr de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y3), Marie de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5x1), Jean-Baptiste de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y4), Thérèse Sabine Colette de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5x2), Charlotte Jeanne de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5x3), Hypolite Bernard de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y5), Joseph de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y6), Charles Benedict Joseph de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y7).

Nicolas de Nobili was the son of Count Charles de Nobili and his wife, Éléonore Sardi. Because of his ties with the Amsterdam banking house Sardi, the Nobili ended up in the Netherlands.[119]

After marrying the de Patin in 1744, he was naturalized and became Master Counselor of the Court of Auditors. From 1755, he also held the title of Commissioner for the Management of the Lottery.

He was also given a seat on the Council of Finance that same year. However, De Nobili ended his career as a counselor to the Council of State.

70.6.13.7.1 Alexandre Charles Marie de Nobili Alexandre Charles Marie de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y1) was born on August 13, 1745. He was a General and became a Field Marchal of Austria in July 1815.

70.6.13.7.2 César de Nobili César de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y2) was also a General of Austria and was born on July 22, 1746.

70.6.13.7.3 Mr de Nobili Mr. de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y3) was Canonic at Tournai.

70.6.13.7.4 Marie de Nobili Marie de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5x1) married the Prince of Lambertini at Bologna. She became dame d' honneur of Her Majesty the Impress Marie-Louise and often joined her in Italy. She was born in November of 1748.

70.6.13.7.5 Jean Baptiste de Nobili

Jean Baptiste de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y4) was born on November 16, 1749. He was a Captain in the Cuirassiers Regiment of Zurn in service of His Imperial Majesty.

70.6.13.7.6 Thérèse Sabine Colette de Nobili

Thérèse Sabine Colette de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5x2) was born on November 11, 1750.

70.6.13.7.7 Charlotte Jeanne de Nobili

Charlotte Jeanne de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5x3) was born on December 27, 1751, 224 years before the author.

70.6.13.7.8 Hypolite Bernard de Nobili

Hypolite Bernard de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y5) was born on May 28, 1753.

70.6.13.7.9 Joseph de Nobili

Joseph de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y6) was born on October 25, 1756.

70.6.13.7.10 Charles Benedict Joseph de Nobili

Charles-Benedict-Joseph de Nobili (DP12by1y1x5y7) was born on August 27, 1758.

70.6.14 Other Offspring of Charles Philippe de Patin

We could infer from DNA evidence that Charles Philippe de Patin may have had illegitimate offspring in Bohemia, possibly conceived during his stay in Vienna. The evidence concerns DNA, which the author shares with Steven T. Jancarek from Bohemia and the author's cousin's son on his father's side. It concerns 25.9 centiMorgans in common with the author and 14.6 centiMorgans with the author's cousin's son. It possibly concerns the following ancestor of Steven T. Jancarek: Rosina Dedek, born in 1735 to an unknown father.

Other samples from Bohemia with DNA in common with the author, such as Ljuba Filova (14.9 centiMorgans) and Zsuzsanna Klara Bata (14.4 centiMorgans), prove this is not a coincidence. Firm conclusions should, however, be drawn on more than autosomal DNA evidence. If we knew that de Patin had illegitimate offspring, then this would prove it. The opposite reasoning is, however, only sometimes valid. There may be a Spanish connection with those persons through Sephardic roots. We don't know.

François Guillaume de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1) was the Treasurer of the Order of the Golden Fleece, Baron de Coutsy, Lord of Langemarck, Larapernisse, Terbeke, Bixschote, Walermolendam and other places, and feudal heir of his father. He was born in 1724 and died in 1802, and had married in Commines on November 11, 1750, Jeanne-Antoinette-Monique de Grou, Baroness de Coutsy, etc., born in Commines in 1729 and dead on June 18, 1820, in Figure 70.67, aged 91, daughter of Pierre-Antoine-Ferdinand de Grou and Monique-Eugenie Gobert or 'de Garzeken,' daughter of Charles-François Gobert or 'de Garzeken' , counselor to the king at the presidial at Ypres, and Jeanne Delebarie. A souvenir of Jeanne-Antoinette-Monique de Grou is shown in Figure 70.69. He sold, in 1781, to de Predikheeren of Ypres, the castle of Ter Beke in Geluwe. He died in Prague on May 17, 1802. On February 24, 1779, he sold a hotel at 'la rue des Boiteux' to Louis-J. Robyns[120].

François Guillaume de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1) continued the bloodline of the viscounts de Patin. His son, Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yyy), was the last member and died at Langemarck on June 10, 1888, described in Chapter 70.10.

The Langemark castle, a testament to the grandeur and heritage of the de Patin family, was purchased and later renovated by them. In the 19th century, it was known as the Chateau de Langemark or Chateau de Patin de Langemark. Images are shown in Figure 70.70. The castle of Langemark came into the hands of the de Patin family around 1700. François Guillaume de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1) renovated it at the beginning of the nineteenth century and used it as a summer residence. His great-great-grandson Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yyy) renovated it around 1883 based on Joris Helleputte's design. The young viscount was residing in Leuven as a student at the time. He lived in Vaarstraat, in Leuven, from 1880 to 1885. The earliest pre-designs of the castle were made on September 29, 1882.

Despite the untimely demise of Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin De Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yyy), the de Patin family's legacy continued. The castle came into the hands of Charles Marie Victor Joseph Cotteau de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y1), husband of Céline Pauline Gantois and son of Charles Louis Victor Joseph Cotteau (from a family in Cambrai) and Aline Elisabeth Joséphine Antoinette de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2). In 1892, he received permission to add de Patin to his name. His son, Raoul Charles René Ghislain Cotteau de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y1y1), constructed a new castle on the same site in 1926-1927, after the devastation of WWI. The famous reconstruction architects H. Steels and V. Renders designed the new court. After the Second World War, the municipality of Langemarck bought it and established the town hall there.

Two children have resided in the castle of the family Cotteau de Patin - Gantois, namely Marie Louise Caroline Ghislaine Cotteau de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y1x1), described in Chapter 70.8.1.2.2.2, born in Brussels in 1891 and dead in 1946, who married Ferdinand de Theux de Montjardin; and Raoul Charles René Ghislain Cotteau de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y1y1), appearing in Chapter 70.8.1.2.2.1, born in Brussels on March 3, 1877, who never married and died in 1940.

70.7.1 Jean Baptiste Guillaume de Patin

Jean Baptiste Guillaume de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y1) was born in Brussels on October 2, 1753. He has been a major in Murray's regiment in the service of His Imperial Majesty, then lieutenant-colonel of His Majesty the King of the Netherlands, a member of the Equestrian Order, etc.

He married twice. First, he married, at Bioul (Province of Namur) on September 9, 1788, Marie Joséphine Xavière Guislaine de Moreau de Bioul, born in Namur on February 21, 1771, dead in Yvoir (Namur) on March 7, 1827, in Figure 70.73, daughter of Yvoir, le 7 Mars 1821.

Ma chère, ma digne épouse, Marie-Guislaine-Joséphine De Moreau de Bioulx, Vicomteſse De Patin, vient de succomber aux douleurs qu'elle éprouvait depuis longtemps. Le maître de nos jours l'a retirée de ce monde, ce matin, à l'âge de cinquante ans, administrée des Sacremens de Notre Mère la Sainte-Eglise. Ma désolation, la tristeſse de mes enfans égalent l'attachement, l'affection que ses vertus nous avaient inspirés. Nous nous recommandons avec elle aux prières de votre amitié.

Jean-Baptiste Vicomte De Patin.

Mes enfants, vous êtes maintenant dans la tristesse, mais je vous reverrai, votre cœur se réjouira et personne ne vous ravira votre joie. S. JEAN, XVI, 22.

Qui trouvera une femme forte? Elle est plus précieuse que tous les trésors. Le cœur de son mari met sa confiance en elle... Elle a considéré les sentiers de sa maison et elle n'a point mangé son pain dans l'oisiveté... Elle a ouvert sa main à l'indigent et étendu son bras au pauvre... He has been mayor of Langemarck, etc. He deceased on October 19, 1852, in Figures 70.90 and 70.91.

He married at Ypres on August 29, 1798, to Caroline Thérèse Augustine Hynderick, born in Ypres on December 14, 1756, daughter of Pierre-Jean Hynderick, Lord of Theulegoet, and Susanne-Thérèse de Buus.

From this marriage of Joseph Charles de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2) and Caroline Thérèse Augustine Hynderick was born Joseph Charles Jean Antoine de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2y).

70.8.1 Joseph Charles Jean Antoine de Patin

Joseph Charles Jean Antoine de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2y) was born in Ypres on April 12, 1800, and died on October 1, 1834.

He married at Oordeghem on July 29, 1822, in Figures 70.92 and 70.93, to Françoise Marie Joséphine Diericx de Tenham, born in Dusseldorf on June 10, 1795, and who died on November 20, 1852, in Figure 70.95.

Françoise Marie Joséphine Diericx of Tenham was a sister of Auguste Jean Roger Diericx of Tenham (husband of Florence-Aline-Adélaïde de Patin (DP12by1y1y2y1x1)).
From this marriage was born, as shown in Figure 70.94, Caroline de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yx1), Aline Elisabeth Joséphine Antoinette de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2) and Félicie Marie Joséphine Augustine de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yx3).

70.8.1.1 Caroline Josephine Marie de Patin de Langemarck & Jean-Pierre Cassiers

Caroline Josephine Marie de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yx1) was born at Langemarck on June 8, 1823, and married on August 10, 1843, to senator Jean-Pierre Cassiers, born in Antwerp on May 23, 1788, and dead at Houthulst on March 12, 1870. Caroline died on January 5, 1882, at Houthulst.

70.8.1.1.1 Introduction Caroline de Patin, shown in Figure 70.96, was born in Langemark on June 8, 1823, in Figure 70.97, and married on August 10, 1843, to Senator Jean-Pierre Cassiers, born in Antwerp on May 23, 1788, and dead at Houthulst on March 12, 1870. Caroline died on January 5, 1882, in Figure 70.98, at Houthulst.
Caroline de Patin was the daughter of Joseph Charles Jean Antoine de Patin (Ypres, April 12, 1800 – October 1, 1834) and Françoise Marie Joséphine Diericx de Tenham (Dusseldorf, June 10, 1795 – November 20, 1852). She belonged to the last generation of descendants of Charles Philippe de Patin, who were born at the castle of Langemark. Her brother was Joseph Felix Marie Charles François de Patin (Langemark July 25, 1824 – Langemark December 22, 1862), her sisters were Aline Elisabeth Joséphine Antoinette de Patin (Langemark, August 26, 1826) and Félicie Marie Joséphine Augustine de Patin (Langemark, July 9, 1828 – Brugge, 1854).
Caroline's nephew, Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin (Langemark, August 14, 1861 – Langemark June 10, 1888), was a notable figure in his own right. He served as a member of the Provincial Council of West Flanders, an alderman of the municipally of Langemark, and was the last person to bear the name de Patin in the branch residing at Langemark.
Her grandfather was Joseph Charles de Patin (Brussels, July 17, 1757 – Langemark, October 19, 1852), a grandson of Charles Philippe de Patin (Ypres, April 19, 1687 – Ghent, July 17, 1773). Some souvenirs are shown in Figures 70.99 and 70.100.

70.8.1.1.2 Marriage with Jean Pierre Cassiers Caroline de Patin married the nearly 30 years older senator Jean-Pierre Cassiers (Antwerp, May 25, 1788 – Houthulst, March 12, 1870), in Figure 70.101) on August 10, 1843. They built the castle of Houthulst in 1848 in the forest Vrijbos.
Because they had no descendants, the castle (representing 20% of the inheritance of Cassiers-de Patin) was inherited by Raymond de Groote (Roeselare 1827 – Diksmuide 1892). His descendants would continue to live there; one of them, Hubert de Groote, would later play a crucial role in the resistance against the Germans in WWII.
Nowadays, the castle is known as the castle of de Groote. It is located at Houthulst in Eugène De Grootelaan. It was heavily damaged during WWI on September 28, 1918, but was renovated (by architect Vierin) in the 1920s.

70.8.1.1.3 The Houthulst project Jean-Pierre Cassiers and Caroline de Patin are a remarkable couple who transformed the Belgian village of Houthulst from a bare forest into a flourishing community. Before their efforts, the Vrijbos forest, as depicted in Figure 70.102, was home to a few impoverished inhabitants with no municipal infrastructure. Caroline de Patin, placing great importance on education, made it her mission to establish a well-rounded village.
In 1856, after several attempts, Caroline convinced religious sisters from Lendelede to relocate to Houthulst. These sisters, dependent on the hospitality of Cassiers and de Patin, immediately established a lace school. This initiative provided education and allowed the sisters and the village to be self-sustainable by trading lace.

BEATI MORTUI
QUI IN DOMINO MORIUNTUR.

Détachée du créé et orientée vers l'Infini, elle mena dans la solitude une vie toute de perfection.

La délicatesse de son cœur et la finesse de son esprit furent un soutien et une lumière pour les siens.

Patiente et généreuse elle supporta sans défaillances les épreuves de cette vie et distribua sans mesure conseils ou secours.

Sereine et radieuse elle rendit l'âme dans un suprême élan vers son Créateur.

Prière habituelle de la défunte :

Mon Dieu! je désire la fin de cette vie, non pour être délivrée de ma torture, mais pour Vous voir et Vous aimer davantage.

Mon Jésus, miséricorde!

The same year, Jean-Pierre Cassiers and Caroline de Patin built a chapel, laying the foundation for the village's spiritual and communal life. Shortly after, they provided land for the construction of a church. The year 1857 marks the official founding of Houthulst as an authentic village with the commencement of the neo-gothic Church of Saint John the Baptist, completed between 1857 and 1868, shown in Figure 70.102.

By 1865, Caroline de Patin had successfully transformed the Houthulst monastery into an independent entity separate from Lendelede. She provided shelter for orphans and older people, contributing to the village's growing population. By 1868, the lace school had generated enough wealth to eradicate poverty in Houthulst, ensuring every inhabitant owned a home. Caroline also established a farm nearby to support the monastery and the village with food.

After the death of her husband, Caroline continued to invest her time and resources in the education and well-being of Houthulst's children. She constructed Belgium's first Lourdes grotto, shown in Figure 70.102, enhancing the village's spiritual significance.

In 1874, Caroline's dedication to education led to the establishment of the Monastery of Saint Xavier and the Sint-Franciscus-Xaveriusschool. These institutions provided boys in Houthulst with education and weaving skills, significantly contributing to the village's development. She also continued to support the villagers with resources for home improvement, ensuring the village's continued prosperity even after her passing.

Despite the near-destruction of Houthulst during World War I, the resilience of the villagers prevailed, leading to a successful rebuilding in the 1920s. In 1876, Caroline further demonstrated her commitment to religious and communal development by sponsoring the construction of a cloister for the Claris sisters in Nieuwpoort.

The legacy of Jean-Pierre Cassiers and Caroline de Patin is a testament to their remarkable achievements. They built a vibrant, self-sustaining community from scratch, transforming not only the landscape but also the lives of its inhabitants.

70.8.1.1.4 The Castle of Houthulst The castle of Houthulst, better known as Kasteel De Groote, is situated in a remnant of the historic 'free forest' or Vrybosch. Jan-Pieter Cassiers built the original castle in 1848. After his and his wife's death, Caroline de Patin de Langemarck, the court was inherited by Raymond De Groote. As a consequence, it bears his name to this day.// In the final WWI offensive of September 28, 1918, in which a large part of the Belgian army took part, the Bos van Houthulst recapture was considered crucial. The 7th Infantry Division recaptured the forest, but not without significant losses.// Houthulst Castle was severely damaged and was rebuilt in the 1920s. The area had been of military importance to the Germans because of its elevation. The military engagement destroyed three castles in this area during the war.// Images and souvenirs of the castle are shown in Figure 70.86: The Château de Lacapelle-Marival, situated in the Lot department of France's Occitanie region, is a remarkable example of 13th-century medieval architecture. Built by Géraud de Cardaillac, this castle served as a defensive stronghold and a noble residence throughout its history, especially during the Hundred Years' War. Its well-preserved towers, walls, and interior spaces offer a fascinating glimpse into the medieval era for visitors and historians today.

Aline de Patin died in 1875, in Figures 70.110 and 70.111.

70.8.1.2.1 Charles Louis Victor Joseph Cotteau Charles Louis Victor Joseph Cotteau, the husband of Aline Elisabeth Joséphine Antoinette de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2), died at Douai (France) on July 22, 1865, in Figures 70.112 and 70.113, at the age of 65.

70.8.1.2.2 René Charles François Cotteau de Simencourt de Patin René Charles François Cotteau de Simencourt de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y2) died at Houthulst on September 18, 1906, in Figure 70.114, at the age of 57.

Some family souvenirs are shown in Figures 70.116, 70.117, 70.118 and 70.119. He was buried at Père Lachaise in Paris, as seen in Figure 70.115.

70.8.1.2.2.1 Charles Marie Victor Joseph Cotteau de Patin & Céline Pauline Ghislaine Gantois Charles Marie Victor Joseph Cotteau de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y1), shown in Figure 70.120, was born in Douai, in France, on December 16, 1847, in Figure 70.121. He died at his castle at Langemark on July 5, 1895, in Figures 70.123, 70.124 and 70.125. His shield is shown in Figure 70.126. Charles Cotteau de Patin's wife, Celine Pauline Ghislaine Gantois, died in 1927, in Figure 70.127.

Souvenirs of relatives are shown in Figures 70.128, 70.129, 70.130, 70.131 and 70.132. Their son Raoul Charles René Ghislain Cotteau de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y1y1), shown in Figures 70.134, 70.135 and 70.136, was born in Brussels on March 3, 1877, and died in Ypres on March 31, 1940.

Souvenirs of Langemark and its castle are shown in Figures 70.137, 70.138 and 70.139. An impression of the WWI devastations is shown in Figure 70.140.

After WWI, Raoul Charles René Ghislain Cotteau de Patin reconstructed Langemark Castle. He died in 1940, in Figure 70.141.

DE PATIN DE LANGHEMARCK,
DOUAIRIÈRE VAN MIJNHEER JOANNES PETRUS CASSIERS, gewezen Senator,
geboren te LANGHEMARCK den 10 Juni 1823 en overleden op haar Kasteel te HOUTHULST den 5 Januari 1882.

De vreugde van ons hert is verdwenen, onze vreugdezangen zijn in rouwliederen veranderd. De kroon van ons hoofd is gevallen. Wij zijn weezen geworden zonder MOEDER. (THREN. V.) Gij hadt ze ons gegeven voor ons geluk, ô Heer! Gij vraagt ze ons wederom; wij schenken ze U zonder morren, maar het herte gescheurd van droefheid. S. EPHREM.

Ik stond den arme bij, die om hulpe riep, en de wees, die van iedereen verlaten was. De zegen van den noodwendige, dien ik ter hulpe kwam, daalde over mij, en ik troostte het hert van de weduwe. De liefde was mijn kleed en de bermhertigheid mijn dekmantel en het sieraad van mijn hoofd. Ik was de oog van den blinde, en de voet van den kreupele. Ik was de moeder der armen. (JOB XXIX.) Gelukkig de mensch, die waakt over de noodwendigheden van den arme. (PS. XL.) De hand van den behoeftige is de offerblok der aalmoezen, die men aan Jesus-Christus doet... De arme steekt de hand uit, maar 't is God die ontvangt hetgeen men geeft. (S. PET. CHRYS.) O Heer! ik heb de schoonheid van uw huis bemind en de plaats waar uwe Heerlijkheid woont. (PS. XXV.) Ik heb dit huis gebouwd, opdat het U diene tot woonplaats en dat uw troon er zich vestige voor altijd. III REG. VIII.

Gij, o Maria, die mijn hert altijd bemind heeft en mijne tong altijd geloofd heeft, bid voor mij. (S. BONAV.)

Mijn Jesus, bermhertigheid! (100 dagen aflaat.)
Zoet Hert van Maria, wees mijne toevlucht! (300 d. afl.)

La joie de mon cœur est éteinte; mon bonheur est changé en deuil et ma couronne d'épouse m'est tombée de la tête.... Thren. 5.15.

de
MONSIEUR JEAN PIERRE
Cassiers
ANCIEN SÉNATEUR
époux de Dame VICOMTESSE CAROLINE
DE PATIN DE LANGEMARCK

né à Anvers le 25 Mai 1788, pieusement décédé à son château de Houthulst, le 12 Mars 1870.

Epuisé de forces il mourut dans cette heureuse vieillesse, (Gen. XXV. 8.) qui est une couronne d'honneur quand elle se trouve dans la voie de la justice. (Prov. XVI. 31.)

Il a cru de cœur et la justice lui a été attribuée: il a confessé sa foi de bouche, et il y a trouvé son salut. (Rom. X. 10.)

Dieu de mes pères et Seigneur de miséricorde, vous avez tout fait par votre parole. (Sap. IX. 1.) Vous m'avez dit de vous bâtir un temple. (Ibid. ✠ 8.) Je vous ai élevé une maison; (Luc. 7. 5.) j'en ai aimé la beauté; (Ps. XXV. 8.) et j'ai soutenu votre demeure. (Eccli. L. 1.)

Il a compris le besoin du pauvre et de l'indigent, (Ps. XL. 3) et il s'est fait le soutien de l'orphelin. (Ps. IX. 34.) En mourant il a pu dire: J'ai combattu le bon combat; j'ai achevé ma course; j'ai gardé ma foi. Il ne me reste plus qu'à attendre la couronne de justice, que m'accordera le Seigneur, juste juge qu'il est. (2. Tim. IV. 7. 8.)

Mon Jésus, miséricorde! (100 jours d'ind.)
Doux Cœur de Marie, soyez mon salut. (300 jours d'ind.)
Actes de Foi, d'Espérance et de Charité. (7 ans et 7 quar.)

Het bosch van Houthulst.

(Part.) Het jongste Engelsche communiqué meldt, dat onze artillerie het bosch van Houthulst heeft beschoten en er ontploffingen verwekt. Over dat bosch loopen allerlei geruchten in Vlaanderen. Nog niet lang geleden brachten onze vliegeniers dit bosch een bezoek. Zij verwekten er eene danige paniek dat de Duitsche soldaten vol ontzetting tot Gent vluchtten.

Het woud van Houthulst dat een mijl lang en eene halve mijl breed is, was onder Koning Willem I kroondomein. De heer Cassiers, uit Antwerpen, kocht het voor 1 millioen en werd een schatrijk man, senator voor Dixmuide. Hij bouwde er zich een kasteel en eene kerk naar de plannen van den bouwmeester baron Jan Bt. Bethun-d'Ydewalle.

Het kasteel, dat nu gansch verwoest is net als dit van burggraaf de Patin van Langemarck, was nu eigendom van den heer Eugen. De Groote, Van Renynghe, oud-lid der Kamer. De heer De Groote nam dienst als vrijwilliger in het Belgische leger, nevens zijn zoon, en werd in het gevecht bij Melle gewond. Het bosch van Houthulst, heet eigenlijk het „Vrybusch" op zijn West-Vlaamsch. In het begin van de XIXe eeuw was het de schuilplaats van de rooversbende van Baeckelandt, die te Brugge werd onthoofd.

Het Vrybusch licht tusschen Merckem, Clercken, Staden, Poelcapelle en Langemark.

CHARLES LOUIS VICTOR JOSEPH COTTEAU en son vivant Conseiller à la Cour d'Appel de Douai, décédée à Douai le 23 Mai 1875 à l'âge de 48 ans munie des Sacrements de la Sainte Église.

Seigneur j'ai aimé la beauté de votre maison et le tabernacle où habite votre gloire! .... Ps. XXV.

Elle a passé en faisant le bien. .... Act. 10.

Elle a ouvert sa main à l'indigent, elle a étendu ses bras vers le pauvre. .... Prov. 31

Dieu l'a éprouvée par la souffrance et l'a trouvée digne de lui. .... Sap. 3.

Elle vous a demandé la vie, Seigneur, et vous lui avez donné les années éternelles. .... Ps. 20.

Votre miséricorde, ô mon Dieu, m'est plus précieuse que la vie: mes lèvres célébreront à jamais vos louanges. Ps 62

Mes enfants, ne vous écartez pas des enseignements de votre mère: Aimez vous les uns les autres: Le frère qui est aidé par son frère, est comme une cité inexpugnable. .... Prov VI & VIII. St Jean.

Mon Jésus miséricorde.
Doux Cœur de Marie soyez mon salut.

The castle, as it can still be admired today, is shown in Figures 70.142, 70.143, and 70.144. There is not much left in Langemark that reminds the visitor of this beautiful family, except for a statue, also shown in Figure 70.144.

70.8.1.2.2.2 Marie Louise Caroline Ghislaine Cotteau de Patin & Fernand de Theux de Meylandt et Montjardin

Marie Louise Caroline Ghislaine Cotteau de Patin (DP12by1y1y1y2yx2y1x1) was born at Ixelles on November 16, 1881, and died on January 27, 1946, in Figure 70.146. She married Fernand de Theux de Montjardin in 1901, in Figure 70.145. The latter died in 1919, in Figure 70.147. Souvenirs of relatives are shown in Figures 70.148 and 70.149.

70.8.1.3 Félicie Marie Joséphine àugustine de Patin de Langemarck & Edmond du Jardin

Félicie Marie Joséphine Augustine de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yx3) was born at Langemark on July 9, 1828, in Figure 70.150, and married, on May 25, 1852, in Figures 70.152 and 70.153, to Edmond du Jardin.
She died in 1854, Figures 70.154, 70.155 and 70.156. Edmond du Jardin died in 1877, in Figure 70.157. Proof of Félicie's performance at school can be seen in Figure 70.151.

70.9 Joseph Felix Marie Charles François de Patin de Langemarck

He died in 1862, in Figures 70.160, 70.161 and 70.162, and had one son, described in Chapter 70.10, the last person to represent the viscounts de Patin de Langemarck, who died early, namely Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yyy).
Joseph de Patin de Langemarck married Stéphanie de Giey in 1855, in Figure 70.163. Stephanie Marie Josephine de Giey, the wife of Joseph Félix Marie Charles François de Patin de Langemarck, constructed a chapel at Leuven with her son Carlos before 1875. She died in 1880, in Figures 70.164 and 70.165.

70.10 Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin de Langemarck

Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin de Langemarck (DP12by1y1y1y2yyy) was born in 1861, in Figure 70.167, and died in 1888, in Figures 70.169, 70.168, 70.170 and 70.171. A facial comparison is found in Figure 65.88 on page 1328.
The mortuary card of Charles Philippe Jean Marie Joseph de Patin describes him (literally, in Dutch) as 'Zalige gedachtenis van den Edelen Heer Carlos Philippus Joannes Maria Jozef Burggraaf de Patin de Langemarck, … Van kindsbeen af in de vrees des Heeren opgevoed was hij Christen in den echten zin des woords: frank en rechtzinnig Katholijk vurig en verstandig in zijne godsvrucht, onthecht van de aardsche goederen in 't midden der rijkdommen, onuitputbare voorzienigheid van den arme, onderstand van weduwen en weezen. Vol van zachtmoedigheid en goedheid, aangenaam in zijne woorden, onberispelijk van zeden, spraakzaam en vriendelijk met eenieder, wist hij de genegenheid van allen te winnen en niemand sprak van hem een woord kwaad. De dood, gelijk aan de schuit die den reiziger op de anderen oever overzet, heeft hem vervoerd verre van alle bekoringen en lijden, de dood heeft dus niet droevigs ten zij voor ons die zij aan de droefheid der scheiding overlaat. Vaartwel, mijne duurbare bloedverwanten, weent niet gelijk deze die geene hoop hebben, wij zullen elkander wederzien en gij jonge lieden die nauwelijks begint te leven, denkt hoe kort het leven is, en hoe vele slachtoffer van mijnen ouderdom dagelijks door de dood worden weggerukt. Daarom weest bereid want gij weet noch dag noch uur. Zoet hert van Maria, wees mijne zaligheid.' né à Douai le 16 Décembre 1847, enlevé à l'affection de sa famille au château de Langhemarck le 5 Juillet 1895, muni des secours de notre Mère la Ste Eglise.

Dame Céline GANTOIS,

Elevé dès son enfance dans la crainte du Seigneur, il était un chrétien véritable et sincère, aimant Dieu et son Eglise; cœur bon et dévoué, il cherchait à faire le bien. Jer.

Des jours pleins d'épreuves lui sont échus en partage... c'est ainsi que Dieu nous traite en cette vie pour nous épargner dans l'autre. Job

Ma chère Epouse, mettez votre confiance dans le Seigneur qui prend sous sa protection les orphelins et la veuve... Et vous, mes enfants bien aimés, honorez votre mère tous les jours de votre vie... restez fidèles aux traditions de notre famille: Aimez Dieu et son Eglise et observez tous ses commandements.

R. COTTEAU DE PATIN. — Op Zondag 6 Juli werd als burgemeester van Langemarck bij Yper ingehuldigd de Weledele heer R. Cotteau de Patin, eenige mannelijke afstammeling van het edel huis der Burggraven de Patin, waartusschen verschillende burgemeesters waren van Langemarck, nl. de vader en overgrootvader van M. R. Cotteau de Patin, of een belangrijke politieke rol vervulden in ons land, onder andere de Weled. Heer Karel de Patin, heer van Langemarck, Burchschutter, Schaapweide en Nonnelande, die Lid van den Bijzonderen Raad van Keizer Karel VI, — geheime raadsheer van Keizerin Maria-Theresia en Voorzitter van den Raad van Vlaanderen was. Tijdens het feestmaal — waaraan al de politieke katholieke voormannen uit de omschrijvingen Yper en Diksmuide, mitsgaders de bijzonderste ingezetenen der gemeente deel namen, — sprak de nieuwe burgemeester een flinke echt edele Vlaamsche redevoering uit, waarin hij o. m. hulde bracht aan het Vlaamsche volk. Ter gelegenheid der inhuldiging van den Weled. heer H. Cotteau de Patin ging te Langemarck een feeststoet uit, die, nl. voor het geschiedkundig gedeelte, als opvatting, samenstelling, geschiedkundige waarheid en pracht een groote stad waardig was. Wij geven een zicht van de Geschiedkundige groep der St. Janstooneelgilde, voorstellende de blijde terugkomst van Pol van Langemarck na den slag der Gulden Sporen

The procession came from Statiestraat and went past the cemetery to the Market where beautiful tombs stood. The carriage was decorated with all kinds of branches and flowers. An inscription was in the middle, while the corners were decorated with Belgian flags. The members of the Forest Growers Guild (Boskwekersgilde) sat on the wagon. The horses were also dressed. De dood komt als een dief in den nacht. Dat is waar, en iedereen weet dat. En als er een slaande bewijs van gegeven wordt, staat iedereen verslagen en als aan den grond genageld, maar 't is al. Na eenige oogenblikken is die les die God ons geeft om ons goed, vergeten, en zetten we het leven voort zonder ons voor te bereiden tot den dood.

De schielijk verdwenen mensch is niet te oordeelen volgens uiterlijke daden, maar wel volgens zijne inzichten die diep in 't herte liggen en die God alleen kent.

" Gelukkig de dienaar die wakende bevonden wordt... want de dood zal komen als een dief in den nacht. Treed binnen in de vreugde van uwen Heer, in kleine dingen zijt gij getrouw geweest. Ik zal u over groote aanstellen. „

Maria, hemelsche Moeder, mocht ik U voor eeuwig beschouwen als Koningin van alle Heiligen.

Duurbare Familie, vaarwel. — Is ons afscheiden onvoorziens geweest, iets is er dat geen scheiden kent, en dat is onze genegenheid. Dank om uwe liefde, van hierboven zal ik u nog meer beminnen.

INSTRUCTION.

Le 18 du mois dernier, à l'occasion de la proclamation des places du nouvel an, les élèves du pensionnat nouvellement établi à Langemarck, ont déclamé plusieurs beaux morceaux, et représenté une petite pièce dramatique. Le grand nombre de personnes présentes, parmi lesquelles on distinguait les autorités ecclésiastiques et civiles, monsieur le vicomte et madame la vicomtesse de Patin, et tous les notables de la commune, ont pu se convaincre des progrès rapides que les élèves ont faits dans cet établissement. On a été surpris d'entendre prononcer si bien le français par des élèves qui ne l'ont appris que trois mois. Je me fais, par conséquent, un devoir de déclarer que cet établissement est tout à fait digne de la confiance des parens, tant par sa situation, son local convenable, que par l'instruction que l'y donne, et l'ordre et la propreté qui y président.

Les élèves qui se sont le plus fait admirer sont : — MM. Honoré Mulle et Charles Buyck, de Thielt; Jean van Biesbrouck, de Maldeghem, et Germain Bossaert et Hector Bossaert, de Langemarck.

Dans la classe spéciale des jeunes demoiselles, méritent d'être citées, avec distinction, M^lle^ Félicie, vicomtesse de Patin, Octavie Bossaert, de Langemarck, Pauline Lefèvre, de Poelcapelle, Julie Delvoye et Fébronie Mullie, de Langemarck.

Ayez pitié de moi, Seigneur! parce que je suis très-affligé. Mon oeil, mon âme et mes entrailles sont toutes troublées par la crainte et l'inquiétude qui m'accablent, toute ma force s'est affaiblie par l'état malheureux où je suis réduit, et je sens le trouble jusque dans mes os!... Mais j'ai espéré en vous Seigneur! J'ai dit: vous êtes mon Dieu: mon sort est entre vos mains. Répandez sur votre serviteur la lumière de votre visage; sauvez-moi, selon votre miséricorde. Que je ne sois point confondu, Seigneur, parce que je vous ai invoqué!... (Ps. XXX. v. 10, 15, 18)

Prière

Nous vous supplions, Seigneur! venez au secours de votre serviteur, Edmond, que vous avez racheté par votre sang précieux. Ainsi soit-il.

Mon Jésus miséricorde!
Doux Cœur de Marie, soyez mon salut!
Pater. Ave.

Pieusement décédé à son château de Langemarck,

PRÉSIDENT DU CONSEIL DE L'ÉGLISE ET MEMBRE DU CONSEIL COMMUNAL.

Mes jours se sont évanouis comme la fumée, comme une ombre; et je suis fauché et enlevé comme l'herbe des prés (Ps. CI. 4, 12). Que la volonté du Seigneur se fasse.

La loi de la vérité était dans sa bouche, il marchait dans la paix et dans la justice (MALACH. II. 6) : il soutint la maison du Seigneur, tant qu'il vécut (ECCL. L. 1). Sa mort a jeté le deuil dans les populations : elles versent d'abondantes larmes (I. MACH. IX. 20) : il répandait avec libéralité ses biens sur les pauvres (Ps. III. 8), il était leur père (JOB. XXIX. 15). Il était la joie et la consolation des siens; la bonté de son cœur et sa douceur lui avaient concilié l'estime de tous : personne ne disait du mal de lui (JUD. VIII). Sa mémoire est bénie de tous (ECCL. XLV. 1).

Seigneur, donnez à mon fils un cœur vertueux, afin qu'il observe vos commandements et vos préceptes (PARAB. XXIX. 19).

O bon et très-doux Jésus, me voici prosterné à genoux en votre présence : je vous prie et vous conjure avec toute la ferveur de mon âme, de graver dans mon cœur de vifs sentiments de foi, d'espérance et de charité, un vrai repentir de mes péchés et une volonté très-ferme de m'en corriger; tandis qu'avec une vive affection et une grande douleur, je considère en moi-même et que je contemple en esprit vos cinq plaies, ayant devant les yeux ces paroles que disait autrefois de vous le roi-prophète David : Ils ont percé mes mains et mes pieds : ils ont compté tous mes os (Ps. Chapter 71

The Ardan-Rouye-Lammens-Decaestecker Ancestry line

71.1 Introduction

This line consists of farmers and soldiers. Jean François Ardan was a military stationed at Damme in the garrison of de Rysbourgh and later de Morel. He was married to Maria Josephe Rouye. They are ancestors of Eudoxie Romanie Lammens, the author's great-grandmother.
For instance, DNA evidence linking the author to the Lammens family is given in Chapter 73.13.3 on page 1602.

71.2 Jean François Ardan (ARLD01) & Marie Josephe Rouye

71.2.1 Jean François Harden

71.2.1.1 Introduction

Jean François Ardan was a military, stationed at Damme in the garrison of de Rysbourgh and later de Morel, and is the founder of our Ancestry line Ardan-Rouye-Lammens-Decaestecker (ARLD). The family names 'Ardan' and 'Rouye' existed in different forms. We chose the ones prevalent in Burgundy around that time, while it may as well have been 'Harden,' or 'Ardoiun,' and 'Rouye.'
The fortifications of Damme in 1702, around the time when Jean François Ardan resided there, are shown in Figure 71.5 on page 1533.
Jean François Ardan was married to Marie Josephe Rouye. They are the ancestors of Eudoxie Romanie Lammens, the author's great-grandmother.
As often with the military, other acquaintances served as witnesses at baptisms or weddings if their family was not nearby. On such matters, we found a connection with Doña Ana Ximenez ('Domicella Ana Ximenez'), which indicates that the Burgundian regiment was in the presence of the Iberian military.
We may refer to an article by Etienne Rooms[1], which states, 'that, in the second half of the 17th century, the Spanish troops were no longer strictly separated according to their region of origin but were more mixed than during the decades before.'
It also states,
'that after 1659, the big enemy of the Spanish-Habsburg regime in Belgium was no longer The Netherlands but France.'
Ironically, support by the (Northern) Netherlands was necessary to prevent Belgium from becoming French. Spain had been severely weakened compared to the other allies in the defense against France. For instance, the Devolution War and the Treaty of the Pyrenees resulted in the loss of Northern Catalunya. One must also remember the losses of territories in the world. Indeed, during the Dutch War (1672-1678), William of Orange succeeded in keeping the military conflict outside his own country, namely by fighting with the French in Belgium. History tells that Belgium would, from then onwards, become Europe's battlefield: the 9-year war (1689-1697), Waterloo in 1815, the Yser battles between 1914 and 1918, etcetera.
An influential citation Etienne Rooms' article is,
'De Bourgondische eenheden werden niet enkel gelicht in de voormalige Habsburgse bezittingen in Bourgondië en Franche-Comté, doch eveneens in Lotharingen.'
In other words, the Burgundian cohort consisted of men from the actual Burgundy territory and Franche-Comté and Lorraine. After Burgundy had become French in 1678, it is likely that the Burgundian cohort mainly consisted of men from Franche-Comté and Lorraine under the commandment of a person from those territories or another region. More information on the organization of the Spanish army is found in the earlier mentioned works of Van der Essen[2][3], Parker[4] and 'Gonzalez de Leon[5] In the second half of the 17th century, Belgium's total number of troops was significantly reduced (to around 6000 men only) due to Spain's gradual loss of power. Nevertheless, there were still Spanish troops present. In terms of the number of divisions, this was around 30%; in terms of absolute numbers of the military, it was probably 10-20%. One can find this in Parker and Evrard et al.[6], who mention that health care did no longer function correctly due to a lack of money from Madrid.
Before the Spanish regime, health care hardly existed, and it was thanks to the Spanish, the authorities had significantly improved it in the 16th century.
In Damme, Marie Josephe Rouye was godmother to Jean Claude Sangy on June 21, 1696, in Figure 71.3. The father was Pierre Sangy, who was a Burgundian military. The mother was Elisabeth Vandenberghe. The godfather was Jean Claude Peté.

Figure 71.5: The fortifications of Damme in 1702. Damme, a historical city in Flanders near Bruges, was a significant strategic location during the late medieval and early modern periods. Originally a thriving port town in the 13th century, Damme's importance grew due to its proximity to Bruges and its accessibility via the Zwin estuary. By 1702, the fortifications of Damme were well-established, reflecting its role in the Eighty Years' War and the War of the Spanish Succession. The city's defenses included moats, ramparts, and bastions designed to protect against maritime and land-based threats. These fortifications were a testament to the military engineering of the time and played a crucial role in the city's defense. However, by the early 18th century, Damme's prominence had declined due to the silting of the Zwin, leading to a decrease in maritime trade and strategic importance. Despite this, the fortifications remained a notable feature of the city's landscape, symbolizing its rich historical heritage.

Interestingly, Damme was further fortified during the Spanish War of Succession (1703-1713). Still, in 1796, the Duke of Marlborough's troops took the town. Families with foreign roots then likely spread over Flanders. Eighty years later, the ground on which the fortifications had been built was sold by Emperor Joseph II, introduced in Chapter 8.17.3, to the highest bidder.

71.2.2 Marie Josephe Rouye

As shown above, in 1696, Marie Josephe Rouye was the godmother of Jean Claude Sangy, son of Pierre Sangy, a military officer in the Burgundian cohort, and his wife, Elizabeth Vanden Berge. The godfather was Jean Claude Peté.

71.2.3 Marriage and offspring

Jean François Ardan (ARLD01) and Marie Josephe Rouye married at Damme in 1698. On April 20, they had their banns read, while on April 22, they married, in Figure 71.4.
The wedding certificate states that Jean François Ardan ('Joannes Franciscus Hurden') was military in the legion of M. Derysbourgh. The witnesses were Jean Claude Peté and François Rouye, father of the bride Marie Josephe Rouye.

71.3 Charles Caestecker & Joana Francisca Ardan (ARLD02)

71.3.1 Charles Caestecker

We have strong indications that Charles Caestecker was first married to Elisabeth Tabary. She died at Woumen on February 8, 1721, and was born at Handzame on October 2, 1691, the daughter of Petrus Tabary and Joanna Vaneeckhoutte. If so, Charles Caestecker was probably the son of Charles Caestecker's senior.
The documents at Woumen have not survived, apart from a couple of name lists. We can, therefore, not study the early roots of this Caestecker branch.

71.3.2 Jeanne Françoise Ardan (ARLD02)

She was born at Damme in 1699, in Figure 71.6. Her godmother was Doña Ana Ximenez, a Spanish noblewoman. Her godfather was François Rouye.

71.3.3 Marriage and offspring

We have found six children born between 1722 and 1737, including a twin and including Anna Marie Françoise Caestecker (H03). The family name is spelled in the following ways: 'Castecker' and 'Caestecker' on the one hand and 'Horten' on the other.

71.4 Ivo Benedictus Pareyn & Anna Marie Françoise Caestecker (ARLD03)

71.4.1 Ivo Benedictus François Pareyn

On the administrative lists, we found this Ivo also as 'Joan' or 'Yvon,' e.g., 'Yvon Benedictus François Pareyn.' We have not found his birth certificate. He died at Woumen in 1776, in Figure 71.7.
He should not be confused with a certain Ivon Benedictus Parain (junior), born at Woumen on January 23, 1761 (akte 56) as the son of Andreas Parain and Francisca De Wilde. Perhaps our Ivo Benedictus Pareyn was his godfather, though. Access to the original church certificates of this period at Woumen is impossible as they have been destroyed; hence, we must rely on tables where not all the details are given.

71.4.2 Anne Marie Françoise Caestecker (ARLD03)

She was born at Woumen in 1733, in Figure 71.8, as the daughter of Jeanne Françoise Ardan and Charles Caestecker. She died in Merkem on April 5, 1816.

After the death of Ivo Benedictus François Pareyn, Anne Marie Françoise Caestecker remarried Pierre Jacques Hoornaert on April 15, 1777, in Figure 71.9 at Woumen, and she died in Merkem in 1816, in Figure 71.10.

71.4.3 Marriage and Offspring

Ivo Benedictus François Pareyn and Anne Marie Françoise Caestecker married at Woumen in 1763, in Figure 71.11. We found six children born at Woumen, including Charles Benoit Pareyn (H04) (Benedictus Carolus Parain).
The family names are spelled as Parain, Parrein on the one hand, and Caesteker, Caestecker, Castecker, De Caesteecker and De Kaesteker, on the other.

71.5 Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04) & Anne Thérèse Devisschere

71.5.1 Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04)

He was born at Woumen in 1764, in Figure 71.12, as the son of Ivo Benedictus François Pareyn and Anne Marie Françoise Caestecker. Below, we show his appearance on the list of baptisms. The original documents have been destroyed. Based on the list, we can see that he had six siblings and that his parents in this transcription appear as Parain, Parrein, Parein and Caestecker, Castecker, Caesteeker, De Kaesteker, De Caesteecker for their family names and Ivon Benedictus, Ivannes Benedictus, Benedictus Ivo, Ivo Benedictus and Anna Maria, Anna Maria Francisca, Maria Francisca for their first names.
After the death of this wife, our ancestor, Anne Thérèse Devisschere, at Vladslo in 1811, Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04) remarried Anna Theresia Swaels in 1813, in Figures 71.13 and 71.14. Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04) died at Vladslo in 1838, in Figure 71.15.

71.5.2 Anne Thérèse Devisschere

She was born at Vladslo in 1757, in Figure 71.16, and was the daughter of Jean Baptiste Devisschere and Joanna Clara Engelbreght. Before she married Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04), Anne Thérèse Devisschere had been married to Jean Pierre Jacques Marchand in 1778, in Figure 71.17.
Anne Thérèse Devisschere died at Vladslo in 1811, in Figure 71.18.

71.5.3 Marriage and Offspring

Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04) and Anne Thérèse Devisschere married at Vladslo on February 10, 1795, in Figure 71.19.
In Chapter 71.6.2, we show the baptism of our ancestor and daughter of Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04) and Anne Thérèse Devisschere, Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05), born on September 8, 1795. Charles Benoit Pareyn (ARLD04) and Anne Thérèse Devisschere had probably consumed their marriage before their wedding.

The bride's father was Philippe François Swaels, a farmer residing at Vladslo, and her mother was Marie Josephine Lapere, who died in Vladslo on June 1, 1812. The groom's previous partner was Anne Thérèse Devisschere; the bride's previous partner was Henri Faes. (sheet 1)*

71.6 Joseph Leopold Lammens & Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05)

71.6.1 Joseph Leopold Lammens

He was born at Vladslo in 1790, in Figure 71.20.
He was a landed gentry farmer.
He died at Vladslo in 1847, in Figures 71.21 and 71.22.

71.6.2 Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05)

She was born at Vladslo in 1795, in Figure 71.23.
She was a landed gentry farmer.
She died at Vladslo in 1865, in Figure 71.24.

71.6.3 Marriage and Offspring

Joseph Leopold Lammens and Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05) married at Vladslo in 1813, in Figures 71.25, 71.26 and 71.27.
We found 15 births at Vladslo, including Charles Lammens (1814, described in detail in Chapter 71.6.5), Louis Lammens (1819), Clemens Lammens (ARLD06, described in detail in Chapter 71.7), Joseph Lammens (1825), Francis Lammens (1829) and Robert Lammens (1832).
The family names are spelled as Pareyn, Parein, Parin and Parrein, on the one hand, and Lammens on the other.

71.6.4 Relatives

To refer to our archives, it is interesting to mention the marriage at Koekelare, on April 19, 1871, of 44-year-old farmer Rosalia Cattrysse, born at Koekelare on January 5, 1827, with the 51-year-old farmer and widower Louis Lammens, who was born on October 19, 1819, at Vladslo and had earlier been married to Amelie Vanhecke who died on November 13, 1870. The groom's parents were Joseph Leopold Lammens, who died on June 16, 1847, at Vladslo, and Anne Thérèse Parrein, who died on January 26, 1865, at Vladslo. The bride's parents were Pierre Cattrysse, who died at Koekelare on October 7, 1827, and Anne Thérèse Sioen, who died at Koekelare on November 6, 1868. The Lammens family had established bonds with Koekelare earlier. Indeed, the mortuary card in Figure 71.28 is that of Anna Theresia Lammens, a blood relative of the father of Joseph Leopold Lammens through his uncle Pierre Jean Lammens. Anna Theresia Lammens was born at Koekelare on May 9, 1801, and died in Koekelare on January 15, 1872.
Anna Theresia Lammens was married to Joannes Baptiste Denduyver and was a daughter of Jacques Lammens, a farmer at Koekelare, and Isabelle Sys, equally a farmer at Koekelare. Jacques Lammens was a son of Joannes Lammens and Genoveva Degrieck and was born at Koekelare on April 29, 1766; he was a brother of Pierre-Jean Lammens, father of Joseph Leopold Lammens, who was the grandfather of Eudoxie Lammens. So, Anna-Theresia Lammens was the great-grand-aunt of Eudoxie Romanie Lammens. Anna-Theresia was, therefore, also the daughter of a cousin of Joseph Leopold Lammens.

In Figure 71.24, we have mentioned Robert Lammens, son of Joseph Leopold Lammens and Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05). In 1865, he was 31 years old. He was born on February 26, 1832, and his birth registration shows that his father was 43-year-old farmer Joseph Leopold Lammens, born in Vladslo, while 34-year-old Anne Thérèse Pareyn was born in Vladslo. Robert Lammens married Amelie Mergaert at Vladslo on May 3, 1866. Their son Charles Louis Lammens married Emiliana Dekien, daughter of Ferdinand Dekien and Juliana Deruyter, at Vladslo on September 9, 1904. Charles Louis Lammens and Emiliana Dekien had a daughter, Alice Parailde Lammens, who died at the age of 9, at the end of WWI on September 16, 1918, in Figure 71.28, in Brustem, Limburg. Because of Vladslo's location, the inhabitants must have fled the violence and stayed far away from the front.

Francis Lammens, appearing in Figure 71.24, was born on January 2, 1829, at Vladso. His parents were 39-year-old Joseph Lammens and 31-year-old Anne Thérèse Pareyn. He had a son, Auguste, born in Vladslo on August 31, 1852, mentioned in Figure 71.29. The parents of Auguste were 23-year-old Franciscus Lammens, who was born in Vladslo, and 20-year-old Rosalie Devrome, born in Vladslo. Auguste Lammens married Julia Maria Depauw, and they had a son, Arthur, whose obituary card is shown in Figure 71.29. In particular, Arthur Franciscus Lammens was born in Vladslo on May 11, 1881; his parents were 28-year-old Auguste Lammens, born in Vladslo, and 37-year-old Julia Maria Depauw, born in Loppem. Another souvenir is shown in Figure 71.29.

We also mentioned Louis Lammens, born in Vladslo on October 3, 1819. His parents were 21-year-old Joseph Leopold Lammens and Anne Thérèse Pareyn. Louis Lammens married Rosalie Catrysse at Koekelare on April 19, 1871. Rosalie was a farmer born at Koekelare in 1827 as Pierre Catrysse and Anne Thérèse Sioen's daughter, both from Koekelare. She died in 1899, in Figure 71.28.

71.6.5 Charles Lammens, a chasseur à pied with Hendrik Conscience

71.6.5.1 Introduction

Charles Lammens was a son of Joseph Leopold Lammens and Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05) and was a soldier ('chasseur 'a pied') with Hendrik Conscience, a renowned Belgian writer. His relationship to Eudoxie Romanie Lammens is shown in Figure 71.30.

71.6.5.2 Military files

The military database (the list of Belgian officers, in Figure 71.31) contains the following information about him:

'Naam (Name): LAMMENS Charles; Geboortedatum (date of birth): 16/10/1814; Geboorteplaats (place of birth): Vladslo; Eenheid (unit): Chasseurs à pied / Jagers te voet; Type (type of document): Stamboek Troep; Stamboeknummer (studbook number): 126 / 3837.'

We also found his initial military registration in Figure 71.32.

71.6.5.3 Birth

Charles Lammens was born at Vladslo on October 16, 1814, in Figure 71.33.

His father was Joseph Leopold Lammens (24 years old), while his mother was Anne Thérèse Pareyn.

Her sons, who were farmers, reported the death, 31-year-old Robert Lammens and 36-year-old Francis Lammens, both described in Chapter 71.6.4.*

71.6.5.4 He served with Hendrik Conscience in the 2nd Regiment Chasseurs ’a pied, as an officer

Henri Conscience, shown in Figure 71.34, was born in Antwerp on December 3, 1812, and died on September 10, 1883, in Elsene. He is well-known in Belgium for his historical writings and his attempts to teach the Belgians, through his novels, about their history. At seventeen, Henri left his father's house to become a tutor in Antwerp and continue his studies, which were soon turned upside down by the Belgian Revolution 1830. He volunteered as a soldier in the new Belgian army and served in the barracks of Venlo and later Termonde until 1837, having obtained the rank of sergeant-major. He thus found himself among the Flemish of all social classes and closely observed their mental habits. The young man then decided to write in the despised language of the country, an idiom considered then too peasant to be spoken and predominantly written by the French speakers who formed the bourgeoisie in Flanders.

More precisely, Henri Conscience was indeed a military from 1831 until 1837. Just before, he had also participated in the Belgian revolution[7].

As a military man, he was a 'Jager te Voet' or 'Chasseur à Pied' and was with the '2de jagers te voet' unit[8]. During his service, Henri Conscience formed a significant connection with Charles Lammens, my ancestor, who also served in the same unit. This connection highlights the shared experiences and camaraderie between the two and places them together during a pivotal moment in Belgian history.

Conscience's military experience profoundly influenced his writing, particularly his decision to write in Flemish, thus playing a crucial role in the revival of Flemish literature. His novel "The Lion of Flanders" is a testament to his dedication to Flemish culture and history, which he sought to promote and preserve through his literary works.

In the context of this book, it is essential to note that besides Henri Conscience and with him Charles Lammens, we also find, much later, Cyrille Lesage with the '2de jagers te voet,' described in Chapter 64.7.1.

The 2nd Regiment of Chasseurs ’a Pied (Jagers te voet) finds its origins during the Belgian Revolution of 1830 by regrouping several free corps made up of volunteers acquired to the ideals of Belgian independence. Thus, between March and August 1831, the 2nd Brigade of Free Corps formed the Regiment with the successive absorption of the 1st Battalion of Tirailleurs Liégeois and the 2nd Battalion of Tirailleurs Luxembourgeois. Exceptionally for the time, the company had its fanfare. François Humblet (1822-1871), leader of this musical formation between 1855 and 1862, composed the regimental march.

Stationed in 1843 in Tournai, the 2nd Chasseurs moved to Mons in 1890. In the meantime, the Regiment received its flag from King Léopold II on August 10, 1872. The emblem of the free corps of Niellon, one of the volunteer units at the origin of the Regiment, had, however, been kept as a 'regimental flag' until 1865.

During the mobilization of August 1914, the 2nd Chasseurs split and formed, besides the 2nd and 5th Chasseurs ’a Pied and mobilized, a fortress regiment. Like the 1st Chasseurs, the company distinguished itself on the battlefields of the Great War. Four citations (Yser, Eertvelde, Antwerp, Dixmude) are inscribed on the flag and decorated with the Fourragère in the colors of the Order of Leopold. Cyrille Lesage fought in each of these battles. The end of 1918 saw the 2nd Chasseurs occupy Germany until March 1919.

Afterward, they moved to their quarters in Charleroi, in the Trésignies barracks, named after this symbolic hero of the Regiment, equally described in Chapter 64.7.1. In the mid-twenties, the unit was attached to the 5th DI of the 1st Army Corps. The mobilization of 1939 gave birth to the 5th Chasseurs (1st DI), 8th Chasseurs (17th DI), and 11th Chasseurs (5th CRI). The Chasseurs carried out the campaign of May 1940 within the 5th Infantry Division.

71.6.5.5 Their Marriage

Charles Lammens married Caroline Rommelaere on April 27, 1854, in Figures 71.35, 71.36, 71.37, 71.38, 71.39 and 71.40, at Vladslo. Charles Lammens was born at Vladslo on October 15, 1814, while Caroline Rommelaere was born at Beerst on February 2, 1828, but she lived in Vladslo.

TER ZALIGER GEDACHTENIS
VAN
ANNA-THERESIA LAMMENS, geboren te Couckelaere, 9 Mei 1801, en aldaar overleden, 15 Januari 1872,
WEDUWE VAN
Joannes-Baptiste DENDUYVER.

Van jongs af heeft zij den weg der deugd en gerechtigheid bewandeld..... God dienende en biddende dag en nacht... Met vele zorg heeft zij gewaakt over haar huisgezin en haar brood in ledigheid niet geëten... Zij was bemind van God en de menschen... niemand sprak eenig kwaad van haar, want zij vreesde [illegible]
[illegible] Prov. XXXI,
Eccl. XLV. Judith. VIII.

O gij allen die den Hemel begeert te vinden, eert en dient Maria... want Maria komt hare stervende kinders te gemoet en leidt ze tot den Hemel.

BID VOOR DE ZIEL
van
ROSALIA CATRYSSE, huisvrouw van
LOUIS LAMMENS, geboren te Couckelaere en overleden te Beerst, den 5 September 1899,
in den ouderdom van 73 jaren.

Reken nooit op den dag van morgen, want gij weet niet wat den dag van morgen zal medebrengen. (Prov.)

Zij was eenvoudig en recht, vreesde God en week af van het kwaad... de wet der waarheid was in haren mond en de ongerechtigheid was bij haar niet te vinden. (Prov. - Job.)

Gelukkig is deze, die gelijk de overledene, de ure zijner dood altijd voor oogen heeft, (Job.)

Beminde Echtgenoot, dierbare Bloedverwanten en Vrienden weent niet om mijn haastig afsterven, wij zullen weldra elkander wederzien. Toont dat gij mij bemind hebt met voor mijne ziel te bidden.

Zoet Hert van Jesus, wees mijne toevlucht.
Zoet Hert van Maria, wees mijne zaligheid.

Alice-Pharailda Lammens dochter van
Carolus-Ludovicus en Emiliana DEKIEU
Lid van 't Genootschap der H. Kindsheid geboren te Vladsloo den 31 Maart 1907, door den oorlog uit dit dorp verdreven en te Brusthem (Limburg) godvruchtig overleden den 16 September 1918.

Gods wil geschiede! Welken troost, welken vrede gevoelt men niet bij het uitspreken dezer woorden!

God! Hij is de beste der Vaders. Ons geluk is zijn eenigste doel in al wat ons overkomt. Werpen wij ons dus met kinderlijk betrouwen in de armen der aanbiddelijke Voorzienigheid.

De ziekelijkheden zijn kleine kruisjes, ons door O. L. Heer overgezonden: ze verduldig verdragen is een middel tot grooten voortgang in de deugd, tot rijke verdiensten.

Teerbeminde ouders, broeders en zuster, vaartwel en troost u met mij: daarboven zal ik u verwachten en voor u bidden. Daar zullen wij elkander wederzien om nooit meer gescheiden te worden. Toont mij uwe liefde door uwe gebeden.

„Geloofd zij het Goddelijk Hart, waardoor onze zaligheid werd bewerkt; aan Hem eer en glorie in eeuwigheid''. Amen.

Zoet Hart van Maria, wees mijne redding.
Jezus! Maria! Jozef!

De plechtige lijkdienst, gevolgd van de begrafenis, zal plaats hebben te Brusthem, op Woensdag, 21 September, om 8 ure.

† BIDT GOD VOOR DE ZIELERUST VAN
Heer Arthur LAMMENS
Weduwnaar van Vrouw LUDOVICA DEGADT

geboren te Vladslo de 11 mei 1881 en godvruchtig overleden te Koekelare, De Mokker, de 13 juli 1960, gesterkt door al de genademiddelen van onze moeder de H. Kerk.

Ijveraar van de H. Hartebond en lid van alle godvruchtige genootschappen.

De overledene was een rechtschapen man en een diep overtuigd kristen. De wet der waarheid was in zijn mond en ongerechtigheid was op zijn lippen niet te vinden: daarom was hij van iedereen geacht en bemind.

Hij was een godvrezend mens: hij wist dat hij uit de handen van de Schepper kwam en naar Hem terug moest keren. Daarom zocht hij gaarne God in het gebed en zag hij onbevangen de dood tegemoet.

Dat levendig geloof groeide zichtbaar met en in zijn ziekte. Manmoedig verdroeg hij het zware kruis en offerde met geduld en in herhaalde verzuchtingen zijn lijden aan de Heer op.

Hij stierf de dood der rechtvaardigen, beproefd en gelouterd: voor hem een voorteken van de eeuwige uitverkiezing, voor ons een stichtend en aanmoedigend voorbeeld. Hij hield van zijn Hemelmoeder en gaarne bracht hij Haar de hulde van zijn paternoster. — Samen met Haar al biddend en gebeden vragend — wachtte hij de komst van Haar Zoon af.

Dierbare kinderen en kleinkinderen, bewaart zorgvuldig in uw harten dat kristelijk geloof, dat gij van moeder zaliger en van mij hebt meegekregen. — Het blijve uw grootste steun in al uw verdere moeilijkheden. — Hebt dank om uw genegenheid en uw goede zorgen, die gij mij als om strijd gegeven hebt. God zegene en beware U allen en tot een zalig wederzien.

God, wees mij zondaar genadig! (500 d. afl.)

In dankbaarheid voor dit schone leven, bidden wij voor

DE HEER
Achiel, August LAMMENS
weduwnaar van Mevrouw Clara DESEURE echtgenoot van Mevrouw Prudence RYHEUL

Geboren te Beerst op 19 augustus 1907 en godvruchtig overleden te Torhout op 9 maart 1987, gesterkt door de heilige sakramenten der zieken.

Oud-strijder 1940-1945
Lid van beide bonden der gepensioneerden.

Een wijs, rechtschapen man, die ver en bij veel vrienden kende, ging rijp in jaren naar zijn eeuwige thuis.
Van zijn veel diep-menselijke gaven mochten we genieten en we zijn er hem dankbaar voor. Gezond verstand, mild oordeel, schalkse lach en fijne humor. Zo was hij, zo kenden we hem.

Zijn leven was één zorg. Op zijn gemengd-middengroot bedrijf kreeg hij het klaar zijn mooi en groot gezin op te werken, noest, hard en eerlijk. Zijn huis was „gastvrij'', open en aantrekkelijk. Toch bleven hem zorgen en beproevingen niet gespaard. Hij wist dat ieder huis zijn kruis te dragen heeft. Hij aanvaardde het in diep geloof, als overtuigd en trouw kristen wist hij dat kruisen geen straf zijn, doch wegen naar 't licht.

In zijn oudere dag genoot hij met volle teugen van rust en reizen naar verre horizonten. Een kaartje leggen deed hem en anderen deugd. Hij had zijn pensioen verdiend!

De laatste 7 weken waren een opgang naar Kalvarië, één zorg. Voor de lijdende Achiel werd gedaan wat enigszins kon door echtgenote, kinderen en verplegend personeel. Wetenschap en liefde waren „opgebruikt''. Zijn taak was volbracht, zijn werkstuk ingeleverd, beoordeeld en goedgekeurd.

„Dag Prudence, met je gouden hart. Wij alleen beseften hoe diep-gelukkig wij waren. Het mocht nog vele jaren duren. Gods wil weze gezegend''.

„M'n kinderen, blijft haar dankbaar en blijft één met haar en elkaar. Familie en vrienden, een memento a.u.b.''.

Barmhartige God
Gij die alle mensen bemint zoals een Vader dat alleen kan, vergeef hem alles waarin hij klein is geweest, en vergeldt hem honderdvoudig alles waarin hij groot is geweest.
Laat hem delen in de vreugde van Uw Verrijzenis.
Amen.

Figure 71.42: Vladslo, December 26, 1825, was the birth of Clemens Lammens (ARLD06), son of 34-year-old Joseph Lammens and 28-year-old Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05).

The groom's father was Josephus Leopoldus Lammens, who had died on June 16, 1847, at Vladslo. The groom's mother was Anne Thérèse Pareyn, a farmer from Vladslo.
The bride's father was Pieter Jacobus Rommelaere, a roof constructor from Vladslo. The bride's mother was Maria Josepha Harnhout, also from Vladslo.

71.6.5.6 His Death

He died at Vladslo on August 4, 1881, in Figure 71.41, at 66 years, nine months, and 19 days. The death certificate mentions his father's name, Josephus Leopoldus Lammens from Vladslo, his mother's name, Anna Theresia Parreyn from Vladslo, and his wife, Carolina Rommelaere.

71.7 Clemens Lammens (ARLD06) & Natalia Juliana Decaestecker (C02)

71.7.1 Clemens Lammens (ARLD06)

He was the son of Joseph Leopold Lammens and Anne Thérèse Pareyn (ARLD05) and was born at Vladslo in 1825, in Figure 71.42, precisely 150 years and one day before the author's birth. His military register in 1844 is shown in Figure 71.43.
He died in Zonnebeke at 82, in 1907, in Figure 71.44. We know from the death certificate that Clemens Lammens had been married to Barbara Cecilia Depoorter before he married Natalia Juliana Decaestecker.
Indeed, Clemens Lammens married Barbara Cecilia Depoorter on April 2, 1856, in Zonnebeke. She was a farmer and widow, born at Langemark on April 26, 1813. Clemens at that time was 'Dienstbode,' and the certificate indicates that he was born at Vladslo on December 26, 1825, but lived in Klerken ('Clercken').
His parents are listed as Josephus Lammens and Anna Theresia Parein. The bride's parents are listed as Gregorius Franciscus Depoorter and Agatha Cornelia Casier.
The couple had a daughter, Juliana Lammens, at Zonnebeke on January 1, 1858. Barbara Cecilia Depoortere died at Zonnebeke on October 14, 1863.

Their daughter, Juliana, married on April 4, 1875, in Passchendaele, where she lived at that time. The groom was Henricus Desiderius Develter, a farmer at Passchendaele born on March 24, 1849, in Passchendaele. His Parents were Pieter Joannes Develter and Beguia Develter.

71.7.2 Natalia Juliana Decaestecker (C02)

Natalia Juliana Decaestecker (C02) was born at Passchendaele in 1830, in Figure 71.45. She was the daughter of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker (C01) and Coleta Francisca de Brabandere.
She died at Zonnebeke in 1871, in Figure 71.46. Figure 71.47 is the obituary card of Hendrik Descamps, son of farmers Amelia Sophia Decaestecker (born in Passchendaele on November 18, 1824) and Louis Francis Descamps (born in Beselare on July 23, 1814). Amelie Sophia was the daughter of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker (C01) and Francisca Coleta de Brabandere.
The genetic link is shown in Chapter 73.13, on page 1602.

71.7.3.1 Introduction

He was the father of Natalia Juliana Decaestecker. He was in Napoleon's army. He is identified by code (C03) and is related to Eudoxie Romanie Lammens (ARLD07-C03), as shown in Figure 71.48. Having been military in Napoleon's army, he must still have dwelled in the memory of Eudoxie and, therefore, in that of her three sons who would become soldiers during WWI.
Pierre Joseph Decaestecker was born in Passchendaele in 1785, in Figure 71.49.
A few days before the birth of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker, Blanchard and Jeffries crossed the Channel from Dover to Calais in a hydrogen gas balloon. Soon after, the University of Georgia was established in the USA, while Thomas Jefferson replaced Benjamin Franklin as Minister to France for the USA. In the same year, the Dollar was chosen as a currency for the entire USA. The Madras Courier, the first English-language newspaper in India, was published for the first time on October 13. In the same year, Louis XVI of France issued a law that a handkerchief always had to be square, while Napoleon Bonaparte became a French artillery lieutenant. One of the famous Grimm brothers, Jacob Grimm, was born a few days before Pierre Joseph, while French engineer Navier (well known for the Navier-Stokes theorem) was born a few days later. This year, Louis XVII of France was born as well. At the end of the year, we found the birth of Etienne de Gerlache, who would later become Belgium's first Prime Minister.
He was a conscrit of the year 1805, in Figure 71.50 because he was born in 1785. On the first day of frimaire of the year XIV, which means November 20, 1805, he joined the 45e régiment d' infanterie de ligne in its arrangement as from the year X until 1815. He was registered in 'matricules 3601 'a 6600,' ranging from 1er vendémiaire an XIV (September 23 1805) until July 24 1807. In

The dish was exposed above the fireplace in the Declercq-Vangheluwe home in Saint Louis in Deerlijk. The image is more realistic than the heroic paintings of the same period. Indeed, when the Battle of Waterloo began, his health was not fabulous anymore after his stay at Elba and after the 100 days of resurrection. Next is Maréchal Michel Ney (Saarlouis 1769 - Paris 1815). Then, we see Lord Arthur Wellesley, the Duke of Wellington in 1814, by Thomas Lawrence. Consequently, we observe Gebhard Leberecht von Blücher (1742 - 1819) in H.F. Helmolt (ed.): History of the World. New York: Dodd, Mead and Company, 1902. Then, we notice Willem Frederik George Lodewijk (1792-1849), Prins van Oranje Nassau. Finally, the star of the battle is shown, Wellington at Waterloo. He is, by most historians, considered the victor of the fight. Painting by Robert Alexander Hillingford.* 🅮

As seen in his military file, an administrative error was made after the Battle of Waterloo. An administrator wrote that he was 'fusillé' (shot) and that he had 'deserté' (deserted) 'en route le' (on the road on) without further details. He was mistaken for someone else, or perhaps it was standard practice to consider any missing 'French' soldier as 'deserté et fusillé' if he had not returned from the battle of Waterloo. However, we know that Joseph married in 1818, and had he been shot, the author, a descendant, would not have been able to write this story.

Battle of Austerlitz (1805),
Battle of Crewitz and Lubeck (1806),
Battle of Ostrelenka and Friedland (1807),
Battle of Espinosa-de-Los-Monteros (1808),
Battle of Alcantara, Aspern-Essling, Wagram, Talevera-de-la-Reina, and Almonacid (1809), Battle of Barrosa, Fuentes-de-Onoro, and Albuera (1811), Battle of Cadiz (1812),
Battle of Vittoria, Echalar, Nivelle, and Bayonne (1813), Battle Orthez and Toulouse (1814),
Battle of Waterloo (1815).

His military career from 1805 until 1815 was quite extraordinary. From a historical point of view, he has been part of Napoleon's mastery for ten years. He did not join the Russian campaign in 1812, lucky for him, but contributed to all other battles. The last one was a defeat at Waterloo, but given its supereminence, perhaps this was a victory for all and formed one of Europe's historical cornerstones.

71.7.3.2 Battle of Austerlitz

The Battle of Austerlitz, depicted in Figure 71.51, occurred on the 11th Frimaire of the Year XIV of the French Republican Calendar, corresponding to December 2, 1805. This decisive engagement occurred near Austerlitz in the Austrian Empire, now known as Slavkov u Brna in the Czech Republic. The battle is renowned as one of Napoleon Bonaparte's most significant victories. It is often referred to as the 'Battle of the Three Emperors,' involving Napoleon of France, Tsar Alexander I of Russia, and Holy Roman Emperor Francis II of Austria.

Figure 71.69: The Lion of Waterloo is a majestic monument near Waterloo, Belgium, commemorating the Battle of Waterloo and the defeat of Napoleon on June 18, 1815. Constructed between 1820 and 1826 by King William I of the Netherlands, the monument consists of a cast iron lion perched atop an artificial hill, or 'butte,' which stands 40 meters high. The lion, sculpted by Jean-Louis Van Geel, faces France, symbolizing the vigilance and strength of the allied forces that overcame Napoleon. This iconic monument marks where the Prince of Orange was wounded during the battle, a powerful reminder of the historic conflict and its significance in European history.

Following the French army's successful occupation of Vienna on November 13, 1805, Napoleon aggressively pursued the retreating Austrian and Russian forces into Moravia. This maneuver was part of his broader strategic aim to decisively defeat the Third Coalition, which sought to curtail his expanding influence across Europe.

Napoleon's strategic brilliance was evident in his orchestration of a tactical feint. By deliberately withdrawing his troops from the Pratzen Plateau, he lured the Coalition forces into a false sense of security. The plateau, a high ground of significant tactical advantage, was thus occupied by the Austrian and Russian troops. Napoleon's apparent retreat was a calculated maneuver designed to weaken the enemy's defensive posture and provoke an overconfident offensive.

On the morning of December 2, 1805, under the cover of dense fog, the Coalition armies commenced their assault from the Pratzen Plateau, believing they had the upper hand. Unbeknownst to them, Napoleon had meticulously planned his counter-offensive. As the fog lifted, revealing the battlefield in what came to be known as le Soleil d'Austerlitz (the Sun of Austerlitz), the French forces launched a surprise attack to recapture the plateau.

Napoleon's forces, including the renowned 45th Regiment, part of the Hanover Corps, executed a brilliantly coordinated assault. They split the Coalition armies into two isolated segments by seizing the high ground. This decisive action disrupted the enemy's command and control and sowed chaos and disarray among their ranks.

The main tactic employed by Napoleon in the days leading up to the battle was the deliberate exposure of apparent vulnerabilities to the Austrian and Russian commanders. This stratagem was intended to instill a false sense of superiority within the Coalition leadership, encouraging them to commit to an ill-fated offensive. Napoleon's understanding of psychological warfare and his ability to anticipate and manipulate enemy actions were pivotal to the French success at Austerlitz.

The Battle of Austerlitz shows Napoleon's military genius, characterized by his adept use of deception, rapid maneuvering, and precise execution of battlefield tactics. The victory at Austerlitz not only solidified Napoleon's dominance over Europe but also showcased the effectiveness of his innovative approach to warfare, which combined strategic foresight with bold, decisive action.

71.7.3.3 The battles of Crewitz and Lübeck

The Battle of Lübeck, illustrated in Figure 71.52, occurred on November 7, 1806. Lübeck, a significant harbor town in the north of Germany, became the focal point of this crucial engagement between the retreating Prussian forces and the pursuing French army. This battle was a direct consequence of the preceding engagements at Jena and Auerstedt, where the Prussians had suffered a severe defeat at the hands of Napoleon's forces.

The Battle of Jena-Auerstedt fought on October 14, 1806, was a pivotal moment in the War of the Fourth Coalition. Under Napoleon Bonaparte's command, the French army decisively defeated the Prussian forces, leading to a rapid and disorderly retreat of the latter. Under the leadership of Gebhard Leberecht von Blücher and other commanders, the remnants of the Prussian army sought refuge in the fortified town of Lübeck, hoping to regroup and resist the advancing French forces.

Lübeck, situated on the Baltic coast, was a vital commercial and strategic location due to its significant harbor and well-fortified defenses. The town's geographical position offered a potential escape route by sea, making it an attractive refuge for the beleaguered Prussian troops. However, the French army, determined to capitalize on their earlier victory, relentlessly pursued the retreating forces.

On November 7, 1806, the French forces, Marshal Bernadotte and General Soult, led a coordinated assault on Lübeck. Despite being outnumbered and demoralized, the Prussian defenders mounted a fierce resistance. The urban setting of Lübeck, with its narrow streets and fortified structures, provided a challenging battleground for both sides. Utilizing their superior tactics and morale, the French troops gradually overwhelmed the Prussian defenses. Street-by-street fighting ensued, characterized by brutal close-quarters combat. The Prussian attempts to hold strategic points within the town proved futile against the determined French assault.

The fall of Lübeck marked the effective end of organized Prussian resistance in the campaign. The capture of the town resulted in significant casualties for the Prussians, along with the capture of many soldiers and officers, including Blücher himself. This defeat further demoralized the Prussian army and solidified French control over northern Germany.

71.7.3.4 The battles of Ostrelenka and Friedland

The Battle of Ostrołęka, fought on February 16, 1807, was a significant engagement between the French and Russian forces during the War of the Fourth Coalition. The battle took place in what is now modern-day Poland. This confrontation was marked by the strategic prowess of the French forces, which ultimately secured a victory over the Russians.

The War of the Fourth Coalition had seen numerous engagements across Europe, with the French and Russian armies vying for dominance in the eastern territories. Ostrołęka, situated on the Narew River, became a critical location for both sides due to its strategic importance in controlling the surrounding region.

Under Marshal Jean Lannes's command, the French forces engaged the Russian troops in a fierce battle. The French army demonstrated superior tactics and coordination despite the challenging winter conditions. The Russian forces, although resilient, were unable to withstand the determined French assault.

Following the French victory at Ostrołęka, the weather conditions deteriorated rapidly, with temperatures plunging to freezing levels. Both armies were compelled to cease their military activities and seek shelter from the harsh winter. This unexpected weather shift significantly impacted the logistics and operational capabilities of the French and Russian forces, leading to a temporary cessation of hostilities.

The Battle of Friedland, illustrated in Figure 71.53, occurred on June 14, 1807, near Friedland, now known as Pravdinsk, in the Kaliningrad Oblast of Russia. This battle was a crucial engagement between the French army, including the renowned 45th Regiment as part of the First Corps of 'La Grande Armée,' and the Russian forces.

In the lead-up to Friedland, both armies maneuvered for advantage, with the French forces seeking to decisively defeat the Russian military and force a conclusion to the hostilities. The strategic positioning of the French troops under the direct command of Napoleon Bonaparte was a testament to the organizational efficiency and tactical flexibility of 'La Grande Armée.'

The French and Russian forces clashed near the Alle River on the day of the battle. The French troops dispersed, maintaining effective communication and mutual support, and executed a series of coordinated maneuvers that overwhelmed the Russian defenses. The Russian army, unable to withstand the sustained French assault, retreated across the Alle River.

The Battle of Friedland was a definitive demonstration of the French military's organizational prowess. The ability of French units to operate independently while remaining in supportive proximity allowed for rapid response to battlefield developments and mutual reinforcement. This flexibility was a key factor in the French victory, showcasing the effectiveness of Napoleon's military reforms.

Following the Russian retreat, a truce was established between the French and Russian forces. This cessation of hostilities marked a significant turning point in the War of the Fourth Coalition, leading to the eventual signing of the Treaties of Tilsit in July 1807. These treaties redefined the political landscape of Europe and solidified French influence over the continent.

The battles of Ostrołęka and Friedland are notable for their strategic outcomes and the participation of critical military units and individuals. Among them was Eugene Dewanckele (H01), whose involvement in these engagements is detailed in Chapter 65.16.4.2. His experiences provide valuable insights into these historic battles' operational dynamics and human elements.

71.7.3.5 The period 1808-1809

The 45th regiment was part of the first corps of La Grande Armée, Les armées d' Espagne and the 2nd corps of l' armée du Rhin, during this period. The Spanish battles are often referred to as the 'Spanish Napoleonic Wars.'

Besides Pierre Joseph Dewanckele, Eugene Dewanckele (H01), described in Chapter 65.16.4.2, also participated in this period's battles.

The battle of Espinosa de Los Monteros occurred on November 10 and 11, 1808, in the mountains of Cantabria. It was an engagement between French troops and the Army of Galicia. The French won this battle by cutting the left wing of the opposing army in two, which scattered them and forced a retreat up until León.

The Battle of Alcantara took place on May 14, 1809, between the French and the Portuguese. It resulted in a storming of the famous bridge of Alcantara, shown in Figure 71.54, which forced the Portuguese to retreat. This event came after the Portuguese had tried to blast the bridge. The construction was so durable that it withstood the blast and allowed the French to cross quickly.

It's improbable that Pierre Joseph Decaestecker operated on two fronts almost simultaneously. Therefore, we are still determining if he contributed to the Aspern-Essling and Wagram battles. It is known that the French army needed to be more assertive in Austria because most men had been transferred to the Iberian peninsula.

The battle of Aspern-Essling occurred on May 21-22 at Lobau in Vienna on the Donau River. The campaign was a defeat for the French. However, the retreat by the French was so well-done that the army was strong.

Later that summer, the Battle of Wagram occurred on July 5 and 6, 1809. The French won this battle because of extensive preparation, and the numerous reinforcements sent back from the Iberian Peninsula.

Napoleon, who regularly went after the enemy army rather than cities, decided to use his soldiers to occupy Vienna rather than going further after the Austrian army. The prize was too big to lay aside.

Later this year, the French army concentrated again on the Iberian Penisula. The battle of Talavera took place on July 27 and 28, 1809, just outside Talavera de la Reina in Spain, in the Tagus valley. The French stood against a coalition of Spanish and British troops. Both sides played it very well, and as a result, the French were defeated. Still, they could again evacuate their unwounded military efficiently and were not very weakened.

It is fascinating to know that Arthur Wellesley led the British of that day. Because of his victory, he was exalted soon after and became the first Duke of Wellington. It's precisely this 'Wellington' who would be the British adversary of Napoleon at Waterloo in 1815 and would, together with his coalition, defeat the Emperor.

The battle of Almonacid was fought on August 11, 1809, between the Spanish and French armies, which had retreated from Talavera. The French were victorious on that day, thanks to the efforts of the Polish Uhlans (a Polish light cavalry with lances). It shows again how strategic the French army was. They had anticipated an attack by the Spanish and decided to confront the Spanish early in the morning while still preparing. However, the French were too weak to go after the Spanish, which allowed them to escape to Andalusia.

The 45th regiment was part of la Grande Armée and of l' Armée des Pyrénées during that time.

The Battle of Barrosa, sometimes referred to as the Battle of Chiclana, shown in Figure 71.54, or the Battle of Cerro del Puerco, took place on March 5, 1811, and was an attempt by the Spanish and the British to rescue the besieged city of Cadiz. To those unfamiliar with Spain, Cadiz has long been considered the most important harbor in the world because of its protected location and easy access to the rest of the world. The Zero-Meridian has long been Cadiz before it was transferred to Greenwich near London. A modern reader, unfamiliar with the winds, may question the importance of specific locations in the world. However, before the era of motorized ships, routes similar to maritime highways had to be followed to reach the destination successfully. Those routes were season-dependent and were crucial for the successful seafarer. Cadiz, shown in Figure 71.55, was geographically located on the most critical hub of those routes.

The battle, which took place on Playa de la Barrosa in Spain, along the beach near Cadiz, was somewhat indecisive, even though the allies of the Spanish and British defeated two French divisions and captured the Regimental Eagle. The story is very famous in Great Britain. Indeed, Ensign Keogh took the eagle first, but the French quickly killed him; they didn't want to lose their treasure. After seven more attempts, Sergeant Patrick Masterson captured the eagle and shouted, 'Bejabbers, boys, I have the cuckoo!.'

The 87th division that had won the eagle is still called 'The Eagle Catchers.' Since then, the eagle, called 'he Barossa Eagle,' would later be stolen from Chelsea Hospital in 1852.
The author still vividly remembers his train ride from Madrid to Cordoba, Sevilla, and Cadiz to attend a congress as a PhD student. It was a fascinating ride in the hot sun of June. Also, Cadiz, shown in Figure 71.55, was very impressive, given its history and surrounding areas. The train stops the atmosphere in each station and then, finally, Cadiz itself. One can make many journeys, though only a few will leave a deep impression. This journey was one of them. The author, however, did not know at that time that one, probably two, of his ancestors had been there in 1811 in a military campaign.
The Battle of Fuentes de Ońoro took place from 3 to May 5, 1811, and resulted from an attempt by the French army of Portugal to relieve besieged Almeida. The conflict occurred between the army of the Duke of Wellington and the army under André Masséna. The battle had no decisive outcome besides the numerous casualties on both sides. The location was Fuentes de Oñoro in Castile and León in Spain.
The next battle was Albuera, near Badajoz in the Spanish Estremadura. The French lost the battle.
There was the Siege of Cadiz by the French during this period, from February 5, 1810, until August 24, 1812. Cadiz had become the seat of power after the Spanish had lost Sevilla to the French. The Spanish defended Cadiz and later the British and Portuguese. The number of military members responsible for protecting the city was around 2000, but it steadily increased to 10000. The Spanish attempted to relieve the town, first by a landing at Fuengirola (well-known to modern tourists) in 1810 and later at Tarifa (well-known to wind-sports fanatics) in 1811. Even after the battle of Barossa, the Siege was not lifted.
The French finally gave up the Siege when their armed forces were in danger of being cut off from the rest of the French army after the Allies had gained successes at Salamanca, Madrid, and Burgos. The French burst 600 of their guns by overcharging before they left Cadiz. Interestingly, the tactic of besieging and relieving cities, which occurred so often at the border between France and the Spanish Netherlands in the 17th century, was repeated on the Iberian peninsula. Napoleon had read numerous books about military campaigns and tactics before becoming the man as we know him, so he must have read books such as the one written by Carlos Coloma, which is also referred to in chapters about our Spanish ancestors in the 16th and 17th centuries.
After the battle of Salamanca of July 1812 and the ensuing French evacuation of Madrid and occupation by Wellington on August 12, the latter besieged Burgos. Wellington had to end the Siege and pulled back from Madrid by the end of October under the regained pressure of the French army. The British retreated to Portugal to avoid encirclement by the French. The French military on the peninsula at that time was overwhelmingly strong. Nevertheless, it was reduced the following winter to reinforce the rest of the French territories after the disaster of Napoleon in Russia. It significantly weakened the French on the peninsula. On June 23, 1813, the Anglo-Spanish forces won the battle of Vitoria, shown in Figure 71.56, against the French in the Basque Country in Spain.
The battle of the Pyrenees, shown in Figure 71.56, took place from July 25 until August 2, 1813. It consisted of a large-scale French assault on the Allied forces to relieve the besieged cities of Pamplona and San Sebastian. Specific engagements took place at Reconcesvalles, Maya, and Sorauren. The French losses were huge, and the Allies won the battle.

71.7.3.7 The battles of Bayonne, Orthez and Toulouse

On November 10, 1813, a significant battle occurred at the Nivelle River. This engagement followed the successful Siege of San Sebastián by the Allied forces, who sought to press their advantage by attacking the French rear. The battle was part of the Peninsular War, which saw the British, Portuguese, and Spanish forces, under the command of the Duke of Wellington, relentlessly pursuing the retreating French army led by Marshal Soult.
The Nivelle River battle was a critical step in the Allies' campaign to push the French forces out of Spain and into southwestern France. The French defensive lines, constructed to protect their territory, were breached by the Allied forces, demonstrating the weakening French position in the region.
Following the harsh winter of 1813-1814, another notable engagement occurred at Bayonne on April 14, 1814. Unlike typical battles characterized by intense combat, the Battle of Bayonne is often remembered as an unusual fraternization episode between French and Allied troops. This event occurred amid news that Napoleon Bonaparte was about to abdicate, as depicted in Figure 71.57.
The impending abdication of Napoleon had a profound impact on the morale and behavior of the troops. The French soldiers, recognizing the inevitability of their leader's downfall, engaged in friendly interactions with their erstwhile enemies. This rare moment of camaraderie amidst conflict underscores the war-weariness and the desire for peace among the soldiers on both sides.
Meanwhile, another significant battle occurred at Orthez in southern France on February 27, 1814. This engagement saw the Allied forces, again under the Duke of Wellington, clash with the French army commanded by Marshal Soult. The battle was part of the Allies' continued efforts to advance into French territory and force a conclusion to the Peninsular War.
The Battle of Orthez was characterized by intense fighting and strategic maneuvering. Wellington's forces successfully outflanked the French positions, compelling Soult to withdraw. This victory further demonstrated the diminishing defensive capabilities of the French army and bolstered the Allies' advance towards the interior of France.
Just days before the Battle of Bayonne, the conflict at Toulouse occurred on April 10, 1814. This engagement was notable for its contested outcome, with the French and Allied forces claiming victory. The battle occurred as the Allied forces continued their push into French territory, encountering determined resistance from the French troops.

71.7.3.8 The Battle near Waterloo

The Battle of Waterloo is a subject extensively covered in historical literature. Figure 71.58 depicts key figures from this pivotal battle. Following his catastrophic defeat in the Russian campaign, Napoleon Bonaparte was exiled to the island of Elba in 1814. His son was taken from him to be raised under a false name by the Austrian Imperial Court, a personal blow that likely fueled Napoleon's determination to reclaim his throne. This motivation is explored in the vast body of literature on the Battle of Waterloo, with recent scholarly works providing nuanced insights free from the immediate post-battle propaganda that often skewed earlier accounts.
The Battle of Waterloo, fought on June 18, 1815, near the village of Mont-Saint-Jean, was Napoleon's final bid to restore his empire. After he escaped from Elba and returned to France in March 1815, he rapidly reassembled an army. The Seventh Coalition, comprising the United Kingdom, Prussia, the Netherlands, Hanover, Brunswick, and Nassau, mobilized to oppose him. The French forces were led by Napoleon himself, along with his trusted Marshal Michel Ney. The Coalition forces were commanded by the Duke of Wellington (Arthur Wellesley), Gebhard Leberecht von Blücher, and Willem of Orange (Willem II, Prince of Orange).

The Battle of Waterloo was marked by intense combat and strategic maneuvers. Wellington, long fascinated by Napoleon, played a crucial role in the Coalition's victory. He later purchased a property that had belonged to Napoleon, reflecting his complex relationship with his adversary. The battle saw around 50000 casualties out of the 200000 soldiers who participated. Despite national biases, modern historians generally agree that Wellington was indeed the victor of Waterloo, although the contributions of the Dutch and other allied forces were significant.

The French army, restructured after Napoleon's first abdication, was poised for one last offensive. The old 45th Regiment, combined with remnants of the 154th, formed the new 42nd Regiment. Napoleon reverted to the original numbering of regiments and recalled reserve troops to bolster his forces. His strategy focused on defeating Belgium's Dutch, British, and Prussian forces in the "Battle near Mont-St-Jean." The name "Battle of Waterloo" was popularized by Wellington for its ease of pronunciation and memorability. At the same time, the Prussians called it the "Battle of La Belle Alliance," after the inn where Napoleon had his headquarters during the campaign.

A critical moment in the battle was the charge of the British cavalry against the 1st French Corps. During this charge, Sergeant Charles Ewart of the Scots Greys captured the flag and the eagle of the 45th Regiment of French Line. This act earned the 2nd Royal North British Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys) the nickname "Bird Catchers," and the captured eagle is still displayed at the Edinburgh Castle Museum.

After his defeat at Waterloo, Napoleon fled across France to evade capture. He ultimately sought asylum with the British but was not permitted to set foot on British soil. Instead, he was exiled to the remote island of Saint Helena, where he endured a slow, harsh decline under the watch of Hudson Lowe. Napoleon died on May 5, 1821, and was initially buried on the island. In 1840, his remains were exhumed and reinterred in the magnificent Dôme des Invalides in Paris, as shown in Figure 71.59.

The reader is encouraged to explore the extensive literature on the Battle of Waterloo to understand this historic event comprehensively. Recent works offer more balanced perspectives, incorporating information not highlighted immediately after the battle. These sources correct nationalistic exaggerations, such as the overstated role of Wellington by British accounts or the inflated claims of Willem van Oranje Nassau's contributions by Dutch narratives. Additionally, the involvement of Belgian soldiers, often overlooked due to the country's lack of official status at the time, is an area ripe for further research. The enigmatic role of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker, who remained loyal to Napoleon but whose fate post-battle remains unclear, also warrants investigation in Dutch archives.

71.7.3.9 La Médaille de Sainte Hélène

The medal of Sainte Hélène in Figure 71.59, created by Napoléon III, rewarded the soldiers who were still alive in 1857, who had been in combat with Napoleon I during the wars between 1792 and 1815; this included Pierre Joseph Decaestecker, who would die in 1868. This was done per the testament of Napoleon on April 15, 1821.

71.7.3.10 The Parents of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker (C01)

71.7.3.10.1 The Parents, Pierre Joseph Decaestecker Senior and Catherine Rose Develter Pierre Joseph Decaestecker senior was the son of Pierre Jacques Decasestecker, born in Passchendaele, and Maria Theresia Vandenbriele, born in Langemark. He was born in Passchendaele in 1816, in Figure 71.60.

He married Catherine Rose Develter in Passchendaele in 1772 in Figure 71.61.

71.7.3.11 The Death of Petrus Josephus Decaestecker

Pierre Joseph Decaestecker (C01) died in 1868 in Zonnebeke, in Figure 71.62, long after the Napoleon era.

71.7.3.12 His Marriage with Coleta Francisca Debrabander

She was the wife of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker (C01) and was born in Lendelede in 1799, in Figure 71.63.

They married in Passchendaele in 1818, in Figure 71.64.

71.7.3.13 The Uncle of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker (C01)

Bernard Joseph Ignace Decasestecker was the uncle of Pierre Joseph Decaestecker. He has been a student at the Catholic University of Leuven. His inscription can be found on January 17, 1776. His enrollment at the university is shown in Figure 71.68 on page 1555.

71.7.4 Marriage and Offspring

Clemens Lammens (ARLD06) and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker (C02) married at Zonnebeke in 1864, in Figure 71.66, where they would also settle as landed gentry farmers.

Natalia Juliana Decaestecker was the 2nd wife of Clemens Lammens.

71.8 Eudoxie Romanie Lammens (ARLD07-C03) & Emile Theophile Lesage

71.8.1 Eudoxie Romanie Lammens

Eudoxie Romanie Lammens was raised in Zonnebeke, in Figure 71.70, and is the daughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker. She is primarily described in Chapter 64 as Emile Theophile Lesage's wife and the author's great-grandmother.

She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de

Emile Theophile Lesage is the son-in-law of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker and is primarily described in Chapter 64 as the author's great-grandfather.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); in Chapter 66.2 as the great-great-great-grandson of Marie Jeanne Christine Benoit; and in Chapter 68, the 't Kint ancestry line.

71.9 Irma Helena Lesage & Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15)

71.9.1 Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15)

Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq (DC15) is a grandson-in-law of Clemens Lammens and is primarily described in Chapter 45 as a descendant of the Desclergues and grandfather of the author.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the husband of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the husband of Irma Helena Lesage, and as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the husband of Irma Lesage, who was a great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; and Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line.

71.9.2 Irma Helena Lesage

Irma Helena Lesage is the granddaughter of Clemens Lammens and Natalia Juliana Decaestecker. She is primarily described in Chapter 45.2 as the wife of Michel Achiel Renatus Declercq and the author's grandmother.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter of Emile Theophile Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; and Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line.

71.10 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) & Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

71.10.1 Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16)

Maurice Alois Declercq (DC16) is the great-grandson of Clemens Lammens and is primarily described in Chapter 46 as a descendant of the Desclergues and father of the author.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the son of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the son-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 69, as great-grandson-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont.

71.10.2 Nelly Maria Vangheluwe

Nelly Maria Vangheluwe is a great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens and is primarily described in Part X as the daughter of René Vangheluwe and Anna Den Dauw and as the mother of the author.
She is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the daughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12; Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the daughter of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-granddaughter of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author, as his mother.

71.11 Nico Felcien Declercq (DC17) & Shirani O. de Silva

Nico Felicien Declercq (DC17) is this book's author and is Clemens Lammens's great-great-grandson.
He is primarily described in Chapter 47 as a descendant of the Desclergues, and also in Part X.
He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the grandson of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as the great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67,

as the grandson of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; Chapter 69, as the great-great-grandson of Marie Nathalie Surmont; and in Chapter 72, the maternal (mt-DNA) ancestry line of the author.
Furthermore, he is referred to in Part XII as the husband of Shirani Oluphathage de Silva.

71.11.1 Shirani Olupathage de Silva

Shirani Olupathage de Silva is a great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Clemens Lammens. She is first described as the author's wife in Chapter 47.3.
She is equally referred, in much detail, in Part XII, and also in the following chapters: Chapter 64, as the granddaughter-in-law of Irma Helena Lesage; Chapter 65, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Adrienne de Patin (DP12); Chapter 66.1, as great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Barbara Benoit; Chapter 66.2, as the great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Maria Jeanne Christine Benoit; Chapter 67, as the granddaughter-in-law of Anna Den Dauw; Chapter 68, in the 't Kint ancestry line; and Chapter 69 as the great-great-granddaughter-in-law of Marie Nathalie Surmont.

Chapter 72

The Maternal (mt-DNA) Ancestry Line of N F Declercq

72.1 Introduction

The maternal ancestry line is the one through which Mitochondrial DNA is transmitted. From that DNA, we know that this ancestry is Irish. The problem with maternal ancestry is the changing family name generation after generation. Therefore, it is challenging to know precisely which generation came from Ireland. The oldest documents refer to Berlans or Perlans. The family name Berland, with some derivatives, exists in Flanders, too. Family names with close resemblance often merge upon integration, either by the person himself or the local administration. Our Irish origin may be older than the Berland generation we found, although there are indications that it's not. When looking for possible paternal ancestry of Berland on the British isles, one must include the following possibilities, some of which are known to be alternative versions of one another: Byland, Biland, Byrlan, Byre, Birland, Bearland, Barland, Byren, Biren, McByre, McParen, McParlen, Barlen, Baren, Baron, Barone, McParland, McParkland, McParlan, McParlin, McPerlan, Parlan, Perlan, Parlin, Partlin, Partland, Partlan, McPerland, Perland, MacFarlan, and McFarlane. When investigating those names, it's important not to rely on the standard Oxford English pronunciation but also the Scottish, Welsh, and Irish. Indeed, phonetics was most important when dealing with ordinary people, such as regular soldiers and their families.

Indeed, we know that there was an Irish and Scottish military regiment in Flanders until the oldest Berland generation we found, belonging to the Spanish army. They were Catholic and recruited because they belonged to Spanish-held regions or wanted to defend Flanders against the protestants.

In what follows, one must consider the earliest described generations as hypotheses. We have found all documents until now, beginning with the couple Petronilla Berland (McParland) & Gebrielus Depraetere.

72.2 Mitochondrial DNA Analysis

The mtDNA Haplogroup of N. F. Declercq is H1c3, which is a sub-Haplogroup of H1c. Both hardly exist in Belgium and the Netherlands. There are two essential regions where these Haplogroups appear: Germany: 14% of the known H1c and 5% of the known H1c3; The British Isles: 31% of the known H1c and 19% the identified H1c3. We can explain the appearance in Belgium according to 3 possible causes:

-The Anglo-Saxon settlement of Britain around 410 AD: German tribes settles on the British Isles

- Battle of Hastings in 1066 AD and the Norman invasion of the British Isles
- Irish regiments (soldiers with their families) arrived in Flanders as soldiers of the Flemish Army of Spain from 1587 AD onwards.

Other explanations can also be found and would make sense. However, they only represent percentages of less than unity, such as origin in France or Spain, an occasional immigrant in Flanders, etc.

Genetic studies assume that H1c3 appeared between 100 and 1000. The Anglo-Saxon settlements, around 410, fall in that span.

A statistically relevant explanation could be that H1c arrived on the British Isles (England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales) with Anglo-Saxon settlements and then returned to Flanders with Irish regiments in the Spanish army. Before this happened, the sub-Haplogroup H1c3 had already formed and spread in both regions. For one reason or another, H1c3 has spread more widely on the British Isles than in Germany.

If HVR1 and HVR2 are checked for matches, the matches also H1c3 are all Irish or English, Scottish or Welsh, with a slight majority of Irish. More substantial evidence is impossible. Therefore, based on Genetics and based on the fact that we have Flemish genealogical records up until the 1650s, we have good reasons to believe that the maternal ancestry line before 1650 should be found in Ireland and very likely appeared in Flanders due to Irish regiments in the Spanish army between 1587 and 1640.

It makes little sense to list the family names of the appearing matches because they switch from generation to generation since family names are transmitted from father to son or daughter and never from mother to daughter or son. Still, here is the complete list is taken from FamilyTreeDNA®: Daley, Eldridge, Williams, Sharp, Prescott, Meade, Bartol, Arthur, Thompson, Baker, Caperton, Callow, Ballaugh, Sandefur, Boardman, Hynes, Callahan, Molamphy, Devine, Geddie, Terwiske, Madigan, Lloyd Vacca, Askin, Land, Tierney, Lyons, Warren, Trabold, Ray, Sladek, Finch, Coakley, Rubin, Bazzoon, Downey, McIntosh, Rock, Lay, Seagroatt, Graham, Jones, Watkins, Quigley, McLeod, Lay, Love, Caperton, Nigh, Downey, Doherty, Owen, Callow, Davis, Lundy, Morgan, McGrail, Tomlison, Cottey.

72.3 Autosomal DNA analysis

The reader may be interested in reading the beginning of Chapter 73 and Chapter 73.10.3.7 first.

Interestingly, the autosomal DNA of N. F. Declercq, compared to the immense database of GEDmatch®, matches a significant number of times with O' Driscoll and Driscoll from Ireland and several McParland, McFarlan etc.

For instance[1]: Driscoll (9; 9; 7.3; 7.1, 7), O' Driscoll (7.7), McFarlane (8.2; 8.2; 7.5; 7.1), Farlane (7.7), McFarland (11.7).

72.4 Genealogy

It's not a random guess to assume an Irish or Catholic English couple McParland – Driscoll or Barlen – Driscoll had a daughter with the family name McParland or Barlen and is the Belgian maternal ancestor of N. F. Declercq. As a matter of fact, from other genealogists, we learned that at Ostend, a family Beerens-Dryscol lived, who had the following children: Cornelia, born in 1629 (folio 117); Petronella, born in 1631 (folio 132); Theodora, born in 1631 (folio 159). It is possible that Perlan (a form of McParland) or even Parlan, Farlane, Parlane, etcetera became Beerens at Ostend and that the daughter Petronille, when she lived at Ingooigem, used the name Berland as a form of integration.

One generation later, we also found at Klemskerke near Ostend the birth of Cornelius Barlen, son of Philip Barlen and Maria Verbrurgh, on March 28, 1650. The reader can find the folios mentioned above in the alphabetical list of births at Ostend or as preserved baptism certificates at Klemskerke. The actual documents at Ostend can no longer be read because they were destroyed by flooding[2]. Therefore, objective evidence may never be found, and we need to trust DNA in this case. We found no trace of the three mentioned children of Beerens-Driscoll, other than their appearance in the list of baptisms. We also searched name variants, including 'Berland,' and found no further trace except Petronella Berland. It is possible that Margareth Driscoll, mentioned as godmother in 1623 at Harelbeke, was the mother of Petronella McParland / Berland.

We will take what follows as a hypothesis. We researched in a reversed sense; therefore, there is no uncertainty after the earliest generation(s), and everything is perfectly correct. The mitochondrial line, including the uncertain very first generation, is shown in Figure 72.2.

Apart from several online sources on the different forms of McParlane, we can also refer to Patrick Hanks et al.[3]. The name did not exist in Flanders at that time. Therefore, a local spelling is not a surprise at all. As we find elsewhere in this book, Priests were always tempted to interpret what they heard phonetically or associate this with a local name rather than spelling a foreign name they had never heard. In Ireland, name variants of McParland are McParkland, McParlan, McParlin, McPerlan, Parlan, Perlan, Parlin, Partlin, Partland, Partlan, McPerland, Perland, MacFarlan, McFarlane, etc. When the 'Mc' is dropped, more variations exist, as listed in the previous section. Petronilla McParland had three children from 1652 until 1655 with Gabrielus Depraetere at Ingooigem.

Two of them married later at Ingooigem. Because we found no traces of Petronilla McParland after 1655, we assume she must have died shortly after that year. Because her children appear to have settled at Ingooigem, neither her husband, Gabrielus Depraetere, lived longer. He resided at Ingooigem, or the Depraetere family, and raised the children after the parent's death. DNA shows that it is inevitable that her mother was of Irish maternal descent, one way or another.

72.4.1 The Hypothesis of Margareth Driscoll, the Wife of Peter McParland

The hypothesis is that Margareth Driscoll was the wife of Peter McParland and the mother of Petronella. Margareth Driscoll served as godmother at Harelbeke in 1623. The document is shown in Figure 72.1, on page 1564 (and Figure 34.60, on page 545). Therefore she existed.

As mentioned, McParland-Driscoll or Barlen-Driscoll possibly had children at Ostend carrying the name 'Beerens' (on the survived alphabetical list) from 1629-1631. The first name of the husband of Margareth Driscoll is induced by the fact that Peter McParland/Barlen served as godfather to her eldest child, Petrus Depraetere, in 1652, in Figure 72.3, as described below.

It would be logical that Peter McParland was the child's grandfather, although he could also have been an uncle. Therefore, the reader should consider our hypothesis and study further.

72.4.2 Petronilla McParland, the Wife of Gabrielus Depraetere

The first child of this couple is reported in Figure 72.3. The family name McParland is based on the hypothesis in Chapter 72.4.1. We only found the Flemish 'Berland' version of her name as documented and must, therefore, be careful. All the generations after Petronilla, however, until the present, are fully documented and correct.

We assume or consider it possible that Petronilla was born at Ostend in the parish of Saint-Peter / Saint-Paul in 1631 as Petronella Beerens. She was married to Gabrielus Depraetere between 1649 and 1655. She had children between the ages of 21 and 27 and probably died soon after that. As shown in Figure 72.3, it is interesting to observe that Petrus Berland served as godfather to Petrus Depraetere, son of Petronilla McParland, in 1652. On September 5, 1650, in Figure 72.4, at Beveren-Leie (walking distance from Ingooigem), a 'Petrus Beerens,' married Maria Devust, had a child Arnoldus baptized. The godfather was Arnold Lancelot. Petrus Berland may have been Petronilla's father or perhaps an elder brother whose baptism we have not retrieved.

Lancelot's name is known on the British Isles and in France. Therefore, we must not make quick conclusions about the origins of the godfather Arnold Lancelot. Indeed, he may have been Irish or English, but that's not guaranteed.

72.4.3 Maria Depraetere, the Wife of Antonius Isebaert

Maria Depraetere was the daughter of Petronilla McParland and was married to Antonius Isebaert at Ingooigem in 1678, in Figure 72.6. She was born in 1655 in Figure 72.5, at Ingooigem, and died in Anzegem in 1692, in Figure 72.7.

Antonius was born at Ingooigem in 1655, in Figure 72.8. We were unable to find the death of Anthonius Isebaert. When we look at the baptism of Maria Depraetere in 1655 in Figure 72.5, we can see that the priest adjusted the first character of her name. First, it was 'B,' but then he changed it to what may be a 'P.' We compared the first character with anything else we could find written by the same priest (different forms of B, C, L, K, and P) and also compared it with other handwriting. He likely wrote 'Perlans' where his 'P' probably corrected the 'B' he first wrote. Indeed, this Priest's B and L are always more curly (as in 'Jully' and 'Gabrielis' on the same page).

72.4.6 Isabelle Fernandine Vandriesche, the Wife of Pierre Joseph Buysschaert

She was the daughter of Joanna Soete and was married to Pierre Joseph Buysschaert in Anzegem in 1770, in Figure 72.20. Isabelle was born at Anzegem in 1748, in Figure 72.19, and died in 1815, in Figure 72.21.

After Isabelle Fernandine Vandriessche's death, Pierre Joseph Buysschaert married again at Anzegem on July 18, 1824. His bride was Amelie-Francisca Sandrap, born at Anzegem on January 22, 1790. The wedding certificate states that Pierre Joseph was born at Anzegem on February 19, 1773, in Figure 72.22, and that his father was Charles Buysschaert. The latter died on December 16, 1787, while his mother was Judoca Goesaert. His new wife's parents were Antonius Sandrap (who died on September 19, 1807) and Genoveva Houttequit (who died on April 1, 1807).

The groom's father was Jean Houttequiet, and the mother was Isabelle-Clara Vandenberghe. The bride's father was Pierre Buysschaert, and the mother was Isabelle Vandriessche. The witnesses were Antoine Houttequiet and Pieter Coudyser.*

Amelie-Francisca Sandrap died at 55 on July 11, 1844, at Anzegem. Pierre Joseph was still alive then.
Petrus Joseph Buysschaert died in Anzegem in 1845, in Figure 72.23.

72.4.7 Barbara Theresa Buysschaert, the Wife of Pierre Joseph Houttequiet

She was the daughter of Isabelle Fernandine Vandriesche and was married to Petrus Joseph Houttequiet at Ingooigem in 1802, in Figure 72.24. Barbara Theresa was born at Anzegem in 1783, in Figure 72.26, and died at Ingooigem in 1826.
Pierre Joseph Houttequiet was born in Ingooigem in 1769, in Figure 72.28, and died in Ingooigem in 1821, in Figure 72.29. Barbara Thérèse Buysschaert married again in 1821, in Figure 72.25.
Barbara Theresia Buysschaert died at the age of 44, in Figure 72.27, less than two weeks after the birth of her daughter Rosalia Paemelaere (born on February 5, 1826 at Ingooigem). She can also be found in the archives of Kortrijk[4].

72.4.8 Amelie Francisca Houttequiet, theWife of Frederic Verbeke

She was Barbara Theresa Buysschaert's daughter and married Frederic Verbeke at Ingooigem in 1842. DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.
Amelie Francisca was born at Ingooigem in 1811. Frederic Verbeke was born in Waregem in 1817.
The wedding of Amelia Francisca Houttequiet and Frederic Verbeke took place at Ingooigem on June 7, 1842, in Figures 72.30, 72.31, 72.32 and 72.33. Amelia was born on February 16, 1811, in Figure 72.35, at Ingooigem. Frederic was born on March 13, 1817, at Waregem and was a farmer.
The groom's father was Joseph Verbeke, farmer, age 67; the mother was Barbara Theresia Vandekerkhove, who died at Waregem on March 2, 1823. The bride's father was Petrus Joseph Houttequiet, dead at Ingooigem on January 9, 1821, and the mother was Barbara Theresia Buysschaert, dead at Ingooigem on February 13, 1826.
Frederic Verbeke had been married before to Sophie Vanhoutteghem, who died at Waregem on December 21, 1841. Frederic Verbeke was born in Waregem in 1817, in Figure 72.37, and died in Waregem in 1859, in Figure 72.34.
Amelie Francisca Houttequiet died in Ingooigem in 1867, in Figure 72.36.

72.4.9 Sidonie Verbeke, the Wife of Camillus Waelkens

Sidonie was the daughter of Amelie Francisca Houttequiet and was married to Camillus Waelkens at Deerlijk in 1876, in Figures 72.42 and 72.43. She was born in Waregem on October 30, 1853, in Figure 72.38 and died at Vichte on October 20, 1918, in Figure 72.39. Camillus was born in Deerlijk in 1852, in Figure 72.40. Camillus Waelkens died in Vichte on February 17, 1927, in Figure 72.41 (and Figure 67.84 on page 1380) at the age of 74. Sidonie Verbeke died at Vichte on October 20, 1918. She 'died for her country,' as indicated on her death certificate.

We want to warn other genealogists that another Sidonie Verbeke was also born at Waregem in 1853, on June 3. That is the same place and year as our Sidonie Verbeke. Interestingly, she also died in the same year, namely in 1918, on October 17, 3 days before our Sidonie Verbeke died.

Her death was at Saint-Louis in Deerlijk, where the daughter of our Sidonie Verbeke, namely Augusta Emma Waelkens, would live and die.

This is a remarkable coincidence. The other Sidonie Verbeke was married to a Mr. Deknudt, and she equally received recognition from the Belgian government, 'dead for her country.'

According to Derlike[5], she died by a British shell exploded at her doorstep. Our Sidonie probably died of a similar cause. Several obituary cards of 1918 in Deerlijk indicate death by shootings on October 20, 1918, including, for instance, that of Prudentia Galleyn, born in Zedelgem and died at the age of 26 in Deerlijk on October 1918.

72.4.10 Augusta Emma Waelkens, the Wife of Alfred Den Dauw

Augusta Emma was the daughter of Sidonie Verbeke and was married to Alfred Den Dauw at Vichte in 1914. Augusta Emma was born in Deerlijk in 1891, in Figure 72.45, and died at Sint Lodewijk - Deerlijk in 1941, in Figures 72.46 and Figure 67.87 on page 1381. Alftred Den Dauw was born in Otegem in 1892 an died in Deerlijk in 1958.

Most information about this family, and in particular the ancestors of Alfred Den Dauw, can be found in Chapter 67, devoted to the ancestry line Den Dauw.

72.4.11 Anna Den Dauw, the Wife of René Vangheluwe

She was the daughter of Augusta Emma Waelkens and was married to René Vangheluwe in Deerlijk. She was born in Deerlijk in 1924 and died in 1999. Anna Den Dauw is primarily described in Part X as the wife of René Vangheluwe, a descendent of the Desclergues along a maternal line.

Being a 'Den Dauw,' she is also listed in Chapter 67. René Vangheluwe is primarily described in Part X as the son of Zozyma Verhaeghe and Gerard Vangheluwe and as the father of Nelly Maria Vangheluwe. He is equally referred to in the following chapters: Chapter 67, as the husband of Anna Den Dauw, and Chapter 69, as the grandson of Maria Nathalie Surmont.

DNA Analysis of N. F. Declercq

73.1 Introduction

Because le sang est plus épais que l'eau, this chapter's DNA analysis focuses on three critical aspects: the paternal ancestry line corresponding to the Y-DNA, the maternal ancestry line corresponding to mtDNA, and, finally, autosomal DNA analysis. The Y-DNA analysis targets the direct paternal line, providing insights into male ancestors' deep ancestral origins and migration patterns. Y-DNA markers are passed virtually unchanged from father to son, making this analysis a powerful tool for tracing lineage over many generations. Similarly, mtDNA analysis focuses on the maternal line, tracing the matrilineal ancestry.

Mitochondrial DNA, inherited exclusively from the mother, offers a unique perspective on maternal heritage, often revealing connections that span thousands of years.

Autosomal DNA analysis, which examines the 22 non-sex chromosomes, offers a broader perspective on genetic inheritance. Commercial DNA databases, such as those we utilized, proudly offer various accolades, such as the badge we received, as shown in Figure 73.1, or diplomas depicted in Figures 73.3, 73.4, and 73.7. Autosomal DNA is often called the genetic soup linked to all our relatives on the ancestry tree. While it does not provide specific information about individual family lines, it reveals the distribution of populations from which we descend and identifies individuals across existing databases with whom we share DNA, indicating at least one common ancestor.

The higher the autosomal DNA match, the more recent the common ancestor, enabling us to estimate the generational distance between ourselves and our genetic relatives. This method has illuminated numerous links to Spain and, to a lesser extent, Brittany in France. This geographic distribution aligns with historical records of our lineage, notably Du Guesclin, from whom we descend. Du Guesclin resided in Brittany before the bloodline settled in Montblanc, Spain, as Desclergues.

In subsequent sections, our autosomal DNA is rigorously analyzed across several databases. These analyses demonstrate our ancestors' genetic links and migration patterns, corroborating historical documentation and oral histories. The extensive connections to Spain are particularly significant, suggesting a robust genetic and cultural heritage that has persisted through centuries. Moreover, the lesser yet notable links to Brittany underscore the migratory paths and regional interactions that have shaped our family history. Through this comprehensive DNA analysis, we gain a clearer understanding of our ancestral origins.

73.2 Y-DNA and mt-DNA

In the documents in Figures 73.1, 73.2, 73.3, and 73.4, one can find two shreds of evidence of our Haplogroup. We also have our Y-STR values (111), shown in Figure 73.5.

We have investigated links through our Y-STR values, and one exciting result can be found in Figure 73.6, obtained from old data on Y-Full®.

We have checked for samples with the same first 17 Y-STR values and found perfect matches in the Catalonia area. However, more than seventeen values are required to determine an associated Y-Haplogroup based on probabilistic analysis, certainly in the R1B Celtic Haplogroup.

Therefore, it is unsurprising that some matches are SRY2627 (like ours), but others are different (P312, U152, L21, U152). It shows that Y-STR alone is not enough to find one's Haplogroup.

Therefore, a more thorough, specific Haplogroup analysis must be performed, which we did. Interesting is that those matches exist in Catalonia. The map in Figure 73.6 was our first clue during this research, apart from genealogy, that we had ancestors in that region, and this clue came before we knew with certainty what our Haplogroup was.

In FamilyTreeDNA®, 31 entries in the database correspond to the mtDNA Haplogroup H1c3. We have checked their origins based on the family names that appear. Thirteen are from the British Isles without Ireland. Thirteen are Irish. This means that only five of them are not from the British Isles. The 13 names we identified as British but less probably Irish are Callow, Sandefur/Boardman, Prescott, Arthur, Baker/Caperton, Askin, Land, Lay, Ray, Adams/Williams, Hynn, McLeod, and Finch. We identified the 13 names as Irish: Callahan, Molamphy, Devine, Geddie, Tierney, Warren, Keefe, Quigley, Hynes, Meade, Thompson, Madigan and Daley.

The other entries, which we assumed have no known links to the British Isles, just based on the name, are Krissansen, Bartol, Vacca, Sladek, Trabold/Marinelli.

The old saying goes: 'All the proofe of a pudding, is in the eating.'[1]

One can make an as impressive as imaginable ancestry tree, but without DNA proof, it means nothing.... The author had his DNA tested after discovering genealogical evidence that his ancestors were Spanish. The scientific results confirmed this conclusion. The evidence is so strong that even without genealogy, it is clear that we have a Catalan origin. As Nikola Tesla once said, "If you do not know how to observe the natural phenomena, they will give you clear answers and inspiration." In our case, the inspiration came from genealogy. Genealogy is most rewarded when the historical records match DNA analysis.

Indeed, Declercq's Haplogroup and specific Y-STR profile are Celtic, and the typical pattern in North-Eastern Spain, just south of the Pyrenees, is even checked. His Haplogroup is SRY2627; more precisely, and on the genetic tree of humans: M173 - M343(=R1b) - L754 - L389 - M297 - M269 - L23 - L51 - L151 - P312 - DF27 - Z195 - Z198 - ZS312 - Z267 - SRY2627(=RM-167) - Z202 - R-BY3266 - R-BY3265 - R-BY50905 (with FGC46150+, FGC46152+, FGC82414+, FGC64911+, FGC82428+, FGC82439+, FGC46173+). The earliest roots can be found 3000 years ago, based on what is generally accepted, in the Valle de Aran in the Spanish Pyrenees, where the Haplogroup appears with its highest concentration.

The Haplogroup SRY2627 is typical for Catalonia. However, over the centuries, it has spread over Spain and also other regions in Europe. Therefore, it is essential to look at the refined sub-Haplogroups, the most minor refinement being the FGC46150 Haplogroup characteristic and the Y-STR values compared to others who are of the same SRY2627 Haplogroup. As more samples will become available, an even more refined determination will be possible.

Before continuing, however, we may also repeat that N. F. Declercq has an mtDNA Haplogroup H1c3, which means that his maternal line is located on the British Isles, most likely in Ireland.

His autosomal DNA exhibits genes found chiefly East and West of the North Sea, appearing in Spain, Portugal, the Azores, Malta, Sicily, and Brittany in France.

Figure 73.8 shows a population map with analysis. A detailed analysis is performed further for every region and name of interest. Of particular importance is the presence of shared genes with the Scottish family Patton, as in Figure 73.10, which may be genetic evidence of Declercqs relationship to the 'de Patin' family and proof that this family descends from Normans of which individual branches crossed the Channel to the British Isles after the Battle of Hastings in 1066. Indeed, this is what the Patton clan claims, based on records. Specific genetic evidence of de Patin ancestry is, for instance, found in Chapter 73.8.

Moreover, when we examine the human Haplotree more closely, we find BY3266 (with no further mutations) nowadays only in two places in the world in the existing databases: a village south of Valladolid (Crown of Castile) and in the Kingdom of Murcia, in a town just south of Alicante (the Crown of Castile, close to the border with the Crown of Aragon), in Spain.

Olalde et al.[2] have placed our ancestral DNA in a historical context. Around 4500 years ago, all original Iberian DNA was replaced by DNA from new invaders, including people arriving from the Pyrenees. In particular, there is a sample mentioned, called 'esp005.SG,' labeled as 'C-IberiaCA-Stp,' with Y-DNA Haplogroup R1b1a1a2a1a2a (= DF27) and, more specifically, a subgroup R1b1a1a2a1a2a5 (=R-Z225). Our DNA SRY2627 is also a subgroup of DF27 and has split off the D27 much later than the Z225 branch. Nevertheless, the sample from which the DNA was extracted is a tooth of a skeleton that was carbon-dated at 1400 BC and was discovered in Cueva de Los Lagos, Aguilar de Alhama, La Rioja, in Spain. It agrees with other works published in the literature and confirms that SRY2627 originated in Spain as a side branch, did not develop elsewhere, and then moved into Iberia.

Before continuing, a crucial fact, based on several platforms that tested our DNA, is that we have never found any match with persons carrying the name Declercq (in any of its formats). It is evidence that our Declercq ancestors are not representative of the many Declercq tribes in Belgium or anywhere else. As extensively studied in this book, the family originated in Northern Spain and

73.3 Nearest Y-DNA Haplogroup Matches

As described further in Chapter 19.27.1 and more specifically in Chapter 19.27.3, a Du Guesclin has the same Y-DNA Haplogroup as the author. Furthermore, on the human Y-DNA-Haplotree, the person in the global database closest related to the author is 'de Sierra,' a man from Guatemala with paternal roots in Spain. His sample number in FamilyTreeDNA® is 35928, and his Haplogroup is R-FGC82423, a sub-Haplogroup of the author's R-FGC46150.

Only some people in the DNA database have entirely determined the Y-DNA Haplogroup. Persons who tested positive for the R-M269 Haplogroup may be R-FGC46150 or between. Interestingly, the Y-STR values can be checked for those persons and compared with the author's Y-DNA to reasonably estimate how far they may be genetically related patrilineally.

FamilyTreeDNA®has Mr. Robichon, with old roots in Brittany as R-M269, tested for 37 Y-STR markers and a distance of 2 with the author. We similarly find Aguirre from Spain. Another one from Spain, Chavez, tested for 67 markers, two steps away from the author, while Castillo tested for 111 markers, one step away from the author. Finally, Torres Martinez (with patrilineal forefather Cantero Quero from Lopera near Jaen and Cordoba) tried 700 markers with a 2-step distance from the author.

Then, in Portugal, we found Garcia, who tested for 700 markers two steps away from the author, and Silveira and Leal, who tested for 37 markers, respectively, two and one step away.

Finally, in Mexico, we find again a Castillo who tested 111 markers and is two steps away from the author.

To conclude, the R-M269 investigations expose potential candidates with a common forefather in Brittany, Spain, or both.[3]

A more extensive investigation is provided in Chapter 73.6.

73.4 DNA and Family Names in Catalonia, with Strong Evidence of Tarragona as the Ancient Origin

In this context, it is worthwhile referring to a scientific paper on Catalan family names concerning DNA analysis by Solé-Morata et al.[4]. The paper aims to investigate genetic differences in paternal DNA for people with the same family names.

Having the same family name does not always mean that the name originates from the same forefather. Such investigations can determine clusters of genetically related families with the same family name.

Desclergue does not appear on the list because nobody in modern Spain descends from the old Desclergue family or families. It is unfortunate.

Nevertheless, one can extract some interesting facts. The paper lists samples with Y-Haplogroup and 17 Y-STR values[5]. When we select only the SRY2627 Haplogroup samples from the entire list, we find around 300 entries. None of those samples have the same Y-STR values as ours. However, four samples differ only in 1 Y-STR value with a value difference of only 1. Having the same Y-Haplogroup and having 16/17 Y-STR values in common is a safe condition to state that those four people most probably have a common forefather in recent history, i.e., 500 - 1500 years ago.

More specifically, the samples are of people having the following family names: 'Sabater' from Girona, 'Ferrer' from Barcelona, 'Ferrer' from the province of Tarragona, and 'Taberner' from Alicante. Those family names likely originate from the Roman period in Tarragona and represent professions. Indeed, Hispania Tarraconensis and later Hispania were Roman from around 27 BC until the 5th century AD, and the Visigoths took over after 476 AD and established/confirmed a nobility's societal structure. Before, the area had been Greek. Around 713, Tarragona was captured by the Muslims.

As indicated in the cited article in the European Journal of Human Genetics, the Desclergues of Montblanc have nobility roots in the Visigoth period. However, they were not genetically Visigothic but Celtic from the Eastern Pyrenees. Concerning the Du Guesclin bloodline, who are ancestors of the Desclergues of Montblanc, it is therefore plausible that they ultimately descended from Spanish nobility during the Visigoth period in the North-East of Spain and arrived in Brittany as in the myth concerning their origins during the Frankish period.

The story is described in Part VI. Note that our Ferrer ancestry is described in Chapter 26.0.2 on page 291.

73.5 Genetic Connection with the Counts of Barcelona and the Royal House of Aragon

On Geneanet®, there is a 7.1 centiMorgan DNA link found between Declercq and Krister Eriksson Gallon from Denmark. This person is a descendant of Ramon Berenguer IV (1113-1162), count of Barcelona, and shown in Figure 19.48 on page 211. The latter married Petronila II, queen regnant of Aragon (1136-1174), and had a daughter, Dulcia Aldonza Aragon (1159-1198). The count's parents were Ramon Berenguer III of Barcelona (1080-1131) and Douce I of Gévaudaun of Provence (1095-1190), who married in Huesca in Aragon in 1137.

Dulcia Aldonza Aragon (1159-1198) married Sancho I Martino of Portugal (1154-1212), and they had Berengaria of Portugal (1194-1221) as a daughter. The latter married Valdemar II Sejr Valdemarsson (1170-1241) from Denmark. It is through their descendants that Krister Eriksson Gallon, with whom we share DNA, stems.
This is further outlined in Chapter 19.27.2 on page 211. Other indications can be found in Chapter 27.2 on page 301.
More Genetic links are described in Chapter 74.12.3 on page 1618.

73.6 Y-STR within R-M269 (FamilyTreeDNA®) - The Spanish Connection

The following persons, registered with FamilyTreeDNA®), have an unspecified Y-DNA sub-Haplogroup within R-M269. The Haplogroup of the Desclergues is a sub-Haplogroup of R-M269, and, therefore, this investigation may reveal potential candidates for our Haplogroup, should they undergo a complete analysis. The names are listed as they appear in FamilyTreeDNA®). Based on the given genetic distance, while only considering the tested Y-STR values, the listed persons may have a patrilineal ancestor in common with us in the 16th century AD. We also refer to Chapter 73.3 for the most prominent samples.

Figure 73.9: Juan Ponce de Leon, with whose descendants we share DNA, lived from 1474 until 1521. He was born in Valladolid, Santervás de Campos in Spain, and died in Habana, Cuba. He is buried in San Juan, Puerto Rico. He is not our ancestor, but some of his descendants must have married our ancestors' blood relatives, hence the DNA match. Ponce de Leon has been the governor of Puerto Rico, with interruptions, from 1508 until 1519. He joined Christopher Columbus' second voyage in the New World in 1493. In 1513, he found La Florida, named after Pascua Florida, the flowered Easter season in Spanish, the season of their arrival. His ships discovered the Gulf Stream, which the Spanish later used as a fast return route to Iberia. The picture shown here was taken in Florida, at the Orlando airport in 2006. One of the most well-known places in modern-day Florida is Cape Canaveral. During one of our visits, we received this picture in 2009, which is shown right. NASA's Spaceshuttle program lasted from 1972 until 2011, with the first flight in 1977. The author remembers the Challenger accident in 1986 very well because he watched it live, or pre-recorded, in school in Deerlijk. In the middle is a picture of the author's two eldest children, taken at Kennedy Space Center in 2009. (Declercq de Silva Archive)

73.6.6 R Haplogroup Samples

In the database collected by FTDNA of people in the R-Haplogroup, the closest R-M269 participants with not yet further refined Haplogroup information, are Bonifacio Mendez from Paraguay (IN53516), Hernaán Martin Serrano from Spain (957841), Manuel Ventura from Honduras (MK52954) and two Spanish adoptions, samples (609304 and IN73049).

73.7 Autosomal DNA (FamilyTreeDNA®) - The Spanish connection

In FamilyTreeDNA®, autosomal DNA comparisons with persons who have a match statistically equivalent to around a 5th cousin or eight generations back in time or closer, carrying the following family names, showed significant overlap (database consulted December 2018-2023):

Sarante / Ruvolo (ancestry links in Sicily and Catalonia) (59 centiMorgans, 18122 matching SNPs),

Pajor (with maternal ancestors from Spain, namely Gil from Quero-Toledo, Garcia from La Calahorra-Granada, Moreno from La Calahorra-Granada, Hernández from Granada and Ortiz-Villajos from Quero-Toledo) (55 centiMorgans, 16977 matching SNPs), Del Rey (the United States with Spanish roots) (55 centiMorgans, 16524 matching SNPs),

Barra (52 centiMorgans, 17559 matching SNPs),

Martin (Spain and France) (51 centiMorgans, 12637 matching SNPs),

Carvalho/Carvallo (probable origins Portugal, Spain or Italy) (49 centiMorgans, 11900 matching SNPs), Pedrosa / Petrusa (Northern Spain and Lombardy) (48 centiMorgans, 11463 matching SNPs), Saenz (46 centiMorgans, 14975 matching SNPs),

Dinan (Bretagne, maybe a link through Du Guesclin) (46 centiMorgans, 14379 matching SNPs), Mirtyl Bigot, who has a Spanish grandfather, Manuel Casanova de Alozza. Manuel's parents are Manuel Noel Muiguillion and Guadalupe Antonia Casanova Y lazaso de Alcaine. Guadalupe's parents are Jorge Casanova y Royo Casanova y Royo and Alexia Lazaso y Alquezar de Alloza. Importantly, Alcaine and Alloza are places near Teruel not very far from Montblanc. Manuel Noel Muiguillion's parents are Jose Noel y Valozes and mrs Muiguillon y Carpanan. The family Carpanan is from the region between Tarragona and Zaragoza (14 centiMorgans), Esther Woods, with ancestors Dominguez, Torres, Lopez, Leavitt, Ortega, Aragon, Gallegos, Baca, Chavez, and Sandoval Y Ortega (11 centiMorgans), Bailey Oland, with ancestors Moreno, Delgado Rivera, Sanchez, Ramos, Gonzalez, Manrique, Cervera, Garcia, Ibarra, Gazca, Carpio, Gerrero, Hernandez, and Guerra (11 centiMorgans), Martinez (10 centiMorgans),

Barros (9 centiMorgans),
Gordon with grandparents Baca and Garcia from Spain (8 centiMorgans).

Many Spanish DNA matches appear at a relatively high relationship level, i.e., 4th cousin and 5th cousin in the user-friendly FamilyTreeDNA® system, which is meaningful. Technical literature on this matter tells that one may expect 6 to 20 centiMorgans in common with a fifth through the eighth cousin.

Because we find many values in the range that is double that high (20-50), and because of the cumulative nature of centiMorgans, a reasonable explanation is that we descend through 2 lines, originating at the 8th cousin level (10 generations before the author), which are combined in the author, through his mother and father. If so, then this is a limited form of endogamy.

Indeed, the common ancestors through two lines are Antoni Declerque (DC07) and Martina De la Cruz. The two lines are the author's paternal line and the line through the De Vos family, both clearly described and documented in Chapter 22 onwards and Part X.

The autosomal DNA matches also show that Antoni Declerque (DC07) and Martina De la Cruz were of Spanish descent. Most appearing names point at the Crown of Aragon (The Kingdom of Aragon and the Principality of Catalonia), with some Castile and Leon hits. Knowing where the Desclergues came from and, as extensively documented in this book, knowing that the family circle and acquaintances in the 17th century were all linked to the Spanish army and the Spanish administration in Belgium, in particular in Flanders, makes perfect sense.

73.8 Autosomal DNA (FamilyTreeDNA®) - The North Sea basin and the Flemish connection

Of specific interest to our ancestry tree are persons who have names or immediate ancestors with names that appear in our ancestry tree and have a match that is statistically equivalent to around a 5th cousin or eight generations back in time or closer. The ones found in December 2018-2021 on FamilyTreeDNA® are listed below:

de Nieulant, Douchy (42 centiMorgans, 12600 matching SNPs),
De Seyn / Seyns (42 centiMorgans, 11743 matching SNPs), Pattinson (Patton) (38 centiMorgans, 10955 matching SNPs),
Patton (individual 1) (49 centiMorgans, 8345 matching SNPs),
Lombaerde (49 centiMorgans, 13874 matching SNPs),
Dael (48 centiMorgans, 8963 matching SNPs),
Demere, Debruyne (38 centiMorgans, 9079 matching SNPs),
Ulrich (with ancestors Claeys, de Meulenaere , de Pierpont, De Vos, Hynderick , Meyer, Rivière, Verlinden) (38 centiMorgans, 13277 matching SNPs),
Patterson (Patton) (individual 1) (36 centiMorgans, 8924 matching SNPs),
Allen (British, originates, just like Patton, from the battle of Hastings) (36 centiMorgans, 12392 matching SNPs), Calmeyn (37 centiMorgans, 7090 matching SNPs),
Brons (with ancestors Alende, De Vos, de Poorter, de Vinck, De Vos, Loncke, Lammens, Maes, Taja/Tack, Van Driesche, Van Daele, Van Hille, Vanderhaeghen, Verbeke, Vereecke.) (36 centiMorgans, 14800 matching SNPs), Lapeyre (with ancestors Benoit, Cassiers, Lecluyse, Verschaeve, Vermeersch, Depraetere) (34 centiMorgans, 11800 matching SNPs),
Patterson (Patton) (individual 2) (30 centiMorgans, 4677 matching SNPs),
Baert (30 centiMorgans, 4400 matching SNPs),
Patton (individual 2) (29 centiMorgans, 6000 matching SNPs),
Verbeke (29 centiMorgans, 2700 matching SNPs),
Van Hulle (28 centiMorgans, 4996 matching SNPs), de Meire (individual 1) (26 centiMorgans, 4600 matching SNPs),
de Meire (individual 2) (26 centiMorgans, 4100 matching SNPs), Laevens (23 centiMorgans, 2744 matching SNPs),
Patterson (Patton) (individual 3) (22 centiMorgans, 3798 matching SNPs), du Vivier (22 centiMorgans, 3200 matching SNPs), Vynckier (18 centiMorgans, 3849 matching SNPs).

Particularly interesting samples are the following:

Pattyn (10 centiMorgans); This concerns Freddy Pattyn, a descendant of Adrianus Pattyn, son of Jacobus Pattyn (a son of Pierre de Patin and Marie Douchy).

Deladru (20 centiMorgans); This concerns Celine Deladrue, descendant of Dewanckele from Geluwe. Her grandmother was Maria Dewanckele, the daughter of Arsenius Dewanckele and Pelagie Hoorens. Arsene was the son of Pieter Jan Dewanckele and Maria Theresia Verbrugge. Pieter Jan was the son of Pierre Charles Dewanckele and Cecilia Cornette. Pierre Charles was the son of Charles Ignace Dewanckele and Joanna Clara Vermeersch, the author's ancestors. Particluarly, Charles Ignace was the son of Pierre Dewanckele and Maria Joanna Camerteyn. On the other hand, Joanna Clara Vermeersch was a daughter through the de Patin branch.

73.9 Autosomal DNA (FamilyTreeDNA®) - The Irish connection

We have also found many autosomal links with Ireland and the rest of the British Isles. As stated earlier, some of them appear to have a connection with Patton or Patin. Some may also be due to other Flemish soldiers and families involved in the Battle of Hastings. Others, however, may form a link with the mtDNA results as described in Chapter 73.10.3.7.

Indeed, the mitochondrial DNA is Irish, which is highly likely due to an Irish family in the Spanish army in the 17th century residing in Harelbeke-Deerlijk-Waregem. The fact that many autosomal links appear with Ireland and the British Isles can probably partially be explained by the assumption that some branches, for which we have retrieved no records older than 1700, may have been similar cases of families in the Irish contingents of the Spanish army.

Here is a list of autosomal DNA matches. From all the existing matches, we have picked the ones with a family name likely of Irish origin, for which the name distribution on the island was higher in Ireland than in Northern Ireland. We must warn the reader that many Irish immigrants in the USA take DNA tests to find their ancestry. Therefore, it is customary to find a more significant number of matches proportionally from Ireland than from countries with fewer immigrants.

Thus, the results should be interpreted as verification rather than quantification. We have limited the range of shared centiMorgans from 40 to 76. The names are, in order of shared centiMorgans, with the highest first:

McFarland, McKittrick, Fitzpatrick, Fitzhenry, Curry, Cafferky, Quirk, Thomson, Quigley, Jones, Thomas, Warren, Johnson, King, Kent, Daniel, Wood, Waller, Mortimer, Bell, O' Neil, Bowen, Stewart, Martin, Smith, Rowe, Taylor, Fuller, Ward, Dyer, McDonald, Philips, Roberts, Case, Cooley, Holmes, Dale, Barker, Keane, Downing, Alexander, Doyle, Hurst, Shaw, Cain, Doherty, Lamb, McParland and O' Brien.

Of particular interest, linked to the Mitochondrial bloodline, is the appearance of autosomal matches with people carrying the family names Roberts, Alexander, and McParland. Contemplation on these matters is exposed early in Chapter 72, while further analysis is found in Chapter 73.10.3.7.

73.10 GEDmatch® Results as a 'Proof of the Pudding'

73.10.1 Population matches

The DNA sample of Nico F. Declercq, analyzed by FamilyTreeDNA® , was submitted to GEDmatch® as 'Kit YT7724759' in December 2019 to double-check the conclusions while making comparisons with a much more extensive database. This investigation is purely autosomal and may, therefore, indeed be considered as proof of the pudding. The Eurogenes K13 tool to compare the autosomal DNA with different populations in the world (with a higher resolution focus on Europe but not excluding the other continents) was run and gave the following results, in total agreement with the genealogy presented in this book and the other DNA

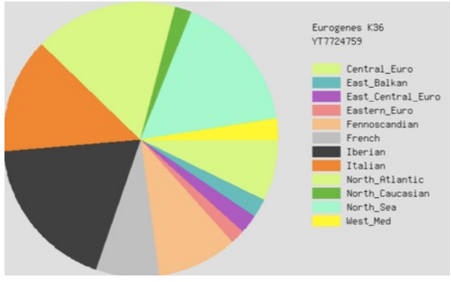

Figure 73.11: *Distribution according to Eurogenes K36. Basque 0.2%, Central Europe 7.3%, East Balkan 2.26%, East-Centra Europe 2.17%, East Europe 1.74%, Fennoscandian 9.28%, French 7.51%, Iberian 18.31%, Italian 13.73%, Malayan 0.33%, North Atlantic 16.89%, North Caucasian 1.78%, North Sea 16.58%, West Mediterranean 1.9%. Figure 73.12: *The European part of the Spanish Empire during the reign of H.M. King Philip IV (orange and dark green color). The red lines showed the Spaniards' route when they traveled back and forth between Spain and our region. A trip from Barcelona to Brussels took about six weeks. One can imagine this as caravans on foot, with soldiers and their families, horses, carts, priests, notaries, bankers, and personnel. Of the author's autosomal DNA links not located in the North Sea region, most are located in Spain, Malta, Sicily, and Milan. You can take out the above card, as it were. A more recent test was run by 'Eurogenes K36 Admixture Proportions' in February 2020 on the modernized and extended GEDmatch® database. The result is shown in Figure 73.11 and reveals that notable links are found with the regions that match our genealogical study. Iberia and Basque show up as 18.5%, Italian as 13.7%, and French as 7.5%. These are linked to the Spanish origins and the history of the Crown of Aragon, partially due to the roots of Desclergue, through Du Guesclin, in Brittany. When we add up all the regions linked to the Crown of Aragon, we obtain 33.94%. Therefore, 1/3 of the DNA is connected to the Crown of Aragon. We also find the North Sea 16.6%, typical for someone from Belgium. The Malayan 0.33% must be due to the Portuguese in Malaka. The migration of populations can explain the links to Scandinavia and Eastern Europe until 1000 AD, and perhaps partially due to Vikings. The North Atlantic link is related to the Norman Conquest of Britain (1066 AD), which also involved Flemish and the Irish maternal ancestry line.

73.10.2 Spanish Matches

As was done in the above analysis based on FamilyTreeDNA®, we also checked individual matches using GEDmatch®, which deals with a much more extensive database than FamilyTreeDNA®. We focussed primarily on Spain and Bretagne. The database returned more than 17000 matches in a range from 7 to 31 centiMorgans. In what follows, we list the names from that list, linked to Spain and Brittany, followed by a few other possible interesting entries to our genealogy.
The selected entries are studied from Chapter 73.10.3.1 until Chapter 73.10.3.17.

73.10.3 Detailed Autosomal Analysis in the Framework of the Ancestry Tree

Because of the GEDmatch® database's extent, we have performed several critical studies as gentle confirmations of the ancestry tree of N. F. Declercq. In the complete analysis found below, we only focus on DNA sections of individuals that overlap with N. F. Declercq's DNA. Whenever two individuals are mentioned with overlapping DNA, that DNA also overlaps with N. F. Declercq. Other DNA sequences are ignored in this study. It must be repeated here that one should never use autosomal DNA to make complex, genealogical conclusions. The reason is that autosomal DNA is like a soup of information, and one does not know from which ancestors it comes, certainly if one has not investigated large numbers of close blood relatives. So, any evidence found in autosomal DNA should be considered an element of proof, not a stand-alone.

Autosomal DNA can indicate whether individual branches are probably part of one's ancestry tree. Below, we list a couple of studies for which we found positive results in the autosomal DNA, and we begin with the oldest connections.

73.10.3.1 The Brittany Cluster

We are trying to answer an essential question of whether or not the Desclergues of Montblanc have old roots in Brittany (Bretagne). In this context, the reader may also be interested in reading Chapter 19.27.1 and Chapter 73.10.4.7. We checked the entire list of DNA links for names that are very much associated with Brittany. Specifically, we found Jourdan, Dinan, Le Borgne, Le Bihan, Dol, and Broons. In particular, the two last are known to be part of the ancestry of Du Guesclin. The samples with an indication of how much DNA they have in common with N. F. Declercq (kit YT7724759) are:

Dinan (M666634, 7.7cm), Jourdan (T147390, 7.1cm), Le Borgne (DH1773876, 9cm), Le Bihan (MH1126194, 7.6cm), A. Dole (A489777, 7.1cm), L. Dole (JV4422155, 10.7cm), B. Brons (NS7424339, 8.2cm), L. Bronx (AZ3690232, 7.1cm).

Except for chromosome 18, DNA appearances are in common with one or more of the samples mentioned above. In particular, on Chromosome 2, there is an overlap between AZ3690232, A489777, and NS7424339 of around 300 SNPs. On Chromosome 3, there is an overlap between DH1773876, A489777, and AZ3690232 of about 200 SNPs.

On Chromosome 6, there is an overlap between M666634 and A489777 of about 280 SNPs. On Chromosome 7, there is an overlap between MH1126194 and DH1773876 of about 200 SNPs. On Chromosome 14, there is an overlap between A489777 and AZ3690232 of about 800 SNPs. As mentioned above, it is impossible to draw hard conclusions from these results, except that the involved persons have something in common with N. F. Declercq. The Brittany connection of N. F. Declercq, through Du Guesclin, was 700 years ago.

Therefore, one should expect a maximum of a few traces.

On the other hand, if this connection happened over several centuries, the chances of still finding traces are more extensive because there must be a more significant population in Brittany with DNA links. Nowadays, individuals may exhibit common DNA sequences which have been passed through several of their branches.

Therefore, the non-negligible numbers of the order of 200 common SNPs are perhaps not a surprise.

Note that on FamilyTreeDNA®, after the GEDmatch® research was done, we also found a person 'Envik' with ancestors Gastebois and Lagogue, both names linked to the North of Brittany, where Du Guesclin originated from (31 centiMorgans, 6371 matching SNPs). On Geneanet®, we found Quellec-Riou (16.8 centiMorgans). Another fascinating example is F. Guézénnec, an entire family ancestry tree in Brittany (18.7 centiMorgans). The latter is also described in Chapter 19.27.8 in the chapter about Du Guesclin. Important information is also given in Chapter 73.10.4.3.

73.10.3.2 The Soria Cluster

Research of the Soria cluster happened to check traces of the presence of Du Guesclin in Soria and the fact that he had children there with a given Doña Torró. Readers may be fascinated to read Chapter 19.15.7 in this context. It means that some local DNA may have been passed along with the subsequent generations, or some DNA of Du Guesclin may have been passed onto the locals by him or his descendants, which means it may not be impossible to find such traces in N. F. Declercq (kit YT7724759).

Such traces were found in specific cases throughout the current chapter. Next, we investigate Soriano.

73.10.3.2.1 Genes in common with Soriano There are three Soriano entries in the database, but they are probably from the same family, given that our sample matches precisely the same with each of them. Therefore, we will only consider one example, namely kit CF2828033. On chromosome 12, there is a significant overlap between this sample and that of N. F. Declercq, 12.5cm (324 SNPs), with a total share of 22.8cm over the entire DNA.

For chromosome 12, kit YT7724759 shares (B37 start 644337 until B37 end 4696801, i.e., 324 shared SNPs or 12.5cm) with kit CF2828033.

For chromosome 14, kit YT7724759 shares (B37 start 26716700 until B37 end 31989902, i.e., 240 shared SNPs or 6.6cm) with kit CF2828033.

The numbers are minimal but not zero. According to the International Society of Genetic Genealogy (ISOGG), these numbers are equivalent to what the 6th or 7th cousins share. Two 7th cousins share a great-great-great-great-great-great-grandparent. Therefore, amounts between 2 and 3cm are not insignificant and should be interpreted as follows: With the two tested persons, N. F. Declercq shares, for sure, a distant common ancestor (impossible to tell along which genealogical line) who is further separated than a common ancestor for 7th cousins.

In our genealogy framework, we may interpret this as follows: N. F. Declercq has a common ancestor with somebody who may have lived in the area of Soria because the sample with DNA in common is from a Soriano. This name indicates that this person must have had distant ancestors who lived there.

Unfortunately, we cannot make any more persuasive conclusions than this for Soriano.

73.10.3.3 Genes in common with de Montoya

As can be found in Chapter 29, the author's paternal ancestor, Jeroni Joan Desclergue y Cortés (DC05), was married to Felipa de Montoya. In old documents in Flanders, we see her mostly appearing as Toy, Toya, de Thoy, de Thoy, and even Duthoo or Duthou. It would be interesting to show that, indeed, there are Montoya genes in the DNA of N. F. Declercq, and, in some cases, a Spanish Montoya may have had a legacy in Flanders as Toy. The latter would not mean that every Toy, Toye, or Dutoit would descend from a Montoya. Indeed, in the GEDmatch® database, we found several samples with DNA in common with N. F. Declercq (kit YT7724759).

C. Toy (QT8178855, 7cm), V. Montoya (RY7588173, 7cm), D. Montoya (DF6197018, 7.2cm). The shared DNA is spread over

Chromosomes 1, 2, 3, 5, 9, 12, 16, and 19. In particular, on Chromosome 16, there is an overlap between N. F. Declercq and samples QT8178855 and DF6197018 of 220 SNPs, corresponding to around 7cm. So, we have proven that Montoya's genes are found in the DNA of Declercq and that, in this case, there is an equivalence between Toy and Montoya.

73.10.3.4 Genes in common with Cortés

Y. Cortés (kit M457652), shares 7.5cm with N. F. Declercq (kit YT7724759). Cortés is found in the Desclergue ancestry, as shown in Chapter 27.2. Therefore, having one showing up with DNA in common is not surprising.

73.10.3.5 Genes in common with de la Cruz

This investigation is essential to verify the couple Antoni Desclergue (DC07) and Martina de la Cruz, described in Chapter 37, and find clues that Martina also descended from the Spanish military in Flanders.
We investigated the following samples with which N. F. Declercq (kit YT7724759) has DNA in common:
J. Santa Cruz (kit QN5403715, 10.7cm), S. Cruz (kit M737394, 10.2cm), A. Cruz (kit LW6388670, 8.2cm), E. De la Cruz (kit BB2639553, 7.4cm), D. Cruz (kit A667080, 7.4cm), H. De la Cruz (kit XK9692595, 7.2cm), J. Cruz (kit A333632, 7.1cm).
Apart from chromosome 20, we find an overlap between N. F. Declercq and 'Cruz-DNA.' Each sample is significantly different, concluding that they are not closely related to one another to ensure no redundancy in the analysis. In total, there are 30 overlapping DNA sequences. Of particular interest are the following observations:
On chromosome 1, samples LW6388670 and XK9692595 share 309 and 237 SNPs, respectively, with N. F. Declercq, and within these overlaps, they share 237 SNPs. It means that Cruz and De la Cruz likely have a common De la Cruz ancestor and a common ancestor with N. F. Declercq. On Chromosome 3, samples BB2639553 and A667080 share respectively 298 and 352 SNPs with N. F. Declercq, and these samples share, within these overlaps, 23 SNPs, which is again a sign that Cruz and De la Cruz may share a distant common ancestor and with N. F. Declercq. On chromosome 13, samples M737394 and A667080 share 220 and 401 SNPs with N. F. Declercq.
Within these overlaps, they also share 220 SNPs. On chromosome 19, samples A333632 and A667080 share 369 and 203 SNPs with N. F. Declercq. Within these overlaps, they also share 200 SNPs.

73.10.3.6 Genes in common with de Poch

In N. F. Declercq's genealogy, along his mother's side, as described in Part X, there is a branch which in recent years was called 'de Vos,' but originated from a marriage between the Desclergue and a de Poch or de Vos branch. We don't know if this de Poch branch originated in Flanders and was, therefore, de Vos or if it originated in Spain and transformed from de Poch to de Vos. The genealogy shows that both are possible. The investigations below reveal that N. F. Declercq has DNA in common with individuals with names derived from de Poch or de Pocht.
Note that this does not mean that every person with the name Vos, Voss, or de Vos would have a de Poch ancestor, but it merely shows that, in our case, the name de Poch may have evolved to de Vos or vice versa.
In the samples with DNA in common with N. F. Declercq, we found one cluster of instances, which are also genetically linked with each other, of people carrying the following names and are indicative of the above statement:
S. Vose (kit M572954, 7.7cm), G. Voss (kit A204423, 8.8cm), J. K. Vos (kit A495369, 7.1cm), S. Fossat (kit H697225, 7.4cm), G. Voss (kit BH1138433, 9.1cm), M. Fosse (kit HK6046832, 7.5cm), G. W. Voss (kit WZ6946482, 7.6cm), P. J. Vos (kit FB3672503, 8.1cm).
There were also other samples named Vos or Voss not belonging to this cluster. The cluster indicates that likely there has been a transformation of de Poch or de Pocht to Vos, Fosse, Voss, or Vose, depending on where these families have ended up. The shared DNA is spread over all chromosomes except 2, 9, 10, and 11.
In particular, on Chromosome 1, samples M572954 and A204423 overlap around 250 SNPs, while samples A495369 and H697225 overlap 233 SNPs. On Chromosome 6, samples BH1138433, HK6046832, and H697225 overlap 205 SNPs. On Chromosome 7, samples BH1138433 and WZ6946482 overlap 240 SNPs. On Chromosome 12, samples FB3672503 and A495369 overlap 213 SNPs. On Chromosome 14, samples A204423 and H697225 overlap around 50 SNPs. On Chromosome 16, samples HK6046832 and A204423 overlap 200 SNPs.

73.10.3.7 The maternal Perlan Irish Ancestry Line

The genealogy is shown in Chapter 72 while the mtDNA is explained at the beginning of Chapter 73 and another analysis is shown in Chapter 72.2, and Chapter 72.3. The maternal ancestry line (mother - grandmother - great-grandmother - ..) descends from an Irish family in Flanders (Irish military in service of the Spanish army in Flanders) in the 17th century. The eldest known maternal ancestor carried the name Perlan, which is Irish but is just one of the many forms of McFarland or McParland. DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590. With this in mind, the GEDmatch® database was investigated to find samples of a person with similar names, with DNA in common with N. F. Declercq and showing genetic overlap among the sequences shared with Declercq. The following samples were found:
McFarlane (kitSC7698123, 7.5cm), Farley (kit A301179, 7.5cm), McFarlane (kit T281461, 7.1cm), McFarland (kit JQ9067454, 11.7cm), Farley (kit CE9993253, 10.1cm), McFarleyn (kit A295883, 8.2cm), Farlance (kit T151842, 7.7cm), K. Parlee (XM4891665, 7.5cm) and J. F. M. Parlou (A232803, 7.2cm).
The shared DNA is spread over all chromosomes except chromosome 8. On Chromosome 1, samples T281461 and A295883 have approximately 400 SNPs in common. On Chromosome 2, samples XM4891665 and T281461 have approximately 400 SNPs in common. On Chromosome 6, samples T151842 and A301179 have approximately 260 SNPs in common. On Chromosome 12, samples SC7698123 and XM4891665 have 224 SNPs in common. On Chromosome 14, samples T151842 and A295883 have 216 SNPs in common. On Chromosome 15, samples T151842, T281461, A295883, and A301179 have around 200 SNPs in common.
Also, on Chromosome 15, samples T151842 and A232803 share another sequence of around 220 SNPs. On Chromosome 21, samples A295883 and T281461 share around 240 SNPs, and on the same chromosome, samples JQ9067454 and A232803 have 245 SNPs in common. The results show that the different formats of the family name Perlan indeed show genetic equivalence, and the found samples also show DNA overlap with N. F. Declercq.

73.10.3.8 Genes in common with Montaigne

The ancestry of N. F. Declercq contains a Marie Montaigne, shown in Chapter 39, and was born in 1711. In the GEDmatch® database, we found a 'Lamontagne': R. Lamontagne (kit A783412, 7.6cm).

73.10.3.9 Genes in common with Lombaerde

The ancestry of N. F. Declercq contains a Marie Anne Thérèse Lombaerde, shown in Chapter 40, born in 1750. In the GEDmatch® database, we found several matches, which allow us to assume that this family may have distant roots in Italy.
B. Lombardo (kit JD8437890, 9.8cm), T. J. Lombard (kit EQ1015866, 9.3cm), M. Lombardi (M366886, 8.8cm), B. Lombardo (A877481, 8.3cm). The shared DNA is spread over all chromosomes except chromosomes 8, 9, 12, 13, 17, 18, and 22. On chromosome 14, samples A877481 and JD8437890 share around 500 SNPs with N. F. Declercq. We also refer to Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.

73.10.3.10 Genes in common with Lesage

N.F. Declercq's grandmother was Irma Lesage, from the branch described in Chapter 64. Therefore, finding some traces of individuals with this or similar names should not be surprising. We found no entries in the existing 'Lesage' database. However, we found V. Sage (kit H080882, 8cm), A. Blocksage (kit NL8470218, 7.9cm), and L. Sage (kit M142232, 7.4cm). The shared DNA is spread over all chromosomes except chromosomes 8, 12, 22. On chromosome 6, sample M142232 shares 700 SNPs with Declercq and samples H080882 and NL8470218. On chromosome 15, samples M142232 and NL8470218 share around 300 SNPs with Declercq and each other. On chromosome 18, samples NL8470218, M142232, and H080882 share around 350 SNPs and with Declercq.

73.10.3.11 Genes in common with Desplenter

Along the Benoit ancestry line, in Chapter 66.1.14 and Chapter 66.1.15, we have ancestors named Desplenter. In the GEDmatch® database, we found one sample with DNA overlap, Cornelis Splinter (kit M023854, 8.2cm).

73.10.3.12 Genes in common with Benoit

The Benoit ancestry lines are described in Chapter 66.1, and Chapter 66.2.
We found two Benoit family samples that overlap with N. F. Declercq: D. Benoit (kit RJ8043857, 7.3cm) and J. Benoit (kit ZL1169783, 7cm). The two samples show no mutual overlap.

73.10.3.13 Genes in common with Goddyn

Barbara Goddyn appears in the ancestry tree connecting us to de Patin, as shown in Chapter 66.2.16 and Chapter 68.7. We investigated all the people in the database who had Goddard, Godwin, and Godin names. Two Godwins were probably related to each other. The Godin sample was possibly not associated with any of the different samples. The Goddard samples did not appear to be linked to one another. These were the samples with DNA overlap: Goddard (kit AM2744639, 19.1cm), Kristina Godin (kit M715205, 9cm), J. Godwin (kit M523734, 8.2cm), A. Godwin (kit M025056, 7.9cm), B. Goddard (kit A441714, 7.5cm), K. Goddard (kit BX8039308, 7.2cm), G. Goddar (kit WM8199489, 7.1cm), R. Goddar (kit A586941, 7.4cm).

73.10.3.14 Genes in common with Pennet

We have Marie Claire Pennet in our ancestry tree, and she links us to our de Patin ancestry. She can be found in Chapter 65.15. GEDmatch® shows several persons with similar names, showing DNA overlap with our sample, namely S. D. Pine (kit M045360, 7.4cm), T. Pines (kit A478647, 7.4cm), K. S. Pinetti (kit LU4517107, 7.1cm) and Z. Pine (kit M045360, 7.4cm).

73.10.3.15 Genes in common with Corneille

We have a Maria Josepha Corneille in our ancestry tree, shown in Chapter 48.9.2.3.3. GEDmatch® delivered one result of such family name with shared DNA, namely M. Cornell (kit ZS7091868, 7.6cm, mostly on chromosome 17).

73.10.3.16 Genes in common with De Croock

We have the branch of Marie Thérèse de Crook in our ancestry tree. Her family line is described in Chapter 69. GEDmatch® delivered one result of such family name with shared DNA, namely M. L. Crook (kit KW6461426, 7cm).

73.10.3.17 Genes in common with Massa

In our ancestry, we found several appearances of persons we believe were Massa but were referred to as Maes or Maas in the old church documents because Maes or Maas is a common name in Flanders, while Massa is not. We can refer to Chapter 29.8.1, and in particular, Chapter 29.8.4. As an exercise, we searched for a genetic link between at least one Maes or Maas sample and one Massa sample in the GEDmatch® database (who, in this case, each share DNA with us as well, although showing this was not the purpose here). We found that R. L. Massa (kit CF4034306) and R. J. Maas (XL5298287) have a significant amount of DNA in common. We were lucky as both samples also have their Y-DNA Haplogroup indicated. They belong to the Haplogroup R-Z225, significantly manifested in Iberia and Italy. They likely had a common ancestor, and Massa was changed to Maas for one branch of the descendants.

73.10.4 Detailed autosomal DNA analysis with a focus on the involved Regions

73.10.4.1 Spain and Portugal without further geographical specificity

73.10.4.1.1 Spain For Spain, without association to specific regions, we found:

Castillo (9.9), Perez (7).

73.10.4.1.2 Portugal

For Portugal, we found:

Correa (16.7), de Albuquerque (11.7), Ferreira (9.7), Botelho (9.5), De Canha (9.4), Almeida (8.8), Pires de Oliveira (8.4), (8.4), Cunha (8.4), Fernandes (8.1), Guimaraes (8.1), Mascarenhas (7.9), Chamosa (7.9), Ferreira (7.9), Medeiros (7.8), Vianna (7.7), Fernandes (7.6), Mendes (7.6), Rodrigues dos Santos (7.5), Tavares (7.5), Pereira (7.5), Da Silva (7.5), Ferreira (7.5), Lopes (7.5), Dutra (7.5), Medeiros (7.5), Nogueira (7.4), Fernandes (7.4), Carvalho (7.4), Couto (7.4), Pinto do Rosa (7.4), Correa (7.4), Cardoso (7.4), Rosonina (7.4), Machado (7.4), Jordao (7.3), Melo (7.3), Pereira (7.3), Macedo (7.2), Barcelos (7.2), De Souza (7.2), Brito (7.2), Telo (7.2), Fonseca (7.2), Monteiro (7.2), Barbosa (7.2), Dos San (7.2), Botelho (7.2), Cordeiro (7.1), Bolonha (7.1), Guimaraes (7.1), Dos Santos (7.1), Da Rosa (7), Vieira (7), Cabral (7).

73.10.4.1.3 Iberia, unspecified

Names that are Iberian without a specific link to any region or country:

Costa (14.8), de Almeida (11.6), Irizar (11.5), Souza (9.8), Souza (9.3), Rosario (9.2), Rosario (9.1), Montes (8.9), Barraza or Baraza (8.7), Teixeira (8.7), Jorge (8.7), Costa (8.7), Lucena (8.3), Varela (8.2), Avina (8), Batista (7.9), Batista (7.9), Cuba (7.9), Silva (7.4), Pinto (7.4), Silva (7.3), Souza (7), Nunes (7).

73.10.4.2 Galicia

We found three family names that are assumed to be highly linked to Galicia, either historically, by present-day presence, or both: Collazo (7.1), Otero (7.1), Pena (7.1).
For nearby Asturias, we found Cobiella (8.1).
Between Asturias and Navarra, in the area of Bilbao (in Biscaya), we found Zavala (8.9), Aguiriano (7.8), Izaguirre (7.3), Vicondoa (7.1), Lascano (7.1), and Ozana (7).
For Navarra we found Orellano (9.3), and Gongora (7.6).
The above list of names is smaller than Brittany's results, and the number of centiMorgan's is also lower. This indicates that the DNA links to Galicia are older than to Brittany itself, which suggests that the Desclergues have more recent connections to Brittany (9th-14th centuries) than to Galicia (5th-9th centuries).

73.10.4.3 Brittany

The reader may be interested in reading Chapter 73.10.3.1 and Part VI.

73.10.4.3.1 Old families of Brittany

For names of old families of Brittany, we found:

Goales (13.4), Blevin (9.6), Corson (8.2), Maze (8.2), Dinan (7.7), Le Bihan (7.6), Goff (7.5), Caro (7.4), Braz (7.1).

73.10.4.3.2 Other names related to Brittany, in Brittany For other names associated with Brittany by their current physical presence, we found:
Cuen (13.2), Fouque (12.7), Simoneau (12.2), Dior (10.8)), Guicheteau (10.7), Madore (9.9), Bedard (9.7), Le Blanc (9.7), Cosson (9.6), Visage (9.5), Grondin (9.3), Burgoyne (9.2), La Berto (9), Le Borgne (9), Gonos (8.8), Arcenceaux (8.6), Fonteneau (8.6), Orvin (8.5), Coupa (8.3), Bastiou (8.3), Bedard (8.2), Halais (8.1), Sillau (8), Binaisse (7.9), Le Blanc (7.9), Renouard (7.8), Laventure (7.8), Raz (7.7), Levine (7.5), Mercer (7.4), Loper (7.3), Titour (7.2), Herron (7.2), Tacon (7.1), Bevan (7.1), Lamour (7.1).

73.10.4.3.3 Other names associated with Brittany, around Brittany For names associated with Brittany and spread over the departments around Brittany, we found:
Esnault (14.1), Sable (8.8), Geuret (8.4), Cousineau (8.3), Cousineau (8.3), Metivier (8.2), Briere (8.1), Corbin (8), Farin (8), Bourdelais (8), Cras / Cras (7.8), Gastineau (7.8), Belanger (7.7), Cadieux (7.4), Legault (7.4), Bales (7.3), Yon (7.2), Frensel (7.1), Blais (7.1), Barentin (7.1).

73.10.4.3.4 Names possibly related to the 'legend' that Du Guesclin had some of his roots at the coast of Algeria (Bougie) For names that are also present in Algeria, we found:
Banares (11.5), Nasol (9.1), Hamza (8.5), Chriqui (8.1), Gelardo (7.9), Guiles (7.8), Manzo (7.5), Fazio (7.5), Polla (7.4), Amalfitano (7.2), Kaua (7.1), Vella (7.1).
Note that the above results for Algeria are not necessarily linked to the old history before the life of Du Guesclin but may also be the result of the colonial period of the past century.

73.10.4.4 Other Particular Spanish Regions

73.10.4.4.1 Soria Linked to Soria, we found:
Yague (7.9) (Spain, In the big cities / the rural areas around Soria); Anguiano (7.9) (Spain, rare name with peak at Soria);
Guzmán (7.8);
Barrena (7.2) (Spain, almost everywhere, including a peak at Soria);
Soriano (12.1) (Spain, east and south).

73.10.4.4.2 Catalonia Specifically for Catalonia, we found:
Farias (18.2), Callau (12.2), Sabates (11.6), Poquette (10), Tafur / Tafurer (9.5), Parella (9.2), Escarra (8.3), Pena (8), Erola (7.9), Jorda (7.5), Masso (7.4), Ralda (7.4), Pou (7.3), Bosch (7.3), Balaguer (7.2), Bosch (7.1). Note that more names from Catalonia match, but they are separately dealt with below, compared to the Census of Montblanc of 1359. The reader may be interested in reading Chapter 18.10.1 concerning Bosch.

73.10.4.4.3 Navarra, Aquitaine, Cerdanya, and Provence These autosomal DNA results can be associated with the ancestry of the Counts of Barcelona, our ancestors:
Lavigne (9.8), Turrell (9.2), Mays (8.2), Caffarelli (8.2), Bivens (8.2), Carrere (8.1), Navarret (7.6), Dubon (7.6), Francou (7.5), Vignalats (7.4), de Pocht (7.4), Laborde (7.3), Ascencio (7.1), Sarantis (7.1), Massa (7.6), Chavonne (12.5).

73.10.4.4.4 Crown of Aragon For the Crown of Aragon (North East of the Iberian Peninsula), we found:
Soriano (12.1), Soriano (12.1), Ceron (11.4), Mero (11.4), Salvo (10.6), Valles (9.8), Barbera (9), Soriano (8.3), Garcia Ramo (8.2), Paco (8), Trallero (8), Capella (7.9), Serra (7.8), Catala (7.7), Orce (7.7), Ribera (7.4), Marti (7.3), Corro (7.2), Cardona (7.1), Neto (7), Loren (7).

73.10.4.5 Regions related to the expansion of Catalonia and the Crown of Aragon

73.10.4.5.1 Sardinia For Sardinia, we found:
Casula (13.5), Schirru (11.3), Tasso (8.9), Castellani (8.8), Passino (7.2), Marati (7.1).

73.10.4.5.2 Naples For the area of Naples, we found:
Fortino (11), Napoli (8.9), Bavaro (8.9), Moccia (8.3), Celentano (7.9), Panico (7.7).

73.10.4.5.3 The deep South Italy For the very south of Italy, we found:
Misurelli (10.2), Papasidero (9.1), De Luca (9), Figliola (8.8), Caputo (8.7), Capparelli (8.7), Strollo (8.4), Ruffolo (7.6).

73.10.4.5.4 Sicily For the island of Sicily, we found:
Orlando (7), Di Mento (7.2), Costagliola (7.2), Camarata (7.4), La Grassa (7.5), Pancaldo (7.6), Mangiaracina (7.7), Aliffi (7.7), Restivo (8), Criaco (8.2), Salamone (8.6), Alu (9), Farrugia (9.1), Cugliotta (10.2), Balistrieri (10.4), Carico (10.7), Pusateri (11.3), Gennusa (12.5).

73.10.4.5.5 Greece For Greece, we found:
Troullinos (9.8), Nicklous (7.4), and a nameless entry with a Greek email address (7.2).

73.10.4.5.6 Malta For Malta, we found:
Camenzuli (9.9), while for Morocco, we only found Hmada (7.1).

73.10.4.6 Regions linked to Spanish Possessions in the 16th-17th centuries

It is interesting to keep the Spanish-governed areas and the Spanish route in mind, shown in Figure 73.12 when analyzing the appearance of autosomal DNA links in European regions.

Figure 73.13: The genetic distance between the Declercq sample and the closest ancient skeletons in the database. The appearance of 3 Visigothic skeletons found at Girona in Catalonia dating from around 500 AD and Lombardic and Vandal skeletons must originate from Spanish/Catalan roots. (MyTrueAncestry®)

73.10.4.6.1 Milan and Genua For names closely linked to Milan and Genua, we found:
Dallardas (21.4), Bertoni (17), Stiscia (15.8), Caprotti (14.7), Tessa (12.5), Zamprogno (11.5), Rucci (11.4), Sciaraffa (11); Viola (10.7), Nesi (10.6), Angeleri (10.5), Lavezzari (10.5), Del Bello (10.3), Dalmasso (10.1), Leta (10.1), Visconti (9.7), Agudio (8.9), Lombardi (8.8), Pizzichemi (8.6), Monteverdi (8.5), Valseriati (8.4), Garbarino (8.3), Cantu (8.2), Bodrato (8.2), Canepa (8.2), Ricotti (8.1), Gazzo (7.8), Torielli (7.5), Baiardo (7.5), Sarina (7.4), Cantoni (7.1), Gonzo (7.1), Tazzari (7.1).

73.10.4.6.2 Milan and Genua, but also the Deep South of Italy Interestingly, we also found names that specifically appear frequently in the Milan and or Genua region, but also in the deep south of Italy:
Maniscalco (14.4), Coscia (10.4), Caligiuri (10.4), Ruggiero (10.2), Prota (10.2), Ferraro (8.5), Papallo (8.4), Roppolo (8.3), Galati (8.2), Lo Monaco (8), Servello (7.8), Pastore (7.6), Primerano (7.5), Vullo (7.2), Tantillo (7.1), Lamanna (7.1).

73.10.4.6.3 Cross match between GEDmatch® and the Montblanc Census of 1359 As a point of interest, we investigated the article of Lluis Paris i Bou,[6] in which we find the remains of the census of 1359 at Montblanc, ordered by King Pere III of Aragon. Although, as explained in Chapter 25.0.2.1, the information dates from a more recent century, the list of names is significant for the current purpose. We compared this list with the results of GEDmatch®. One should expect some names from ancient Montblanc to also appear in the GEDmatch® results. 10 % of the families in Montblanc had a family name that also appears in the GEDmatch® results of our autosomal Desclergue DNA.
Results in alphabetical order:
Anglada (7.3), Barcelo (7.2), Capella (7.9), Catala (7.7), de Royo (7.1), Ferrer (7.2), Morell (7.8), Negre (8), Nicolau (8.2), Ponç (8), Rocha (7.1), Sanz (8.3, 7.9), Torres (9.7, 8, 7.7, 7.7, 7.1), Vidal (8).
Our Ferrer ancestry is described in Chapter 26.0.2 on page 291.

73.10.4.7 Cross-match between GEDmatch® and other Spanish names of interest

The names are:
Torres (9.7, 8, 7.7, 7.7, 7.1), Guzmàn (7.8), Molina (7.8), Sandova (8.5, 8.3, 7.8, 7.4), Nuñes (8.6, 7), Herrera (8.2, 8), Diaz (9.1, 8.6, 8.5, 8.4, 8, 7.9, 7.5, 7.4, 7.4, 7.1, 7).

73.11 Genetic Analysis based on MyTrueAncestry®

This platform is an easy-to-use tool for investigating one's genetic background. The disadvantage is that users must learn what procedures or databases are used for this task. Nevertheless, comparisons are possible with skeletons found at different locations globally and from various times in history. Therefore, the platform allows comparing one's DNA with ancient skeletons and modern populations. The platform uses PCA (Principle Component Analysis) to determine the genetic distance between samples and populations.

The skeletons found at Girona, have also been described in the literature[7].
Population distances are shown in Figures 73.13, 73.14, and 73.15, while a timeline is given in Figures 73.16, 73.17, and 73.18.

73.12 Genetic Analysis based on MyHeritage®

Out of curiosity, we tested at MyHeritage® to ensure there were no contradictions with the results obtained by other services. MyHeritage® is a different database but shows many matches in and around Belgium and Spain. The ethnicity, shown utilizing a map in Figure 73.19, is perfectly average for Flemish, namely the North Sea Bassin and France, but indicates Iberia. For this database, the estimated inheritance is 2.7% Iberian.

73.12.1 Spanish Rooted

An exciting sample can be found on MyHeritage® of Arva Chichenhof, born Arva De Spain. She was born in 1937 in Prescott, Arizona, and died on November 17, 2021, in Nampa, Idaho. She was married to Gerald Chichenoff. Her parents were Walter De Spain and Clarissa. The name 'De Spain' comes from the French d'Espagne and was given to persons from Spain residing in France or England before they migrated to the United States.
According to this family's ancestry tree, the oldest known forefather is Gedeon De Spaigne, born in Canterbury on April 16, 1626, in England.
Interestingly, this person has only one region in common with the author, according to MyHeritage®, namely Iberia. The DNA in common is 16.4 cM, on Chromosome 18.
An exciting sample from the UK can be found on MyHeritage® of Spyridon De Castro Leon. We share two segments, a total of 13.9 cM. In particular, a segment of 6 cM is found on Chromosome 22, which is only shared with Spanish ancestors.

73.12.2 Spanish Residents

Spanish DNA links with people residing in Spain or by My Heritage considered 100% Spanish are given below, with the region added, if known:
Baltar (6 centiMorgans).
Jimenez (6.4 centiMorgans).
Sahagun (7.1 centiMorgans) (Miguel Sahagun), ancestors: Sahagun, Castellanoz, Gonzáles and Márquez, region: Castilla y Léon, Castilla-La Mancha and Andalucia.
Silveira Correia da Silva (8.3 centiMorgans).
Guzmán (7.4 centiMorgans).
Craxan (8.1 centiMorgans) with roots in Tarrassa in Barcelona and ancestor Uriarte.
Arellano (8.1 centiMorgans), from Puerto Rico, with ancestors Arellano, Castro, Rivera and Cordero.
Garcia, Javier (8.4 centiMorgans)
Roblizo y Cazorla (8.7 centiMorgans), ancestors: Roblizo y Pizarro, Castro, Padron, Vallester, Castellano, Cazorla, Cortés, Suarez, Silva, Garnica, Roblizo, Martin, region: Madrid.
Junco (Ana Maria Junco)(8.7 centiMorgans), ancestors: de Torró, Pacheco, Orellano (Arrellano), Segarra, Colon, de la Roelas, de Rivera and De Montalvo.

Jorge Piqueras López (28.7 centiMorgans), ancestors : López, Piqueras, Rodriguez, Santacruz, region: Albacete, Spain.
Arce (Sindy Arce) with all roots in Spain. This sample shared DNA with the author that she also shares with Beatrice Torró, Devin Reyes, Cacilia Benavides and Destiny Benavides.
Preda (40.8 centiMorgan): Craig Wood with ancestor Preda, coming from the area south of the Pyrenees in Spain .

73.12.3 Portuguese Residents

Spanish DNA links with people residing in Portugal or by My Heritage considered 100% Iberia:
Marcos Soares (12.1 centiMorgans), ancestors: Alvares, Alves, Carvalho, dos Santos, Andrade, da Rocha.
An exciting match is Freddie Martinez Vazques (16.1 centiMorgans) from the USA, with common DNA links with Crucita Cruz, Shaira Vargas, Dorothy Krois and Ana Maria Junco. The two formats of the name De la Cruz appears to confirm a link through such bloodline. Shaira Vargas shares DNA with us, with Martinez Vasques and also with Ana Maria Sifuentes.
Another exciting match is with Ana Montoya (15.3 centiMorgans).
Another exciting match is with Rui Lavarinhas (14.3 centiMorgans), who is considered 100% Iberian by My Heritage and with whom we share DNA with Mrs Sanchez Rubio from Madrid.
An intriguing match is with 'Eric Castillon' (13.4 centiMorgans), who is considered 100% Iberian by My Heritage.

73.12.4 Other

Elsy Depraetere (43.7 centiMorgans): She is from the same geographic region as the author's Den Dauw ancestors among which Depraetere also appears.
Johan Verrecchia (21.4 centiMorgans): This person is from the privince of Lazio in Italy.
Maria Vermeersch (9.4 centiMorgans): This person has patrilineal roots in Geluwe. The author shares ancestors through his Vermeersch-de Patin ancestry in Geluwe.

73.13 Genetic Analysis based on Geneanet®

DNA matches on Geneanet® were not yet well developed when the first edition of this work was published. More data was collected and entered into the second edition. At the end of 2023, however, this company stopped DNA research. We may, therefore, not hope to find more information through this platform.

73.13.1 Spanish Links

Quellec-Riou: a person whose ancestors are highly embedded in Brittany (16.8 centiMorgans).
Dias: a person with only Spanish and Portuguese ancestors (12.6 centiMorgans).
Paixao: a person with Portuguese and Brazilian ancestors (12.9 centiMorgans).
Gonçalves da Silva, Portuguese (9.9 centiMorgans).
de Oliveira, Portuguese (9.1 centiMorgans).
Bonnefoy: a person in the South of France with Iberian roots such as Cathala, Gomez, Vaez, Mendez, Lopes, Dacosta, Ibarra, Peixoto, Vives and Franca (9.3 centiMorgans).
de Contreras (Elke Schietse, from Oudenaarde): has Pedro Leonis de Contreras, militis Hispania, as ancestor, from Leon. Pedro Leonis had a son, Pedro de Contreras, Militis Hispania, who was born in Pamele, Oudenaarde, on June 12, 1609, and who died in Ghent and was buried at Sint Salvador on October 31, 1675.
Pedro de Contreras married Maria Fierens at Sint Salvador in Ghent on October 11, 1654 (8.6 centiMorgans).
Selosse with Spanish ancestors Gonzalez, Rivera Ramirez-Arellano, and Castro (8.1 centiMorgans).
Pierna (7.9 centiMorgans).
Bervas with ancestors in Brittany, including ancestors carrying the names Le Guernec, Kerneach, Le Floch, Cojan, Ropars, Le Clech, Gac (7.5 centiMorgans).

73.13.2 Links with Brittany

Pierna, with ancestors Guezennec, Bougennec, Guehezec, Bouguennec, le Guennec, and le Breton (7.9 centiMorgans).
Yvon (7.7 centiMorgans).
Vaultier, with all ancestors located in the South-West of Normany and the North of Bretagne near the birthplace of Du Guesclin (7.4 centiMorgans).

73.13.3 Other

Another interesting DNA sample links us with de Patin and de Caestecker:
de Brabandere, Jean-Marie Achille. This person is a patrilineal descendant of Antonius de Brabandere (1725-1799), whose brother, Ignatius Franciscus de Brabandere (1737-1816) was married to Godelieve Clara van Klooster (1745-1796), parents of Carolus Bernardus de Brabandere (1776-1834) who married Francisca Coleta Vynckier (1772-1803) (DNA evidence is given in Chapter 73.8 on page 1590.) in 1798 and were the grandparents of Nathalia Juliana de Caestecker (1830-1971) who married Clement Lammens (1825-1893) in 1864 and are the parents of Eudoxie Romanie Lammens (1868-1931), wife of Emile Theophile Lesage, the author's great-grandfather. We refer to Chapter 71.7.2 on page 1547. This person is also blood-related to de Patin - Vermeersch, like the author, presented in Chapter 65.13 on page 1316, hence a relatively large DNA connection (21 centiMorgans).
Vannieuweborgh, the daughter of Martha Lammens, granddaughter of Arthur Lammens (36.6 centiMorgans).
Simon, with ancestors Van Hulle from Wortegem (17.2 centiMorgans).

73.14 Comparison with Ancient Skeletons by GEDmatch®

The platform GEDmatch® has a tool, made in collaboration with Felix Immanuel, to compare the autosomal DNA of a person with that of found skeletons. It can show where ancient ancestors lived and when they migrated to certain areas. The database ranges from Neanderthal skeletons to more modern Anglo-Saxon specimens. The tool looks for DNA matches from 0.5 centiMorgans to 10 centiMorgans and lights up for every match found on each chromosome. One should discover matches with all skeletons if one goes far enough back in time for small centiMorgans values. We have set the threshold to 2 centiMorgans to have only meaningful output. In the analysis described below, we have added weight, a number matching the observed lines on the result provided by GEDmatch®. It should be considered an indicative value because lines may have different thicknesses and therefore represent higher centiMorgan or certain matching lines can be so close to one another that GEDmatch® puts them out as one result, i.e., one line. Below, all the found skeletons with DNA match with our sample are listed and organized per region. Every person has multiple origins, so remember not to assume that ancestors migrated between the areas mentioned. The GEDmatch® database contains over 100 DNA samples of ancient DNA; 39 had some autosomal DNA in common with ours. The ages shown below are those of the found skeletons. They do not necessarily match the era when ancient ancestors lived in each region.

73.14.1 Alps (13700 year old skeletons)

With known Burgundian ancestors and many French ancestors, it's no surprise that a skeleton found in Switzerland, probably representative of the Burgundy region in France, delivers a high match, despite its age of almost 14000 years.

F999865 L14-200, barcin, Turkey, 8.3ky, Anatolia Neolithic (weight 5).

This connection is unsurprising given the early alliance between Desclergues and Greek settlers in Empúries. Indeed, they were from Phocaea or Phokaia, nowadays Foça in Turkey, around 300 km from Barcin. The progenitor of the Desclergues in Greek Empúries north of Barcelona had a local father (hence our Y-DNA from that area) and a Greek mother from Phocaea, as explained in Chapter 9.2.

73.14.3 Iberia (4700-7200 year old skeletons)

Given the title of this book and all the other genetic and documented evidence we have discovered to prove the Spanish ancestry of the Declercq (Desclergue) line, it would be surprising not to find ancient DNA links on the Peninsula. The results are all from Spanish skeletons from the Northeast quarter of the Peninsula. El Portalon is located in the Sierra de Atapuerca near Burgos. La Mina is located near Arcos de Jalón. The Els Trocs cave is located in Northern Spain between Llerida and Huesca.

Chapter 74

DNA Analysis of Shirani O. de Silva

74.1 Introduction

We already knew Shirani O. de Silva had Ibero-Indian-Ceylonese roots; therefore, a deeper investigation using DNA to reveal this complicated background was fascinating. We used a sample of her brother to investigate the DNA of Shirani Olupathage de Silva. The reason is that otherwise, we could get no information about the paternal ancestry, while we still could extract information about the maternal lineage. The results agree with what we know about the origin, as described in Chapter 54. Indeed, a Carvalho of an Iberian bloodline with ancient links to India has blended with an Iberian de Silva, and their children took the name, de Silva. The lineage went on a voyage from Portugal to India and settled in Goa during the Portuguese rule.

They later moved to Sri Lanka to settle at the fortress of Uduwara on the Kalu Ganga River. The mtDNA reveals that the maternal ancestry line is mid-west Indian Brahmin due to the residence and mixed marriage in Goa. The paternal ancestry line matches samples in Goa and Portugal. As expected, autosomal DNA shows several Sri Lankan links and links with Goa and Iberia.

Furthermore, old traces of DNA are retrieved along the ancient route the paternal ancestors took when they migrated from North-West India, Persia to Byzantine in the Mediterranean, and then along the North coast to Iberia. They arrived in India as pilgrims expelled from Byzantine because of the Byzantine war. The results are significant in complementing earlier studies concerning ancient migrations to Spain. Indeed, such studies are often limited to proto-Gitano tribes, but others have migrated along the same path and found Iberia their new destination. The most crucial difference is that the proto-Gitano tribes have hardly mixed with the other Iberians and have formed a different group in society. The ones who settled and blended became indistinguishable from the average Iberians. Still, the similarity in the pathway taken from Northern India, via Persia and Byzantine to Iberia inevitably leaves genetic traces as the witness of their history, caused by local mixed marriages and most likely crossed unions with the other migrating tribes.

Investigating their past before the written records is mandatory to understand the DNA of de Silva and vice versa, which is the goal of this chapter. Further, Chapter 54 gives an overview of the written evidence. We focus on the time before, during, and after their contributions to the Portuguese expansion to Goa in India and Sri Lanka.

Modern DNA technology, specifically next-generation sequencing (NGS), has facilitated the precise mapping of Shirani Olupathage de Silva's ancestry. We analyzed her mitochondrial DNA (mtDNA) and her autosomal DNA through NGS. The mtDNA analysis, which traces the matrilineal heritage, confirmed the maternal lineage's origins in mid-western India Brahmins.

Given the historical context of intermarriage within Goa, a significant hub during the Portuguese colonial period, this was expected. The autosomal DNA, which provides a broader genetic overview, highlighted her genetic links to Sri Lanka, Goa, and Iberia, affirming her diverse heritage.

The paternal lineage, assessed through Y-chromosome analysis, traced its origins to Portugal and Goa, corroborating historical narratives of Portuguese expansion and settlement in the Indian subcontinent. This analysis also uncovered ancient genetic markers along the migration route from North-West India, through Persia and Byzantine, to Iberia. These markers suggest a complexity of migrations and interactions, including integration and intermarriage with local populations.

These findings align with the broader context of genetic studies on ancient migrations and underscore the significance of gene admixture in shaping present-day populations. Unlike the proto-Gitano tribes, which remained relatively isolated, the de Silva ancestors integrated extensively with local populations, as evidenced by their genetic markers. This integration reflects broader migration and settlement patterns.

The implications of these genetic findings extend beyond mere confirmation of historical narratives. They offer insights into the broader dynamics of migration, integration, and genetic diversity. The de Silva lineage serves as a case study in the complex interplay between genetics and history, illustrating how genetic evidence can complement and enrich our understanding of historical migrations and cultural interactions.

In conclusion, using DNA technology in this genealogical investigation has provided a nuanced understanding of Shirani Olupathage de Silva's ancestry. By tracing maternal and paternal lineages, we have uncovered a rich genetic diversity that spans continents and centuries.

This chapter aims to explore these findings in detail, highlighting the connections between genetics and history. Chapter 54 provides a comprehensive overview of the written evidence, contextualizing these genetic insights within the broader framework of the family's historical journey.

74.2 Iberia and the Ancestors Before Genealogical Records: The Byzantine Migration Path 224-1300

Combining our de Silva sample's autosomal and Y-DNA analysis with historical sources reconstructs the migration. In particular, we refer to Johannes Preiser-Kapeller et al.[1] In the period (224-661), Indian tribes left North East India for Persia for work. Some were nomadic, though most were artisans, musicians, astrologers, and merchants. Those migrations were reported during Shah Ardashir in Persia (224-241) and Bahram Gur, the Shah of Persia (420-438), who brought musicians from India. In the period (661-855), the area was under Arab rule.

Apart from some novel arrivals from India around 661, most tribes of Indian origin were pushed from the Basra area towards Antioch on the Mediterranean coast by Caliph Muawiya in (669-670) and from Mesopotamia to Antioch by Caliph Walid (710), followed by Caliph Yazid II (720). In 820, Indian tribes established a state in Mesopotamia but were defeated in 834 and expelled to Ainzarba, the Adana Province in Turkey. In 855, the battle of Ainzarba took place, which the Greeks won.

They brought people of Indian origin from Ainzarba to Byzantium. They spread across the Byzantine Empire and became, essentially, Byzantine. Our de Silva ancestors were amongst them. Historical reports appear, for instance, in 1050 at Constantinople, where they were veterinarians, or in 1290 in Greece, where they appeared as shoemakers.

Around that time, instability arose in the Byzantine empire, forcing the tribes of Indian origins to spread towards Iberia (along with the Santiago de Compostela pilgrimage road), the Balkan, etc. This process took place until around 1450. In this process, the nomads moved first to central Europe and arrived in Spain and Italy via France after 1400. The sedentary tribes or families arrived over the Mediterranean along the pilgrimage roads to Compostela early in this process. Although both types had different lifestyles, their communities have crossed one another's pathways for hundreds of years and, therefore, a DNA analysis of the nomadic tribes may offer insight and comparison for our study, mainly because, in the past decades, numerous scientific articles have appeared on their genetics. The instability of Byzantine covered a significant period.

Indeed, for instance, in 1261, the conquest of Constantinople occurred by Byzantine troops from the exiled state of Nicaea. In 1270, the eighth Crusade of King Louis IX of France took place with an attack on Tunis. In 1274-1282, the churches of Rome and Constantinople briefly united. In 1271-1294, Marco Polo investigated Asia. In 1294-1302, there was a war between the Byzantine Empire and Venice.

In 1302, refugees from the Western Asia Minor region moved to Constantinople after the first defeat of the Byzantines against the Ottomans at Bapheus. In 1321-1328, there was a civil war in the Byzantine Empire, while in 1326, the Ottomans conquered Bursa, a Byzantine city (Pursa) in Northwest Asia Minor.

Finally, in 1331, the Ottoman conquest of the Byzantine town of Nikaia (Iznik) occurred in the Northwest Asia Minor area. We can safely state that the de Silva ancestors arrived in Iberia around 1300, more than 700 years ago, and were not Nomadic but sedentary professionals.

Interesting genetic studies indicate that the early arrivals from Byzantine who were sedentary and of high status blended with the local population equally for men and women. Later arrivals, i.e., the nomadic tribes, show different patterns. Indeed, it is shown that in those populations, DNA arrived in the tribe mostly from local men and not vice versa.

This indicates that nomadic women were more attractive to the locals than men. Nomadic female partners were probably taken for their beauty, while their low social status hampered the nomadic male partners. An example study that also investigates the Indian origins of the Nomadic people is found in Begoña Martinez-Cruz et al.[2]

Our DNA analysis results in a known Y-DNA Haplogroup, specifically located on the human genome ancestry tree, on the known mt-DNA Haplogroup and autosomal DNA. In particular, the combination of the Y-DNA information, transmitted from father to son and hardly susceptible to mutations, with autosomal DNA that allows comparisons with people worldwide, permits a complete reconstruction of the past.

74.3 Mixed Byzantine and Iberian Genes

The history of Iberia is fascinating. Without going into any details here, we can safely state that by 1400, the peninsula was a real melting pot of many races from many regions globally, South, North, and East of the Mediterranean Sea. An H-L901 Y-DNA Haplogroup typically characterizes paternal ancestry lines with pre-Byzantine roots in North India. It is believed that they had initially been Dravidian and first entered the Iberian peninsula between 1100 AD and 1200 AD as Pilgrims expelled from Byzantine or later as nomadic tribes through France. Modern genetic studies confirmed this early hypothesis, which was based initially on language studies of the nomadic tribes[3] that indicated an ancient origin in Punjab and Rajasthan and the first departures from Indian before 1000.

It is known from historical sources that they arrived in Persia in different waves in the 9th and 10th centuries. Those who came as nomads did so in the 1400s, known from written sources dating from 1417.

Of the nomadic tribes, few chose Iberia as their destination, while most prevailed on the Balkans. Authorities first reported them in Paris in 1427.

The de Silva paternal ancestors were among the sedentary Brahmins expelled from Byzantine. They did not belong to the nomads. They arrived in Iberia as Pilgrims to Santiago de Compostella around 1300, usually the only legitimate way to reach the peninsula. Being of high social rank thanks to their profession, the sedentary Byzantines integrated quickly. Marriage partners were easily accessible because of their status and beautiful looks, which were caused by their ancient Indian origins and different blends with people from Persia and Byzantine. The Iberian society became so biased that later arrivals in the 1400s and 1500s, who were nomadic but looked similar, were treated equally as nobles initially, received welcome letters from powerful persons, and would become unwanted only after a few decades. For instance, a document of 1425 AD exists, issued by King Alfonso de Aragon to grant safe passage to the nomads and permitted access to the towns and cities. Their destiny since then assimilated with that of the Jews and the Muslims, and they became subject to prosecution. [4][5][6][7].

[3] Fraser, A., 1996, The Gypsies (Oxford: Blackwell) pp. 339

By then, the Byzantines who had arrived around 1300 were integrated, mixed, and had taken local names. Likely, most of them did not know their origins. The ones who were prosecuted attempted to turn the tide by assisting in the wars against the Muslims. For instance, in 1492, 'Gitano' auxiliaries helped the Crown of Castile and Leon in the Reconquista of Granada, ending the reign of Muslims in Spain.

Gitanos, descendants of the Nomadic arrivals in the 1400s and the 1500s, retained most of their original looks and often continued as dancers and musicians. They reveal how the Byzantine arrivals around 1300, such as the de Silva ancestors, looked initially while being a mixture of Byzantines and Indians.

Interestingly, the Indian Kathak dance is a precursor of the famous Spanish Flamenco dance, both shown in Figure 74.1. Also, Indian classical music, when accelerated and played with a bit more energy and emotion, sounds like Flamenco.

For DNA analysis, while remembering that the Byzantine immigrants in 1300 shared DNA with the later nomadic arrivals, verifying the names taken by the Nomads is essential. Indeed, most received their Iberian name through baptism or by choice, probably frequently copied from the earlier sedentary arrivals. In contrast, others obtained Iberian family names through local marriage, where the most favorable name was transmitted to the children.

Extensive work in the literature clarifies under which family names nomads lived, in different locations and in different eras in Spain and Portugal. Such information is essential to compare with the sedentary Byzantine DNA such as Shirani de Silva's ancestors. Although most investigations are based on genealogical records, it is safe to conclude that many persons carrying such names must still have genetic links to Byzantine and India, either autosomal or through their Y chromosome.

Here we list all the names which have been used by such Nomads in Spain in the period 1783-1785, as listed by Gamella et al.[8]:

FamilyTreeDNA® has collected a vast number of DNA samples and also managed the ones corresponding to the terms Silva/da Silva/de Silva/Sylva. Numerous Haplogroups are found carrying such a family name, which reveals that they do not have a common paternal ancestor, which is well-known. Genealogical studies have shown that 'de Silva' is more like a clan than a patrilineal family name. One of the reasons is that the name was often transmitted from mother to son when the father's family name was lower ranked.

The ancestry of Shirani de Silva is no exception to this rule. Indeed, in Chapter 54.3.4, it is shown that her paternal ancestor, Juan Carvalho de Silva, described in Chapter 54.5.25, received his de Silva's name from his mother. His parents were Honorato de Carvalho & Maria de Silva. In other words, Honorato de Carvalho was the paternal ancestor of Shirani de Silva, and he had ancient paternal roots in Byzantine with origins in North India.

Unsurprisingly, the Y-DNA Haplogroup belongs to the H-M82 branch, i.e., H-Z34561, as a sub-branch of H-SK1225, and his earliest known paternal ancestors arrived in Iberia around 1300. Male relatives with common paternal ancestors appear as Carvalho and as Carvajal, depending on local customs and perhaps following similar traditions as later arrivals[9].

The most represented family names in the Nomadic communities, often copied from the early arrivals or received by marriage, in modern Spain, with their relative frequencies, are:
Cortés (7.65%), Jiménez (6.99%), Fernández (6.51%), Amaya (4.96%), Flores (4.24%), Moreno (4%), Santiago (3.7%), Heredia (3.58%), Hernández (2.87%), Silva (2.03%), Gabarre (1.79%), Amador (1.73%), Muñoz (1.67%), Vázquez (1.55%), Gómez (1.49%), González (1.14%), González (1.14%), Romero (1.13%), Vargas (1.08%), Montoya (1.02%), Salguero (0.95%), Barrull (0.9%), Escudero (0.9%), Garcia (0.9%), Manzano (0.9%), Reyes (0.9%).
Note that those names also appear in other Spanish families. Of particular interest to our book are Amaya and Cortés (appearing in the four investigated provinces of Madrid, Cordoba, Zaragoza, and Barcelona), Silva (appearing in the 3/4 explored areas of Madrid, Cordoba, and Barcelona), and perhaps also Montaña (only in Madrid).
Note that Montoya is also among those names and appears in the Declercq ancestry in Chapter 29.10.
In Spain, the name 'Silva' is not prevalent and represents less than 0.45% of the population.[10] The website 'Mapa de Apellidos' indicates that the family name 'Silva' appears in 3187 places in Spain, spread over the entire country, with very high concentrations around Barcelona, Madrid, and the Northern border with Portugal. The name 'da Silva' appears in 862 places and 'de Silva' only in 115 locations.

74.4 An Interesting Observation Related to the First Spanish and Portuguese Settlers Overseas

They were primarily persons of mixed Byzantine descent. We refer to an exciting work by Gamella et al.[11].
A Royal Order made the lists on which the article was based and addressed to the Spanish Gitanos in 1783. It stated that local authorities were required to list all residing in their counties. This action collected the names of more than 12000 such individuals in Spain and formed a fascinating source of information on which family names they had. Again, the family names that appear are not unique to Gitanos. In their abstract, the authors state that,
'All Gitano surnames of 1785 are of Spanish origin and have suffered the Christianization and Castilianization of most family names in the country. The most popular were common patronymics such as Fernández, Ximénez, García, Rodríguez, Muñoz, and also surnames of Spanish origin that have become associated with Gitano identity in some regions such as Heredia, Vargas, Cortés, Reyes, Montoya, Moreno, Santiago, Maya, Amaya, Gabarri, etc. Baptism and blended marriages are the most likely source for adopting such surnames by this minority that likely experienced some 'name drift' and 'name inbreeding' . Thus, the frequency of some surnames is probably related to their earlier adoption.'
From the paper, we may highlight the following names, which appear to be linked to Shirani de Silva's ancestors and are connected to the early Portuguese settlements in Goa and Sri Lanka and Spanish in the Americas. The list makes the author assume that many of the early Iberian settlers on the Indian subcontinent and Americas may have been descendants of Byzantines with Indian roots. Since many had been mixed with the Iberian nobility but likely were not wealthy, they may have been the most motivated Hidalgos or Fidalgos to be shipped to the new world for war, trade, or solely for a new life and to obtain nobility titles when possible. They were also the most gentle towards the local populations because of their mixed race.
Names include:
Mendez, Cortez, Cruz, Gonzalez, Torres, Vargas, Garcia, Santiago, Gomez, Castro, Rodriguez, Escudero, Romero, Diaz, Acosta, de/da Silva, Ortiz, Franco, Serrano, Aguilera, Amaya, Ortega, Lopez, Gimenez, Santos, Perez, Roman, Arroyo, Roge, Vidal, Gispert, Oliva, Guzmán, Cabrera, Sosa, Cabra, Pacheco, Alonso, Alfonso, Afonso, Fuentes, Gutierrez, Mauro, Orozco, Ponce, Cabral, Casado, Correas, Calderon, Contreras, Mendoza, Carillo, Pereyra,...

74.5 DNA analysis by FamilyTreeDNA®

The DNA analysis described below is based on Shirani de Silva's brother, Olupathage Losantos de Silva (Olupathage Lasantha de Silva). The sample reveals the Y-DNA Haplogroup of Shirani's father, the mt-DNA Haplogroup of her mother and herself, and the autosomal DNA analysis represents both parents. In theory, the autosomal DNA may differ from Shirani's, but that's no problem because the purpose was to look for signs revealing ancient connections between her family and Goa in India and Iberia in Europe. If Autosomal DNA was the most desired research tool, we could have repeated the research for every brother and sister, which would have been very costly.
Of the Indian subcontinent population clusters, 'MyOrigins Version 3.0' of FamilyTreeDNA® estimates 12% Western Indian, which is the West of India (excluding the North), from Goa to Delhi. This percentage is high compared to other Sri Lankans found

74.6 The Iberian Byzantine Haplogroup

We described the Byzantine migration path in Chapter 74.2. It's essential to keep this in mind to understand the DNA analysis.
First, FamilyTreeDNA®predicted the Y-DNA Haplogroup as H-L901 based on a statistical comparison with the Y-STR values of other samples. Then, ' NEVgen' made a more precise prediction as H1a1a-M82. A few weeks later, FamilyTreeDNA® determined exactly the Y-DNA Haplogroup.
The Y-DNA Haplogroup of Shirani de Silva's father (determined through a sample given by her brother) is H-SK1225, more precisely, H-L901 - H-M2826 - H-M69 - H-M52 - H-L182 - H-M82 - H-M2745 - H-M2772 - H-SK1225 - H-Z34561.
The Haplogroup is prevalent in India up to H-M82, with no further refinements, but the other advances from H-M82 to H-SK1225 and H-Z34561 are found along the route from India to Iberia (Iraq and Iran, Israel, Lebanon, Turkey, Macedonia, Croatia, Spain). Also, the known downstream entries of H-SK1225 are found along that same route for side branches (Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, Switzerland, and the British Isles).
There is an exciting paper by Isabel Menizabal et al.[12] that confirms the correspondence between retrieved DNA and the known history of the Byzantine immigrants in Iberia. The paper focuses on the nomadic tribes that arrived later than the early sedentary ones, but, as explained earlier, common DNA exists, which makes this study very exciting. Based on DNA, the paper estimates that the common ancestors lived in Northern India around 1500 years ago.
They passed through the Balkans more than 38 generations ago, which means more than 700 years ago. As described above, the migration to the Balkan coincided with the sedentary migration over the Mediterranean to Iberia. The Y-STR values and the autosomal DNA can reveal more details about the path from India to Iberia.
Private communication with another FamilyTreeDNA® member, namely Warren Perera, revealed that his Haplogroup (H-Z12533) and our de Silva sample descend from H-Z5885. He has much autosomal DNA in common with Carvalho in Portugal and numerous families in Latin America (mostly Garcia, Hernández, Rodrigues, Perez, and Barrera).
Genealogical research revealed that he descends from Dutch Burghers in Sri Lanka with a male ancestor who arrived from Pennsylvania in North America, a Spanish-rooted father, and a mother of Swiss descent (Baumgartner, born in 1786 in Pennsylvania). The male line was Iberian, from a Byzantine Iberian ancestor. Therefore, it can be assumed that this person's ancestors belonged to the same tribe that arrived in Iberia, connected to Carvalho (settlement), and later spread to other countries in the colonial period.
This family's known and documented roots are in Europe, and it's astonishing how they were able to prove this exciting trajectory through genealogy. The main reason is that the ancestors arrived in Sri Lanka in a documented period. Therefore, the arrival is written and leads to the earlier overseas ancestry. They received the Perrera surname through a female ancestor by switching registration territories, which resulted in the last name being kept as a surname, which was, in their case, according to Spanish tradition, the mother's surname.
The names appearing in the documented ancestry of 2 persons, studied below, who have autosomal DNA in common with Warren Perrera and our de Silva sample, are, based on the Ancestry®:
de Carvalho, Monteiro, Montiero, Goncalves, Simoes, Costa, Sousa, Almeida, Ramalho, Fernandes, Rodrigues, Goncalves, Pedra, Gomez, Sardinha, Pereira, Correia, Borges, Carreira, Guilhoto and da Silva.
Interestingly, Warren Perera overlaps autosomal DNA with a particular Yvan Hernández from Mexico, attributed to India.

[12] Isabel Menizabal et al., 'Reconstructing the Population History of European Romani from Genome-wide Data,' Current Biology 22, 2342-2349, December 18, 2012

MyHeritage® did the analysis. It shows that, as stated in Chapter 74.4, many of the people who went overseas before 1800 had Pilgrim or Byzantine roots.

Figure 74.6 shows that FamilyTreeDNA® is aware of two persons having the Haplogroup H-Z34561, one from Peru, who claims to have Spanish roots and one from Sri Lanka with Spanish-Portuguese roots (our sample). An investigation of the Peru sample and the de Silva history reveals that the connection is likely through Gaspar Rodriguez de Silva, born in Spain around 1534, who is known as the conquistador of Peru and, even more likely, through Diego de Carvalho, described in Chapter 54.3.2 on page 1064. Additional links are found through Diego de Silva y Guzman, a conquistador and poet who died in Cusco, Peru, in 1576, and Jeronimo de Silva, a conquistador born in Valladolid in 1518 and who died in 1574 in Huamanga, Peru. Peru and Spain have been strongly connected in that the rulers even considered themselves as the successors of the Incas, as seen in Figure 74.7. Jeronimo de Silva of Peru is described in Chapter 54.9.2.7 on page 1080.

An investigation on GEDmatch® (DNA comparison between Burgher DNA NL7000624 (*Baumgartner) and FD9011758 (Santos de Silva)) revealed that the DNA of this person (who also has DNA in common with Warren Perrera) and that of our de Silva has almost no Sri Lankan or Indian DNA in common, but a few dozens of samples of Iberian and Jewish descent and also some names which may be linked to the Netherlands and surrounding areas through the VOC. It is indeed known that the Dutch preferred marriages with Portuguese Burghers rather than other islanders. This may have caused VOC blood as part of the autosomal DNA and Portuguese blood. Examples of common 'blood':

-Iberian and Mediterranean: Posada (LG5236271), Alves (JM5872914), Arayici (PD6003729), Ignacio (FS9728914)

-Jewish: Kerekes (LP4048532), Orwitz (HD1886169), Feltman (YH6251597), Pasmanik (UR6368752), Goldman-Emmer (HR2392509), Brazinski (EK2412315), Michalik (NC9395526), Bernstein (NH9974704), Slutsky (MD9749820), Cohen (GL7279953, PQ1765534, AD9225805).

-VOC: Vetsch (UE2140334), Maes (CS9344618), Greiner (WA4715757), Ackerman (ZQ3915765), Frentz (Frentz), Beauregard (ZC3514800), Deweese (YL4949234), Krupnick (QL5255790), Wagner (ZT1540408), Adams (TS3945916), Schipper (BF2149974).

Another investigation on GEDmatch® (DNA comparison between Burgher DNA A013628 (Errol Perera) and FD9011758 (Santos de Silva)) revealed that the DNA of this person (who also has DNA in common with Warren Perrera) when compared to that of our de Silva, results in similar conclusions. Examples of common 'blood' :

-Iberian and Mediterranean: Dominguez (BS7183722), Perez (QT9013437), Sorlino (UU2265417), Medina (TR1489251), Marosi (RA5245046), Perera (A699541), Saiz (EF4708588), Serrano (CT3826623), Getola (WJ5119078), Gianopoulos (TY4352768), Peludat (ZZ6395529).

-Jewish: Freeman (CM5235199), Springmeyer (GY8067404), Bernstein (TR5969810), Morkovsky (RA3249304), Heim (AC8268946), Shmueli (ZQ2055140), Kuhilava (DN5484821), Jakab (XV3287731)

-VOC: De Neve (TY6795873), Wieder (DW8502789), Cornelis (UR9983156).

The two examples above, where Burgher DNA is matched, reveal expected results through two Iberian ancestors with our de Silva DNA.

Indeed, the Burgher community is a blend of Iberians and VOC ancestors.

In the VOC, there were Jews who resided in the Netherlands and in areas that are now Germany. It's also known that Burghers married Burghers and that Dutch Burghers preferred to marry Portuguese Burghers when they decided to marry locally. It is yet a confirmation that the de Olupathage de Silva clan in Uduwara originates from Portuguese Burghers.

74.7 YFull® DNA analysis

YFull® further specifies the Y-DNA Haplogroup as follows:
H-SK1225 - H-Z5885 - H-Z4490 - H-FT167357 (FT167357-FT167608 + 15 SNPs).
Even though Sri Lankans appear in sub-branches of H-SK1225, none are on the branches from H-SK1225 to H-FT167357. This is consistent with the fact that the Haplogroup is not indigenous to Sri Lanka.

74.8 The Y-STR values indicate Iberian Roots from a Byzantine Origin

In all cases described below, the closest Y-STR comparisons for the different studies show the time to the nearest common ancestor between 500 and 1200 years, the most adjacent being samples from Portugal with a common ancestor around 500 years ago.

FamilyTreeDNA® reveals that the closest match from the Indian subcontinent is a specific Touseef Butt from Pakistan, having a nearest common ancestor around 1200 years ago.

Concerning the Y-STR values, a comparison with FamilyTreeDNA® data reveals the closest match as being a certain Alfonso Enriquez (IN37433) whose entry is found in the groups 'The Iberian Peninsula' and 'Portugal DNA,' whence we assume this sample is from a Portuguese male. His predicted Haplogroup is H-L901, so we hope this person has also taken more in-depth tests to determine precisely to which branch of H-L901 he belongs.

Another fascinating case is that of Juan Luis Caetano Noronha from Goa in India (N48234). Of the 12 Y-STR values this (predicted by FamilyTreeDNA®) H-M69 person (H-SK1225 is a subclade of H-M69) tested for, he is at a distance of 2 compared to de Silva.

In particular, the Enriquez sample forms evidence of the Portuguese origins of the de Silva family. Autosomal DNA can help us further, for the moment, or databases developed by specific studies. Rai et al. published one such study. The results allow us to compare the de Silva Y-STR values to those of several Nomadic populations globally. The results, as described below, clearly incline towards a Portuguese origin of the de Silva.

Particular cases of interest are also given in Gusmao et al.[13]. The data files give 17 Y-STR values for 126 self-proclaimed nomads from Portugal, from the districts of Aveiro (Av); Lisboa (Li); Viana do Castelo (VC); Braga (B); Porto (P); Bragança (Bn); Vila Real (VR); Viseu (Vi); Coimbra (Co); Guarda (Gu); Castelo Branco (CB); Leiria (Le); Santarém (Sa); Setúbal (Se); Portalegre (Po); Évora (Ev); Beja (Be); Faro (Fa); and Funchal (Fu).

They are ordered according to their Haplogroup and are listed with the DYS19 values first. The reason is that, for their 126 samples, the DYS19 values were classified according to the Haplogroup for this population. There are 11 samples from the H1a-M82 Haplogroup. They all have, just like our de Silva sample, a DYS19 value of 15. The nearest to de Silva differs in 3 Y-STRs, with a total genetic distance of 4; the specimen is called H15 and is from Lisboa (Li). The two other near samples (which differ in 4 Y-STR values) are H8 and H13, respectively, from Leiria (Le)/Braga (B) and Lisboa (Li). These results are in agreement with the study described below.

Indeed, a study by Rai et al.[14], explains that the Portuguese Nomads of the H1a1a-M82 Haplogroup are closer related to the Serbians of the same Haplogroup and have the same modal Y-STR values as the ones in North East India. Furthermore, a comparison between the Y-STR values of de Silva and the 15 modal values listed in the paper for different populations reveals that de Silva is closest related to the ones in Portugal, Serbia, and North-West India, with Portugal forming the closest match.

As mentioned above, a detailed STR comparison based on 15 Y-STR values listed by Rai et al. for 376 individually sampled persons of the H1a1a-M82 Haplogroup reveals genetic distances between 2 and 18. We list the first four distances as follows:

Genetic distance 2: Serbia (3 samples), Portugal (2 samples).

Genetic distance 3: Serbia (14 samples), Portugal (5 samples), Croatia (5 samples), Rajasthan (1 sample).

Genetic distance 4: Serbia (20 samples), Portugal (11 samples), Croatia (6 samples), Madhya Pradesh (1 sample), Gujarat (1 sample), Rajasthan (1 sample), Tamil Nadu (1 sample), Maharashtra (1 sample).

Genetic distance 5: Croatia (53 samples), Rajasthan (5 samples), Gujarat (4 samples), Portugal (3 samples), Maharashtra (3 samples), Serbia (2 samples), Madhya Pradesh (1 sample).

The above study also provides data for regions where the genetic distances were larger than 5: Afghanistan, Andhra Pradesh, Chattishgarh, Haryana, Jharkhand, Karnataka, Kerala, Orissa, Pondicherry, Uttar Pradesh.

Suppose we divide the number of samples in the above list by the total samples of the respective countries or regions, i.e., Serbia 40, Portugal 20, Croatia 76, Madhya Pradesh 63, Gujarat 16, Rajasthan 21, Tamil Nadu 10, Maharashtra 13. In that case, we obtain the following results:

Genetic distance 2: Portugal (10%), Serbia (7.5%).

Genetic distance 3: Serbia (35%), Portugal (25%), Croatia (6.5%), Rajasthan (4.7%).

Genetic distance 4: Portugal (55%), Serbia (50%), Tamil Nadu (10%), Maharashtra (7.7%), Croatia (7.9%), Gujarat (6%), Rajasthan (4.7%), Madhya Pradesh (1.6%).

Genetic distance 5: Croatia (69.8%), Gujarat (25%), Rajasthan (23.8%), Maharashtra (23%), Portugal (15%), Serbia (5%), Madhya Pradesh (1.6%).

We may gently conclude that Portugal and Serbia's regions result in closer genetic links than the areas in India. Also, the further the genetic distance, the more prevalent the links in India. This means that our sample must have passed through Portugal.

We also refer to another investigation by Regueiro et al.[15]. The investigation was limited to Indians and Serbians who were self-claimed nomadic. Of the 16 tested Y-STR values for 260 samples, we only took the 141 H-M82 haplotype samples, limited to Serbia and India's few regions. The closest distance to our sample was 5 for two referred samples. The first one came from Belgrade, and the second was from Vokkaliga, India, near Goa. These findings are consistent with the comparisons, as mentioned earlier. Had the de Silva Haplogroup been Indian 600 years ago, they should have closer Y-STR similarities with India. The results for India and Serbia are consistent with the assumption that they came from Portugal.

Begoña Martinez-Cruz et al.[16], published the YSTR values and Haplogroups of 1341 samples of nomadic males in different countries, of which 335 of the Haplogroup H-M82, namely 102 from Bulgaria, 37 from Greece, 79 from Hungary, 44 from Romania, 59 from Slovakia, eight from Spain and six from Ukraine. The paper reported 22 Y-STR values for all these individuals. When we select, from that database, all individuals of whom a maximum of 4 Y-STR values were different from our de Silva sample and for whom the total genetic distance was a maximum of 5, then this resulted in 5 samples (SR010, SR018, BR175, BR183, ER109). So, if we only look at the H-M82 matches, following the above criteria, then, for Spain, we have a match of 1 out of eight samples; for Slovakia, we have a match of 2 out of 59 samples, and for Bulgaria, we have a match of 2 out of 102 samples. In other words, there is a 3.7 times higher match for Spain than for Slovakia, a 6.4 times higher match for Spain than for Bulgaria, and a 1.7 times higher match for Slovakia than for Bulgaria. It implicates a correspondence between these weights and the migration path from India to Iberia through the Byzantine.

74.9 The Autosomal DNA Analysis Reveals Sri Lankan, Indian, Byzantine and Iberian Origins (FamilyTreeDNA®)

As mentioned above, the autosomal DNA is that of Shirani's brother. It may be slightly different from Shirani's, but at least we know it comes from the same parents and can be used to find links with Goa and Iberia or elsewhere. We must emphasize that DNA analysis in Sri Lanka is limited. Also, many specimens found come from Europeans of Sri Lankan origin, who were either blended or adopted by European couples as children. Therefore, we must be extra careful and conservative and always request information from the persons appearing to be a match.

As of 2021, only a few dozen samples in the FamilyTreeDNA® databased revealed matches. Many were adopted or mixed children, indicated by a Western family name and a Sri Lankan first name, their picture (if they posted it), the ancestry tree (if it was published), or merely by asking. All these samples were not interesting for our research, except if they gave the exact location of origin or if they mentioned a caste-related family name.

We found a few 100% European persons, with the European name, picture, and available ancestry trees revealed. Such cases, without connection to the Indian subcontinent, are evidence that the autosomal DNA of the Olupathage de Silva family contains DNA sequences that are purely European, and therefore, there must be at least one European ancestor in the family. Of those samples, most were Iberian, and some were British. We even found a person from Norway with ancestry until 1600 without any link with Sri Lanka. Suppose we assume that there were no British ancestors. In that case, a possible explanation is that the British and Norway examples descend from Sephardic Jews or have arrived in Sri Lanka through distant relatives who joined the VOC. Of the found matches with clearly Sri Lankan origins, 25% were X-matches. As most adopted Sri Lankans in the 1980s were Tamils, we may assume that this indicates that somewhere along the ancestry tree, one or more maternal branches may have been of Tamil-speaking origin, as expected for castes like the Salagama and the Karava. In more than one case, we found autosomal DNA matches with the Liyanage clan. This clan is Karava, which indicates that although the family nowadays is Salagama, they must have associated in the beginning with Karava clans.

Here we list a couple of particular samples which we found exciting:

Gaffen and Heller: A genetically blent family of UK families with De Silva ancestors from Kandy in Sri Lanka (93 centiMorgans, 18230 matching SNPs in the one case and 110 centiMorgans, 23091 matching SNPs in the other case),

-Liyanage: a Karava person (93 centiMorgans, 22628 matching SNPs),

-Van Velzen: adopted from Ragama in Sri Lanka, NE of Colombo (83 centiMorgans, 16617 matching SNPs),

-Van Unen: adopted from Kalutara-South in Sri Lanka (66 centiMorgans, 14872 matching SNPs),

-Roten: a Swiss who was adopted from India (60 centiMorgans, 13349 matching SNPs),

-Martens: adopted from Gallela in South Sri Lanka, 100 km NE of Matara (45 centiMorgans, 9477 matching SNPs),

-Verzi: adopted from India (41 centiMorgans, 11440 matching SNPs),

-Liyanage Silva: a Karava person (40 centiMorgans, 10128 matching SNPs),

-Scheitlin: a person from Switzerland with no links or whatsoever with Sri Lanka or India (40 centiMorgans, 8485 matching SNPs),

-Wijayasinghe: from Sri Lanka, and his blood relatives look very European (39 centiMorgans, 9494 matching SNPs). Note that a member of the Wijayasinghe family constructed the Richmond Castle at Kalutara along the Kalu Ganga in recent times. The castle is described in Chapter 62.2.

-Robinson: originates from Sri Lanka (38 centiMorgans, 11863 matching SNPs),

-Thanthrige: mixed with Jayasooriya and Jinadasa, a person of the Karava caste from Sri Lanka (35 centiMorgans, 11500 matching SNPs),

-Hazekamp: adopted from India (31 centiMorgans, 7660 matching SNPs),

-Sherman: This person is characterised by FamilyTreeDNA® as 0% Indian Subcontinental, but is 100% European: less than 1% Slavic, 17% Iberian, 27% Central European, 33% British, 21% Irish, 3% Scandinavian; By Ancestry DNA he is characterised as 1% Southern Indian / Sri Lanka and 1% Southern Central Asian). According to private communication with Mr Sherman, his father is half German and half Irish. At the same time, his mother is entirely English, apart from one exception, a great-great-grandmother from Sri Lanka. Mr Sherman has some autosomal DNA in common with our de Silva sample. He has a distant ancestor called Francina Perera, born around 1846 and dead in 1901, a Karava lady (her ge-name was probably Pathirage) with Portuguese Burgher roots, from the Colombo-Negombo area, who married, in 1866, William Morey (1837-1908), who later, in 1877, became the Consul of the United States of America at Colombo. Their son, also called William Morey, is shown in Figure 74.8, was born in Colombo on December 17, 1864, and would die on December 13, 1916, in Otis, ME, USA. The latter was a civil engineer and married Evangeline Angie Chapman in 1884 in Orono, Penobscot, ME, USA. The couple is buried at Rock Creek Cemetery, Washington DC, USA. Confirmation that Francina Perera must have descended from Portuguese is found because the tested sample should typically contain around 6% Indian Subcontinental DNA had she not had European roots. The latter is not the case because FamilyTreeDNA® found 0% (which probably means less than 1%).

In comparison, Ancestry DNA only found 1-2% Southern Indian DNA. Besides, FamilyTreeDNA® found Iberian DNA and there is a DNA match with our de Silva sample. The equivalent relation scheme shows that both samples are separated from each other, like 3rd or 4th cousins. Had Francina Perera been an ancestor of de Silva, and if de Silva did not have Iberian ancestors, then the number of generations since her would have matched the number of shared centiMorgans, namely 24. At the same time, the sample should, in that case, have revealed 6% Indian Subcontinental DNA, while it shows, at the most, 2% such DNA. This is evidence that the overlapping DNA between de Silva and Sherman's sample is not Indian but Iberian. Interestingly, the de Silva sample shares the same DNA as a Portuguese Burgher (Rosalie K. S.) in Sri Lanka. Also, X-DNA is shared, which forms waterproof evidence that our de Silva originates from a clan of Portuguese burghers (24 centiMorgans, 6400 matching SNPs).

-Kirkwood: a British without Sri Lankan or Indian roots and does not share any DNA with any of the other autosomal links we found (24 centiMorgans, 6400 matching SNPs).

-Vogel: a person who descends from Dutch grandparents (Vogel) and Spanish grandparents (Juarez and Guerrero). This person has no Sri Lankan roots whatsoever. (24 centiMorgans, 5561 matching SNPs).

-Appoo: We found two entries of the Appoo family. This family descends from John Jacobus Appoo, born around 1822 in Trincomalee in Sri Lanka and married to a da Sylva. His father was John Emmanuel Appoo; therefore, his mother was probably Da Sylva. John Jacobus worked on ships. This Da Sylva was likely of Portuguese descent and was also Appoo. Recent genealogists in New Zealand and Australia assumed that this John Jacobus Appoo, despite his European name, was also a Singhalese. Perhaps he spoke Singhalese, and some certificates found concerning him may have been in Singhalese. He ended up in Australia and New Zealand, and there is a place named after him: Appoo's Creek in the Aorere Valley. He became a famous gold digger there. He died in 1861 in Amherst in Victoria, Australia, and was, according to his death record, 38 years old. Some of his relatives appear in documents as 'Aposylva.' We found pictures online of John Jacobus Appoo's granddaughter, Rebecca Morris. There is no physical indication that she may have had Indian or Sri Lankan DNA. She looks Portuguese.

Furthermore, the other family members, descending from this Rebecca, all look very Portuguese indeed. Therefore, it is highly likely that the couple Appoo - da Sylva was Portuguese or had Portuguese (i.e., not mixed with locals) parents. Because Goa was still Portuguese when Sri Lanka and the rest of India had become British, it is possible that such a Portuguese family, for economic reasons, ended up in Trincomalee, long after Portuguese Ceylon, but during Portuguese Goa. We cannot be sure due to a lack of information. It is equally unclear where the name Appoo comes from. In its different spellings, such as Apo and Apoo or Appo, the name may have been Iberian or from other regions in Europe. We conducted a thorough investigation but found no clear evidence, as the term is prevalent worldwide. However, we may note an interesting document in a book published by John Penry Lewis (1854-1923)[17] that describes the circumstances of the death of Mr. Dick. Several witnesses, including 'Don Juan Appoo' (Sic), are mentioned. The appearance of the Spanish name 'Don Juan Appoo' is remarkable because 1847 was during British Ceylon. One would instead expect Dom Joan Appo, or Don John Appoo, or rather Mr John Appoo. If the family has initially been Singhalese, then it is weird that they appeared very much spread throughout the world in the 19th century and that the name is tricky to find in Sri Lanka, if not impossible. Probably, the family was naturalized British and came from a former Portuguese or Spanish area in the world. This would explain the appearance of 'Don Juan,' 'Da Sylva,' and 'Appoo' itself. A candidate is Goa: Indeed, the British briefly occupied Goa from 1799 to 1813. To make things even more interesting, we found the following passage in a book by George Turnour in 1836[18],'156, Raaja Singha 1st Seetaawaka, 1581, a descendant of Siri Sanbo, a great favorite of the nation, son of Maaya Dunnai of Seetaawaka. In the course of his wars with Don Juan, he captured Kotta and laid siege to Colombo, which he was obliged to raise, in consequence of the Portuguese bringing Koon Appoo Bandar from Goa and sending him with an army to Uda-Rata (Oudarata), to make a diversion in their favor - he was a descendant of the branch of the Royal family, that had settled at Peradeniya, and had been sent in his childhood to Goa - The King subsequently relinquished Buddhism and became a convert to the Brahminical faith - he built the Bairaindi Kowille at Awissawelle and bestowed the shrine of Adam's Peak on some Aandee Fakiers - he extirpated the priests of Budha, and destroyed the books containing the tenets of their religion, wherever they could be found - he also put to death every member of the Royal family, he could get into his power - he died, while engaged in war with Koon Appoo Bandar, at Kukal Bittrawella in 2135'. On the same page, there is also 'His relationship to Raja Singha is not stated - he succeeded him at Seetaawaka, and was put to death - Raja Singha's sister, who had married Raja ascended the throne - She was made prisoner by Don Juan, and the Portuguese, and her daughter five years old, was sent to Goa.

FamilyTreeDNA® has a tool to check which persons with autosomal links have that particular DNA in common with other people. It appears that the two Appoo entries are linked but not to anybody else with DNA in common with our sample. This may indicate that their roots are not Sri Lankan but indeed European. The DNA they have in common with our sample is located on Chromosome 1.

In addition, the Douglas sample has DNA in common with one sample that also has DNA in common with our sample, although it's not the same DNA section. The sample is of Nillson-Linstrom, with an ancestry tree known until around 1600, and it is confined to Scandinavia, particularly Sweden and Finland. It concerns Chromosome 9, on which 1493 SNPs, i.e., 7.77 centiMorgans, are shared on the genomic position 111474408 - 116059622, the most extended section. Our sample shares 32 centiMorgans with the Nillson-Linstrom sample with a definite European origin. Note that there are many connections with Iberia in the lower numbers of shared centiMorgans, as described below in the GEDmatch® analysis section.

The two Appoo DNA entries are:

-Douglas: A genetically blent person of Irish, Scottish, English, and New Zealand families with an ancestor Appoo who was in the Trincomalee area; hence, the link could be European through Appoo or a local blend between Appoo and a Sri Lankan (23 centiMorgans, 6797 matching SNPs).

-Bougen: A genetically mixed person with most roots in the UK and New Zealand and with a great-great-grandfather called Da Silva Appoo with Appoo European and likely Da Sylva Portuguese (21 centiMorgans, 4881 matching SNPs) .

74.10 The mt-DNA Haplogroup reveals the Kuru Kingdom as the Maternal-line Origin (FamilyTreeDNA®)

The mitochondrial DNA (mt-DNA) Haplogroup is R31 and was determined by FamilyTreeDNA®. The overwhelming number of matches higher in the Haplogroup tree (from R to R31) are Europeans. Furthermore, the literature found that the Haplogroup R31 is Indo-European. The locations in India where it is found chiefly are Uttar Pradesh, Andhra Pradesh, and Rajasthan. Furthermore, the ones found in those regions in India are subHaplogroups of R31 (R31a and R31b), which indicates that the maternal ancestors of Shirani de Silva have been separated from those regions for many centuries. This agrees with the observation that the maternal clan must have been of the Karava caste in the past (before they turned into Salagama during the VOC period).

Therefore, they originated from the Kuru Kingdom in the regions mentioned above in Northern India. We have yet to find out and will only find out when many more people test their DNA, which is the route they migrated from the Kuru Kingdom to Sri Lanka. It may have been through Goa, just like the paternal ancestry line, or it may be through the South Indian coast, as is usually assumed by historians who describe the history of the Karava in Sri Lanka. Indeed, the maternal ancestry does not define the early de Silvas wives in Goa, but the ascendance starting with Shirani, her mother, her grandmother, etc., may have been embedded in Sri Lanka for many centuries.

The literature finds that the R31 mt-DNA Haplogroup originated in Northern India, with the subHaplogroups R31a mainly found in Brahmins from Uttar Pradesh and Rajputs from Rajasthan. In contrast, the subHaplogroup R32b is found primarily in Reddys from Andhra Pradesh. Interesting papers on this matter are Malliya Gounder Palanichamy et al.[19] and Gyaneshwer Chaubey et al.[20].

74.11 Old DNA analysis by Consanguinitas® Agrees with New Results

Several years before the above-described extended FamilyTreeDNA® DNA-test, namely in 2014, a primitive commercially available test has been done based on a limited number of autosomal markers compared to results in different regions worldwide.

The results are shown in Figure 74.9. Although the results were probably primitive, perhaps based on a somewhat limited database of samples and not easy to interpret due to a lack of information provided by the company 'Ancestral Origins,' which explained the undertaken test executed by Consanguinitas®, some exciting features appeared which are consistent with the above mentioned more sophisticated DNA test performed by FamilyTreeDNA®. Application of an automatic, those days online available application, 'Earth Human STR Allele Frequencies Database,' which is nowadays only used by 'Interpol' and no longer accessible to the public for privacy reasons, offered the following results.

First of all, 58% of the tested marker matches appeared in Portugal and territories that formerly belonged to Portugal. In comparison, 11% occurred in Spain and the former Spanish settlements in the Americas. Then, we also found matches in central Europe likely caused by the nomadic tribes who followed a similar migration path:

Northern Poland (1.43%), North-Central Poland (0.74%), North-Eastern Poland (0.73%), Central Poland (1.66%), Lodz (Poland) (0.72%), South-Eastern Poland (0.58%), Transylvania (Romania) (1.44%), Wallachia (Romania) (1.65%), Dobruja (Romania)

(1.18%).
Further, we found matches in the area matching Byzantine: Van (Eastern Turkey) (2.17%), Greece (2.56%), Cyprus (2.62%).
Then, the area close to Byzantine: Macedonia (2.03%), Novi Sad (Serbia) (1.35%), Bosnia-Herzegovina (0.73%), Croatia (0.88%), North East Tuscany (2.04%), Italy (1.64%), Sicily (2.11%).
Finally, and specifically Northern Portugal (1.02%).
In particular, we found eastern Timor outside of Iberia, showing the most outspoken DNA match with Shirani de Silva, who had been Portuguese until recently (1596 - 1975). Certainly, the family name de/da Silva appears to be well-spread in Eastern Timor.
When the Consinguinitas® results were compared, one by one, with the statistical allele listings[21], several of the 13 STR comparisons indicated Hispanic race.

74.12 GEDmatch® Results for De Silva

74.12.1 Population Matches with de Silva (GEDmatch®)

The DNA sample of de Silva, analyzed by FamilyTreeDNA® , was submitted to GEDmatch® as 'Kit FD9011758' in December 2019 to double-check the conclusions while making comparisons with a much more extensive database. This investigation is purely autosomal and may, therefore, indeed be considered as proof of the pudding.
The de Silva sample's Autosomal GEDmatch® analysis was complicated because of the broad stretch of geographical regions involved between India and Iberia. Therefore, we ran all models and presented the results for each below.
GEDmatch® compares autosomal genetic information with databases, always limited to specific regions. Therefore, numbers should still be considered cautiously, and numbers from one database should not be weighed against others. The results prove that the autosomal DNA originated from North India and was mixed with populations along the Byzantine path from India to Portugal. The most abundant genetic correspondence is with India, so unless specific regions are known, we will not mention India in what follows. The various Admixture Proportion tools have difficulty producing consistent results because of the healthy mix of genes from India's vast stretch of land to Portugal and then back to Goa and Sri Lanka.

74.12.1.21 A focus on India

When the database of MDLP World Oracle is consulted with a focus on Indian populations, we find, in order of closeness (shortest average genetic distance) from close to distant: Indian Jews, Sindhi, Burusho, Pathan, Balochi, Makrani, Pashtun, Brahui, Parsi, Kalash, Roma, Tadjik, Turkmen, Hazara, Uzbek, Kusunda, Iranian, Uygur, Azeri.

If in the database admixtures are searched of 'Indian' with specific populations, then the database returns in order of distance (closest first): Sindhi, Brahui, Balochi, Kalash, Jewish India, Makrani, Burusho, Pathan, Parsi, Pashtun, Abhkasian, Georgia Imereti, Kurd, Ossetian, Georgian Laz, Lezgin, Avar, Iranian, Lak, Azeri.

Detailed output of puntDNAL K13 Global Oracle for admix populations related to India gives the shortest distance to the communities of Chenchus from Karnataka with either Markani, Brahui, or Balochi of Sindhi, which is, in fact, geographical evidence of origins in Goa, India.

Perhaps the most interesting analysis comes from the MDLP K23b database.

It gives genetic correspondence to India (a majority of 63%) but also Europe (2%) and North Africa (2.64%). For India, the closest genetic distance in that database is what the Bhili people, located in the North West of India, and the Lodhi, found in the central North of India, likewise for the Tharu in the very North of India. For the admix populations in the database, the closest distance is with certain castes in Tamil Nadhu blended with Algeria, Morocco, Berber, or Spanish Canarias. The latter reveals correspondence to local blends in Sri Lanka and also Iberians.

74.12.2 Individual Matches with de Silva (GEDmatch®)

As was done in the above analysis based on FamilyTreeDNA®, we also checked individual matches using GEDmatch®, which deals with a much more massive database than FamilyTreeDNA®. Below are matches listed according to the number of centiMorgans. There were many matches with names characteristic of the British Isles, the Low Countries, France, and Germany, which we ignored in this analysis because they may be adoptions. So we limited this overview to terms linked to the Mediterranean, including Jews, nomads and Muslims, Turkish and Persian. We also listed Indian and Sri Lankan names if they appeared. The latter group is deficient, which can only be explained because probably very few Indians submit their samples to GEDmatch®. Names with (*) behind are also in the above list of nomadic families. We assume similarities between the early sedentary arrivals in Iberia, such as the ancestors of de Silva, and the later Nomadic arrivals.

74.12.3 Match between de Silva and Declercq

A comparison was made between the de Silva DNA sample and the Declercq DNA sample, 195955 SNPs were used to place the centiMorgans, mentioned above in perspective. There were only five shared segments, all on Chromosome 6, total centiMorgans: 4.1. It can be assumed that this minor autosomal connection has ancient roots and these roots exist through a connection between the Desclergues and de Silva through Cortés and the Counts of Barcelona, as outlined in Chapter 54.5.7 on page 1068 and Chapter 27.2 on page 301.

74.12.4 Old Ancestry Matches between de Silva and de Rivera

Between the sample of de Silva (kit FD9011758) and other kits, we found 2 Riviera samples. Note that the name appears in Shirani de Silva's ancestry before the arrival of the family in Goa, found in Chapter 54.5.21.4.
Noemi Rivera (kit V8664801, 15.1cm) and Nathanael Rivera (kit EN4432346, 8cm).

74.12.5 De Silva - Carvalho - de Almeida DNA (GEDmatch®)

There are very few Indian or Sri Lankan autosomal matches, which may be partly because not many people from these countries have submitted their DNA. The inbreeding of the past centuries in Udiwara, Sri Lanka, may also be a reason for the database's deficiency.
We have collected all the autosomal samples of de Silva, Carvalho, and de Almeida or their variants. The result proves the correctness of Shirani de Silva's ancestry, whose brother's DNA was investigated by GEDmatch® as kit FD9011758.

74.12.5.1 Carvalho

We found Odilia Carvalho (kit SU2662050) with 7.5cm DNA overlap. This person is confirmed from Portugal. Shirani de Silva's paternal ancestry originates from Carvalho, shown in Chapter 54.5.25.

74.12.5.2 de Silva

We found Beatriz Silva (kit UL6057388) with 9cm DNA overlap; Molly Silva (kit KQ6243221) with 7.9cm DNA overlap. Beatriz is from Portugal, Molly lives in the USA and is of Iberian descent; Brian Silva (kit YD4810304), with 7.5cm DNA overlap.

74.12.5.3 de Almeida

We found d' Almeida (kit QZ9788433) with 7.9cm DNA overlap and (kit DX6566664) with 7.3cm DNA overlap. In 1955, this person lived in Rio de Janeiro and descended from a family from the North of Portugal that moved to Brazil in the early 20th century. In Portugal, they resided in Santo Tirso in the previous century, just a few kilometres away from Martim. The Portuguese explorer and military commander Lourenço de Almeida was born around 1480 AD. The information was obtained via private communication with the owner's nephew Pedro D' Almeida who handled his DNA-sample analysis and genealogy. The blood relationship is also described in Chapter 54.10

74.12.5.4 Joint Overlap Between De Silva, Carvalho and de Almeida

Within the DNA sequences in common between our de Silva DNA (kit FD9011758) and the found samples of Carvalho, de Silva and de Almeida, there are also mutual overlaps that show that these particular samples partake a shared DNA pool, which proves that the ancestry tree is correct.
Each of the described ranges of overlap is within the range that also overlaps with our FD9011758 DNA.
On Chromosome 1, SU2662050, KQ6243221 and DX6566664 overlap around 50 SNPs with each other.
On Chromosome 6, UL6057388 and KQ6243221 overlap around 200 SNPs.
On Chromosome 8, DX6566664 and UL6057388 overlap around 100 SNPs.
On Chromosome 9, SU2662050 and DX6566664 overlap around 200 SNPs.
On Chromosome 14, UL6057388 and SU2662050 overlap around 300 SNPs; and UL6057388 and SU2662050 overlap around around 260 SNPs.
On Chromosome 17, KQ6243221 and SU2662050 overlap around 310 SNPs; while DX6566664, KQ6243221 and SU2662050 overlap around 50 SNPs.
On Chromosome 21, SU2662050 and UL6057388 overlap 202 SNPs.
On Chromosome 22, UL6057388 and KQ6243221 overlap 220 SNPs.

74.12.5.5 DNA Comparison with the Families of the First Fidalgos of Goa and Kotte (GEDmatch®)

Early in the Portuguese period of Kotte in Sri Lanka, several family names were among the most famous fidalgos in the literature. We have found these family names in the database with links to the de Silva DNA as well, some of which were also listed above:
A. De Soyza (kit ZT7552027, 9.8cm), J. de Faria Antunez (kit WP8424593, 8.2cm), A. A. Pinto (kit GP9657924, 7.7cm), P. Cam (kit QQ4911292, 7.4cm), R. Correa (kit PR8498562, 7.3cm), P. complete name and email address and the centiMorgan and SNP estimates per section). We added the persons to which each sample kit (left column) belongs on the right-hand side. Note that for specific terms, we used more than one kit. In that case, the difference can be seen by the variation in the kit code in the right column. The 4th and 5th columns show the DNA sequence's B37 Start Position and the B37 End Position, which appears both on the de Silva sample and the specific sample in the figure. This shared section is indicated by a color bar in the graphic image in the 7th column. The numbers and the graphical representation make comparing common overlaps between de Silva and several samples easy. These family names appear as clusters of persons with common DNA in the de Silva DNA, which indicates inbreeding within a small population. Since the samples are from Iberia, this inbreeding, shared with our de Silva sample, must have occurred before the Portuguese voyages to India. A reasonable assumption is that this is caused by marriages amongst the nobility, somewhat similar to unions within the same caste.

Further inbreeding occurred in Goa, India. However, the first Portuguese arrivals in Goa married local women; from the second generation onward, sons probably mainly married daughters of other Luso-Indian families. Therefore, after a century or so, the pioneering Luso-Portuguese families at Goa and Sri Lanka must have been blood-related to each other. However, The latter explanation is insufficient because the samples have an Iberian origin. Therefore, the strongest inbreeding must have occurred in the period before the settlement at Goa, i.e., marriages within the nobility class.

74.13 Genetic Analysis based on MyTrueAncestry®

The platform uses PCA (Principle Component Analysis) to determine the genetic distance between samples and, consequently, between populations. The technique has been described in Chapter 73.11 on the DNA analysis of Declercq. The results are shown in Figures 74.32, 74.33, 74.34, 74.35 and 74.36.

Of the closest Indian tribes and peoples linked to de Silva, we find, in Figure 74.36, the following four:

Dusadh: they are also known as Paswan; they form a Hindu caste and are found in Bihar, Purvanchal, and Jharkhand, not far from Jaunpur;

North-Kannadi: this population is found where Goa is located and the area East of Goa (Uttara Kannada); Chenchu: an ancient Dravidian tribe in Karnataka (just East of Goa) and areas further east.

Kol: this tribe is spread all over the North-East of India.

MyTrueAncestry® provided a timeline, shown in the Figures 74.37, 74.38, 74.39, and 74.40.

74.14 Geneanet® DNA Results for De Silva

On Geneanet®, some individuals described in other tests appear and are not repeated here. Instead, we focus on a few matching samples found only in Geneanet®, although the centiMorgan numbers are small.

We found several links in the Navarra area (on the Spanish and the French side of this historical region):

Marcella Vallejo (7 centiMorgans),

Laspumaderes and Lasmarigues (7.5 centiMorgans),

Crabos (7.5 centiMorgans),

Someone from near Biaritz (22.4 centiMorgans).

We also found Spanish persons or persons with definite Spanish roots:

Sebastien Kaeuffer with ancestors de Espinosa, de Aragon, de la Torre, de Miranda, de los Monteros, de Burgos, Sanz (7.1 centiMorgans)

Christophe Dagues, a French with Spanish roots (Falgas, Costa, Creissels, Colomer, Pujol, Delbo, Pages, Esteve, Dominjo, LLoansi, Estrada, Moulenat, Doulatge, Delonqua, Vidal, Llensa, Marty, Bosc, Delonca, Andreau) (7 centiMorgans).

A person with Spanish ancestors Molina, Belasi, Linco and also Dupuits (1.4 centiMorgans) de Rico, sharing 7.8 centiMorgan with de Silva. Geneanet® shows the registrations of de Rico before 1600 as having a maximum in Castille and Leon (in Salamanca) and, interestingly, exposing a ring around the old Sevilla Kingdom. The map is shown in Fig. 74.41.

The French persons in this list were from Aquitaine and are probably linked through ancestors of Fernando Samara de Cunha y Rala because Samara originates in that area. This person, a Sri Lankan with Portuguese ancestors, played a significant role in establishing Uduwara, where Shirani de Silva's ancestors lived. He is described in Chapter 56.7. The connection is probably to be found in the Navarra Kingdom. The DNA likely entered the family through mutual descendants of Samara de Cunha y Rala and Antonio Carvalho de Silva in Uduwara, Sri Lanka.

Autosomal links in Latin America are equally prevalent.

Inalda Santos from Brazil (7.2 centiMorgans)

Even the VOC can be retrieved

Maria-Laura Louise Kapellen, a person with only Dutch ancestors and old Sephardic ancestors (8.3 centiMorgans).

Interestingly some British traces are also found, which we cannot explain based on the known ancestry. It concerns either an old Iberian connection, or an illegitimate ancestor.

Drewel-Hedden with only ancestors in Great Britain (7.2 centiMorgans).

We equally found a Sri Lankan connection that shows that the de Silva clan of Uduwara must, in the beginning, have been Karava caste.

Prishani Arachchige, with ancestors Ranasinghe Arachchige, Disanayake, Kandadage (48.6 centiMorgans).

Nilukshi Alankara, with ancestors Alankara, Perera, Abeysinghe en Wanniarachchige and blood-related with the above Prishani Arachchige.

74.15 MyHeritage® DNA Results for De Silva

74.15.1 Portugal

Portuguese Burger De Mel - Fernando, with ancestors Perera, Fernando, Costa and De Mel. They are all from Colombo (11.5 centiMorgans).

74.15.2 Far-East Portuguese Settlements

Interestingly, MyHeritage®indicates minute autosomal DNA fractions linking with the regions of East Indonesia (0.9 %) and the Japan-Korea area (1.7 %). These connections must be due to the Portuguese presence in Malaca, Ternate, and Timor on the one hand, and Macau on the other.

The Portuguese dominion over Malacca, a prominent city on the Malay Peninsula, endured for 130 years (1511-1641) throughout its status as a territorial holding of the Portuguese East Indies. The territory in question was acquired via the subjugation of the Malacca Sultanate, which formed a crucial component of the Portuguese endeavors to establish dominance over regional commerce. Prominent Malacca captaincy individuals were Rui de Brito Patalim, Manuel de Sousa Coutinho, António Pinto da Fonseca, and Luís Martins de Sousa Chichorro.

Portuguese Timor denotes a colonial territory under the dominion of Portugal, which lasted from 1702 until 1975. Throughout this historical era, Portugal and the Dutch East Indies jointly occupied the island of Timor. The first European presence in the area was established by the Portuguese in the year 1515. The establishment of a Dominican friar's company on the island occurred in 1556, leading to the region's declaration as a Portuguese colony in 1702. After the commencement of the Carnation Revolution, a decolonization process initiated in Lisbon, East Timor, was subjected to an invasion by Indonesia in 1975. In 1702, António Coelho Guerreiro received the official designation as Governor and Captain General of the islands of Timor and Solor, as well as other southern territories, by Caetano de Melo e Castro, the Viceroy of Goa. This appointment marked the end of the autonomous rule held by the Dominican missions.

The construction of Fort Kastela in Ternate may be attributed to the Portuguese in 1522. The structure in question is alternatively known by several names in other languages, such as São João Baptista de Ternate or Fortaleza de Ternate in Portuguese, Ciudad del Rosario in Spanish, and Gammalamma in Ternatean and in Dutch.

In April 1521, King Manuel I of Portugal commissioned a fleet from Lisbon led by Jorge de Brito. The navy received instructions to intercept the Spanish fleet commanded by Ferdinand Magellan on its voyage from the Americas to the Spice Islands. Upon reaching the shore, they were instructed to erect a stronghold on Ternate Island and assert Portuguese dominance. The Portuguese bestowed the fort's original designation in honor of Saint John the Baptist, with the first stone being put on the day of his feast in 1522. The task was accomplished on February 15th, 1523.

The chosen site was situated on the southwestern shore of Ternate, close to the Sultan's Court. However, it was around 7 kilometers from the main port at Talangame, devoid of any reefs. Kastella had three constricted passageways amongst the surrounding reefs, facilitating limited watercraft access to load cloves and impeding more giant warships from approaching close enough to engage in the bombardment. The fort was deemed inadequate by many subsequent observers, and it was not until the governorship of António Galvão in 1536 that substantial improvements were made to its fortifications.

The historical trajectory of Macau under its colonial rule by Portugal may be categorized into three major political epochs. The first event under consideration pertains to the creation of the Portuguese colony between 1557 and 1849. The Portuguese exercised control over the Portuguese population and some facets of the territory's government without possessing genuine sovereignty. Following the era mentioned above, academics often recognize the colonial period spanning from 1849 to 1974. As Macau's significance within the Portuguese Empire increased, the sovereignty of Portugal over Macau also got stronger, ultimately establishing it as an integral component of Portuguese territory. During this particular age, Chinese hegemony was mostly symbolic or titular. The third phase may be the transition era or post-colonial period, which occurred after the Carnation Revolution of 1974 and lasted until the handover in 1999. Francisco Martins assumed the role of the first Portuguese governor of Macau in the year 1583.

Specific de Silva members in the mentioned areas are described in Chapter 54.9.2.6 on page 1079, and Chapter 54.9.2.5 on page 1079.

74.16 Comparison with ancient Skeletons

Remembering the Byzantine migration path, described in Chapter 74.2 when interpreting the connection to old skeletons is essential. Furthermore, the fact that VOC members typically married blended Portuguese-Indian or Portuguese-Sri Lankan brides (Portuguese Burghers) should also be kept in mind to understand the links with Irish or Scandinavian skeletons.

We have followed the same procedure as in Chapter 73.14, though we set the threshold to 1 centiMorgan. As a result, to have comparable weights, we divided the weights by two before listing them below. Despite having lived many generations in India and Sri Lanka, the European ancestry of de Silva must match ancient European skeletons. Some of these connections may exist through the Iberian ancestry, others, perhaps, through some branches originating in the VOC or British periods.

The GEDmatch® database contains over 100 DNA samples of ancient DNA, which had some autosomal DNA in common with ours. The ages shown below are those of the found skeletons. They do not necessarily match the era when ancient ancestors lived in each region.

Chapter 75

Faucon's Study of the Onomastics of Du Guesclin

The Spanish version is outlined in the book in Chapter 19.26.4, but also in France, several versions existed. Among them, de Glerquin, De Glerquino, De Guerclin, Du Clerquin, De Clequin, De Clequino, De Glerquin, De Glerquino, du Glearquin, ... are of particular importance. This unique research uncovers their resemblance to De Clergue, Desclergue, providing a fresh perspective on the study of this name.

In Chapter 19.11, a theory was presented that the patrilineal ancestors of Bertrand Du Guesclin may bave been Desclergues, or Clergues in Spain, who had transformed their name, under Moorish rule, into Hakim or Hakin, synonymous for Clergue.

Under Creative Commons rules and because of the essence of the contents in the context of this book, we cite the entire article of Jean-Claude Faucon, published in 1974.[1]

La société moderne nous a si parfaitement classés et étiquetés que noms et prénoms se collent sur nous aussi solidement que nez et oreilles. Aussi sommes-nous toujours surpris par la grande fantaisie qui régnait en ce domaine au Moyen Age, comme elle règne encore en partie dans certaines régions du monde, pour des raisons souvent comparables. Les héros les plus célèbres n'échappaient pas à ces incertitudes : Jeanne d'Arc, dans les manuscrits de son procès, est nommée non seulement DARC ou TARC, mais aussi DARE ou DAY (1). Les contemporains, apparemment, n'étaient pas gênés outre mesure par ces variations. Le nom du connétable DU GUESCLIN a connu, comme les autres, bien des métamorphoses, et on pourrait légitimement se demander pourquoi cette forme plutôt qu'une autre est passée à la postérité.

L'usage a évolué au cours du Moyen Age, mais au XIV^{e} siècle, si le premier nom, propre à la personne, reste toujours primordial, la seconde dénomination — le surnom —est devenue généralement héréditaire et commune à divers membres d'une même famille ; à l'occasion un surnom individuel pouvait se substituer à la famille.

Cependant, les modifications graphiques sont si fréquentes à cette époque, à cause d'une part de la grande fantaisie des scribes, d'autre part des nombreuses particularités dialectales en usage, qu'on doit admettre souvent d'incontestables différences de prononciation.

Les textes des XIVe et XVe s. célébrant en vers ou en prose les faits du connétable, nous livrent de son nom les formes les plus variées ; un peu partout, et c'est naturel, seul le premier nom apparaît : « Messire BERTRAND, ou BERTRANT - BRETRAN - BERTRAN - BERTRAM et même BARTREM (2) - BERTREM et BERTRANS (3) Son titre célèbre de « connestable » de FRANCE » suffit souvent à le désigner, surtout dans les Chroniques ; quant aux épithètes laudatives, elles reviennent sans cesse : « le bon Connestable - le bon Bertrant - le vaillant - le preux - le chevalereux - le valable Bertrand... »

« Le preux vassau et le bon chevalier » écrit Guillaume de Saint-André dans sa chronique en vers. Pour CUVELIER (4), dans sa vaste chanson, il est aussi « le nobile Bertrand » ou « Bertrand le Palazin » ; notons pourtant que ces deux expressions apparaissent déjà dans la brise d'Orange pour désigner un Bertrand (5) ; y aurait-il là un souvenir épique précis ? On lit aussi : « le bon breton », mais si cette expression apparait parfois exacte — ainsi chez Christine de Pisan « ...fut alors esleu a connestable de France le bon breton... messire Bertran de Clequin » (6) — elle semble bien souvent résulter d'une erreur de copie ; en effet la forme avec métathèse BRETRAN est assez fréquente et peut prêter à confusion. Par exemple, dans le ms B du « Livre des fais et bonnes meurs du roi Charles V » de Ch. de Pisan, on lit : « le bon BRETRAN de CLEQUIN » et au même endroit les mss C,E et M donnent : « le bon breton » : peut-être ici l'erreur appartient-elle au ms B, mais que penser d'une variante de Froissart : qui le nomme : « messire BRETON DE CLAYEKIN » ?

LE NOM DE DU GUESCLIN 159

On peut lui voir attribuer également un surnom poétique plus original. Ainsi l'auteur des « Livres du roy Modus et de la royne Ratio » le désigne (dans le Songe de Pestilence) par une allégorie : « l'aigle d'Occident », dont il faut sans doute chercher l'origine dans le blason de DU GUESCLIN.

Une très vieille chanson populaire de Bretagne, recueillie en 1840 par Th. Hersart de la Villemarqué (Barzaz Breiz) (7) sur la filleule de Du Guesclin, nomme ce dernier « l'homme à la tête frisée comme un lion » (Ma ouife ar penn-grec'h leon / E m'onn dalc'het gand Roberson, etc...). Notons enfin que ses titres nobiliaires ne lui sont que rarement accordés (Comte de Longueville, duc de Molina, etc...).

De son nom de famille les formes varient sans cesse, non seulement d'un manuscrit à l'autre mais à l'intérieur d'un même manuscrit et de la main du même copiste. Cela se vérifie presque partout. Voici quelques exemples :

Un court poème sur « Les obsèques du connestable faites en l'abbaye de Saint-Denis » (8) déplore « la mort de noble Bertrant de GLAEQUIN » et, 14 vers plus loin « de Bertran de CLAIQUIN ».

Les poésies d'Eustache DESCHAMPS (9) — sa déploration de la mort de Du Guesclin est célèbre — présentent 13 fois DU GUESCLIN et une fois DE CLAQUIN. Les « Livres du roy Modus et de la royne Ratio » qui parlent longuement de l'aigle d'Occident, sans jamais le nommer, célèbrent toutefois son cri de guerre « Notre-Dame GLAQUIN », dans le meilleur ms ; les autres présentent comme variantes GLAIQUIN-CLAIQUIN et CLAQUIN (10).

On trouve 7 fois GLEQUIN dans « Le livre du bon Jehan de Bretagne » et GUESCLIN une fois (11). Christine de PISAN.

dans « le débat des deux amants » (env.1400) célèbre « DE GLEAQUIN » ; mais les mss de son « Livre des fais... » ne mentionnent que DE CLEQUIN ou DE CLAQUIN.

Dans les sept mss de CUVELIER que nous avons recensés à ce jour, on trouve DE GLAIEQUIN - DE CLEQUIN - CLAQUIN - DE CLAQUIN - DU GUESCLIN - DE GUESCLIN.

De tous ces mss, certains datent pourtant de la seconde moitié du XV^e s., soit presque un siècle après la mort du connétable. Ainsi le « Débat des héraulx d'armes de FRANCE et d'ANGLETERRE (12), composé vers 1456-1460, sans doute par un héraut d'armes (selon MAYER), un Normand (selon PANNIER), prête ces propos au Français : « Le vaillant chevalier CLESQUIN fut a perdre la bataille d'Orren et aussi la bataille de Nages en Espaigne et si fit tant de vaillances contre vous et aultres car on le met en France ou nombre des preux ». Il est vrai que le copiste déforme également AURAY et NAJERA. Du côté anglais, une autre graphie apparaît : CLAYKIN : « La vie du prince noir » par CHAUCER — héraut de Jean CHANDOS — cite environ quinze fois Bartram de CLAYKYN, Bartrem de KLAYKYN, Bertrem CLAYKYN ou DE CLAYEKYN. Le texte est écrit en français du Hainaut (13). Un poème en latin, qui a pour auteur un Anglais anonyme, sur la bataille de Najera (14), uitlise la même forme : « Francia fraudatur quoniam CLAYKIN superatur ».

On pourrait admettre que le genre même de ces poèmes, visant à établir une tradition plus ou moins légendaire, favorise la fantaisie graphique des copistes. Aussi examinons à présent les Chroniques (en prose) de l'époque, œuvres qui a priori prétendent moins célébrer que rapporter les actions des personnages. Les épisodes célèbres de la vie du connétable nous sont narrés surtout par FROISSART et les Grandes Chroniques ; mais nombre de chroniques moins connues signalent fréquemment ses exploits. Il est certes difficile de consulter tous les ms, ceux de Froissart notamment étant fort nombreux à PARIS, en province et à l'étranger. Mais l'étude de plusieurs d'entre eux révèle une grande diversité dans la répartition des formes, sans qu'on puisse pour autant en dégager la moindre constante.

Certains mss offrent cependant une dominante ; ainsi dans les mss de la Chronique normande, qui présentent cinq formes différentes, la plus haute fréquence est pour DU GUESCLIN. Quant aux mss de FROISSART, à l'exception de DE GLAIAQUIN dont nous parlerons plus loin, c'est surtout DE CLAYEKIN, DE CLAYKIN ou DE CLAIEQUIN qui apparaît ; il est vrai que FROISSART lui-même dit qu'il a toujours appelé ainsi messire Bertrand, si bien que la marge de fantaisie des copistes se trouvait ipso facto réduite à de simples variantes graphiques qui devaient refléter la prononciation.

La vie du Connétable fut surtout connue par « La Chronique de Du Guesclin » (ou « La vie de Du Guesclin ») : mais nous devons la mettre à part car il ne s'agit en fait que d'un résumé en prose de l'immense poème de CUVELIER. Les mss de cette chronique sont très nombreux ; ceux que nous avons relevés présentent les formes suivantes :

DU GUESCLIN	:	BN Fds fr. 853 - 4993-4995-18623-18624-23982 - BN nouv. acq. fr. 10402 Rouen 1143-1144 - Nice 93 - Chantilly 490...
DE GLAQUIN	:	BN Fds fr. 1555
DU GUIESCLIN	:	BN Fds fr. 1984
DU CLESQUIN	:	BN Fds fr. 4994
DE GUESCLIN	:	BN Fds fr. 4317

Presque tous ces mss sont du XV^e siècle.

Toutes les formes que nous avons relevées jusqu'à présent nous laissent en fait dans la perplexité. Certes la forme DU GUESCLIN concurrence fortement les autres. Mais nous devons considérer que les copies de ces manuscrits s'étalent de la fin du XIV^e à la fin du XV^e, c'est-à-dire pour la plupart bien après la mort du connétable (1380) mais souvent aussi après la mort de leur auteur, sans que nous puissions les dater avec précision ; que nous n'avons nul indice — à l'exception précieuse d'un témoignage de FROISSART — pour connaître la forme utilisée par l'auteur ; et que nous devons nous en remettre totalement à des copistes dont nous ne savons rien.

LE NOM DE DU GUESCLIN 163

Le ms BN n. Acq 10402 qui rapporte « les faits et hystoires du bon chevalier Bertran du Guesclin, en son vivant connestable de France « indique que ce livre fut « copié en 1449 par Jehan de Vineel, clerc, pour Jehan de Villereau, escuier… » : un tel cas est tout à fait exceptionnel et c'est bien regrettable.

Mais une autre constatation surprenante s'impose : à la même époque en effet l'imprimerie fait son apparition, et en définitive c'est à elle qu'il appartiendra de fixer une fois pour toutes le nom du connétable : or, à ce moment là, malgré l'usage répandu dans les poèmes et autres œuvres littéraires, c'est DU GUESCLIN qui s'imposera d'emblée. Ainsi en 1487, à ABBEVILLE, paraît imprimé chez GERARD « Le triomphe des neuf preux ou l'histoire de Bertrand DU GUESCLIN » à nouveau édité à Paris par « Le Noir » en 1507, sous le même titre. En 1529 pourtant est publiée à LYON (chez Arnoullet) une « Histoire des prouesses de Bertrand du CLESCLIN ». Cette forme est bizarre car c'est à notre connaissance, sur des centaines de documents consultés, le seul endroit où elle apparaît. La typographie y serait-elle pour quelque chose ? Les auteurs des livres imprimés par la suite relatent tous les prouesses de Bertrand DU GUESCLIN. (Notons en passant que la graphie du prénom se fixe alors sous sa forme actuelle et que DU supplante définitivement DE). Celui qui a le plus contribué à perpétuer le souvenir du connétable fut sans doute Claude MENARD qui édita en 1618 à PARIS la chronique en prose résumée du poème de CUVELIER (15). En 1666 paraît une Nouvelle histoire de DU GUESCLIN par Hay du Chastelet. Citons également en 1692 « les anciens mémoires du XIV^e s.. etc… » par Jacques LE FEVRE. prévôt d'Arras (publiés à DOUAY) (16). Un autre livre, inconnu par ailleurs, est cité par le père LELONG « le livre des faits d'armes de Bertrand DU GUESCLIN (17). Au XVIII^{e} siècle, deux autres ouvrages paraîtront : celui de d'AUVIGNY en 1749 et celui de Guyard de BERVILLE en 1767. Le nom de Bertrand ne variera plus jamais.

Il ressort apparemment de tout cela que nous ne savons vraiment pas comment ses contemporains, dans leur majorité, nommaient le connétable et que ce serait un peu par hasard que la forme DU GUESCLIN aurait supplanté les autres, grâce au secours de l'imprimerie ?

Pour en savoir davantage il nous faut cependant faire appel à deux sources de renseignements et les examiner de près. L'une est le témoignage vivant que nous rapporte FROISSART sur l'étymologie et la prononciation de ce nom (à peine déformé par les copistes de ses CHRONIQUES, nous l'avons vu), l'autre sera constituée des actes, quittances et mandements de CHARLES V, de ses fonctionnaires, de certains contemporains et bien sûr de DU GUESCLIN lui-même.

D'après le témoignage (18) que Guillaume d'Ancenis, compagnon d'armes de Du Guesclin et d'une famille alliée à la sienne, apporte à FROISSART bien après la mort du connétable, ce dernier ne voulait être appelé que BERTRAN DU GLAYAQUIN «... et je vous diray dont ce sournom anciennement luy vint, selonc ce que j'ay oy recorder les anciens ; et c'est une chose toutte veritable, car on le treuve en escript en es anchiennes croniques de Bretaingne. » D'Ancenis narre alors à FROISSART — d'autant plus intéressé qu'il ne donnait jusqu'alors à Bertrand que le nom de CLAYQUIN (ou CLAYEQUIN selon d'autres mss) — l'histoire d'un Sarrazin nommé AQUIN, « roi de Bugie et de Barbarie » qui, du temps où Charlemagne était en Espagne « s'en vint par mer en Bretaingne et arriva au port de Vennes et avoit amené sa femme et ses enfans, et s'amassa là ou pays, et ses gens s'i amasserent, en conquerrant tousjours avant... Ce roy AQUINS. sus la mer et assez prez de Vennes.

fist faire une tour moult belle que appelloit le GLAY, et se tenoit là trop voulentiers » ; mais Charlemagne, dès son retour, s'empressa de livrer bataille à ces Sarrazins qui furent tous « mort et desconfis » ; et « convint ce roy Acquin fuir et avoir sa navie toutte preste au piet de la tour du Glay. Il entra dedens, sa femme et ses enfans, mais ils furent si quoischiez des François qui chachoient les fuians que le roi Acquin ne sa femme n'eurent loisir de prendre ung petit filz qu'ilz avoient, environ d'ung an, qui dormoit en celle tour du Glay et l'oublierent, et esquipperent en mer et se sauverent. Cel enffant fut trouvé en la tour et fut apporté au roy Charlemainne, qui en ot grant joye et volt qu'il fut baptisiez ; et il le fu et le tindrent sur les fons Rolant et Olivier et ot nom cel enfant Olivier, et luy donna l'empereur bons manbours pour le garder et touttes les terres que son pere avoit conquis en Bretaingne, et fust cest enffant, quant il vint en eaige d'omme, bon chevalier et vaillant homme et l'appelaient les gens Olivier DU GLAY-AQUIN, pour tant qu'il avoit esté filz du roy Acquin. Or vous ay-je dit la premiere fondacion et venue de Messire Bertran DU GLAYQUIN que nous deussion dire DU GLAY-AQUIN... »

On ne saurait évidemment accorder le moindre crédit à cette belle histoire, qui reprend d'ailleurs la légende de ce roi, telle qu'un poème du XII^{e} siècle nous la fait connaître (19). Certains érudits l'ont pourtant prise au sérieux. Ainsi l'édition de 1853 du Dictionnaire de BRETAGNE (d'Ogée) donne la forme GUEAQUIN comme « la plus raisonnable car on trouve dans les vieux titres de la paroisse de Broons une famille AQUIN antérieure au fameux connétable » ; la conclusion est pour le moins hâtive ! L'auteur de l'article « Famille Du GUESCLIN » du Dictionnaire de Biographie française (1967) note, en résumant cette légende : « il est un fait certain, c'est que les premiers actes écrits du connétable portent DU GLAIQUIN » ; ce

Le fait que Froissart nous rapporte cette anecdote, promettant de ne jamais l'oublier, prouve qu'il la trouvait pour le moins curieuse. L'unique copie existante de cette chanson du roi Aquin s'arrête durant la bataille et reste peut-être inachevée, si bien qu'on ne peut savoir si l'épisode du bébé oublié faisait partie de la légende originelle ou s'il n'est qu'une invention postérieure en rapport avec la famille Du Guesclin.

n'est en fait, nous le verrons, rien moins que certain. L'éditeur du Jouvencel, fait venir GUESCLIN de GLAYAQUIN « en passant par CLAIQUIN et CLESQUIN » (20) ce qui est une affirmation gratuite… M. ERNOUF examine un peu plus attentivement diverses formes du nom (Revue contemporaine, 15 décembre 1866 - pp. 407-408) et croit reconnaître dans le petit nombre qu'il en a relevé « la même tendance à faire intervenir en tout ou partie la désinence AQUIN » ; ses autres considérations sur le véritable nom de la famille sont très superficielles.

Mais l'important après tout est de noter que pour Bertrand comme pour son frère Olivier (Guillaume en parle aussi), donc pour sa famille on tenait pour bien assurée cette lointaine et royale origine qui s'appuyait sans doute sur une tradition ancienne pouvant remonter au XII^{e} s. Bertrand en aurait été tellement persuadé que, après la guerre de Castille, une fois Henri de Trastamare rétabli sur le trône, « …il s'en vouloit aler ou royaulme de Bougie… et disoit qu'il vouloit requerre son heritaige et l'eust sans faulte fait… mais ung empeschement luy vint qui le rompi et brisa tout. » (l'attaque du Prince de Galles).

Tout cela est bien séduisant. Mais s'il est bien normal — comme le note Simeon LUCE (21) — que dans cette Bretagne, baignée de légendes chevaleresques, une famille d'aussi vieille souche que celle des Du Guesclin ait aussi voulu avoir son passé héroïque, les plus anciens documents concernant ses ancêtres, aussi bien que les actes officiels, chartes et quittances du temps de Charles V, témoignent dans un sens bien différent. Les généalogistes (22) sont depuis longtemps en profond désaccord sur les origines de cette famille que les uns font remonter à un RICHER ou RICHEUX vivant au XI^{e} s., d'autres à un SALOMON, fils naturel de HAMON, vicomte de DINAN et de DOL au début du XI^{e} s. On cite aussi des ancêtres parmi les compagnons de Godefroy de BOUILLON. Mais il n'y a de tout cela aucune preuve solide, chacun comblant ses lacunes par d'hypothétiques filiations.

De toutes façons, en ce qui concerne notre propos, nous pouvons partir avec certitude d'un château sur lequel tous s'accordent : le manoir seigneurial de GUARPLIC construit sans doute par la maison de DINAN. Tous les seigneurs de ce château en prirent le nom, au moins à partir de GEOFFROY, le premier chef incontesté de la famille, vers 1150 jusqu'au fondateur du Château du PLESSIS-BERTRAND (ou PLAISIR-BERTRAND) PIERRE, vers 1220 (23). C'est au cours du XIII^e s. que GUARPLIC fut détruit. Le PLESSIS-BERTRAND passera au XIV^e s. à la branche aînée de la famille Du Guesclin (24).

En fait ce nom de GUARPLIC apparait dans les titres sous diverses formes. Ainsi GEOFFROY est nommé aussi bien WAGLIP que GAYCLIP (25). La donation faite à l'abbaye de LA VIEUVILLE par « FLORIDE DE MOUSTIERJAN » (mère de Geoffroy) cite GAUFRIDUS GAILGLIP (26). La femme et les enfants de Geoffroy, ses héritiers, n'ayant pas voulu reconnaître cette donation, furent excommuniés et la sentance fulminée contre eux en 1180 dit : GAUFRIDUS GAIPLIP (27).

Pierre 1^{er} du nom, qui eut de longs démêlés avec PHILIPPE-AUGUSTE, est nommé en 1226, dans une enquête faite sur le nombre de chevaliers dus par l'évêque de DOL à l'armée du Duc de BRETAGNE : PETRUS DE GARCLIP (28). En 1247 son fils est nommé Bertrand DOU GUERCLIP (29).

Or c'est vers cette époque que nous voyons apparaître, en même temps que celui de GARCLIP, le nom qui déformé de diverses manières, deviendra illustre sous la forme DU GUES-

(23) Sur ce point, le dictionnaire de la Noblesse affirmait que ce château aurait été construit par Bertrand, fils de Pierre, en 1237, mais Rioult de Neuville s'appuie sur un acte de Philippe-Auguste, publié par Léopold Delisle (App.n°2017-dec.1220-pp.521-522).

(24) Bertrand, le futur connétable, naîtra vers 1320 au château de La Motte Broons, à Broons, près de DINAN.

CLIN. Un appel à la Cour de France, daté de 1313, mentionne encore ROBERTUS DE GUERCLYPEIO (30) (le père du connétable) ; mais son épouse dictera son Testament en ces termes : « ego, Johanna Malemains, uxor domini mei domini ROBERTI DE GLAQUINO... » et plus loin : « ...DOU GLAQUIN ». Ce document est précieux, car on peut admettre, vu sa nature, qu'il reflète l'usage le plus courant dans la demeure paternelle à cette époque (1350).

Un des oncles de Bertrand, Olivier, est nommé dans un extrait des paiements faits par « Pierre Molin le jeune, receveur des impôts de Monseigneur de Bretagne en la vicomté de Limoges » et dont la langue trahit l'origine limousine : OLIVIER DE CLOAQUIN et OLIVIER DE GASCLIN. Le sire DU GUERCLIN est désigné en 1352 par la duchesse de Bretagne (Jeanne de Penthièvre) comme faisant partie de l'ambassade envoyée en Angleterre pour la délivrance de Charles de Blois (31).

Quant à BERTRANT DE GLOAQUN (ou GLOAQUII ?) (32) cité dans une lettre de sauf-conduit délivrée le 10 nov. 54 par Edouard III, il peut représenter soit un autre oncle, soit le futur connétable lui-même.

Les formes en -clip/-plic et celles en -clin/-quin devaient être utilisées concurremment, au moins hors des actes, depuis longtemps. Leur parenté est manifeste, mais il se pourrait après tout, si on admet avec M. de NEUVILLE qu'il y eut après Pierre une interruption dans la filiation directe (mais cela reste discutable), que cette nouvelle altération du nom fût en rapport avec l'arrivée d'une branche collatérale. C'est difficile à démontrer ; notons cependant vers la même époque (33) « un changement complet dans les armoiries de la maison Du Guesclin, qui abandonna son ancien écu dérivé du blason des vicomtes de DINAN, pour prendre l'aigle à deux têtes de sable sur champ d'argent » qui deviendra si célèbre sous Charles V.

Des étymologistes ont expliqué ces formes ; malheureusement ils ne s'accordent pas. Ainsi, pour M. PENHOUET (34) GUARPLIC (ou GUASPLIC) signifie « pli de la mer » d'où « rive sinueuse » et « lieu placé dans un enfoncement de la mer ». Outre qu'il n'explique pas les diverses altérations, cette étymologie ne correspond pas à la situation des lieux. M. Rioult de NEUVILLE pense que ce nom est formé des mots GWAG (vallum et LIC'H (rupes). Le second étant d'origine celtique et le premier, disparu de l'usage en bas breton, d'origine armoricaine. La forteresse était en effet située sur un rocher abrupt qui s'avançait dans la mer. Pour M. AYMAR DE BLOIS (35) GUARPLIC et GUESCLIN ont la même signification dans l'ancien breton : « le premier est formé du mot GOAR, GOUER — qu'on dit aussi GOAS ou GOAZ (36) selon les dialectes — et qui signifie RUISSEAU, et de PLIC ou PLEC qui signifie PLI. Le second est composé du mot GOAS ou GOAZ (ruisseau) et de CLIN qui signifie GENOU, acception identique à celle de PLI. Pour que ce pli signifie anse, il faut qu'il soit allié à VOR ou à MOR, il signifie alors littéralement PLI DE LA MER. »

GUESCLIN (ou GUERCLIN) pourrait donc désigner soit le rocher abrupt sur lequel était construit le château, soit la sinuosité de la rivière qui le longe.

Bien différentes mais précieuses sont les explications données vers le début du XIII^e^ siècle par GUILLAUME LE BRETON (qui connaissait le breton) sur le nom de GUARPLIC (37). Aucun des étymologistes cités ne semble les avoir connues.

quod sonat ex britannico in latinum « mollis plica » sive « super plicam » eo quod sit super sinum maris, vel quia ibi molliter plicatur reflexus maris ».

M. Léon FLEURIOT, professeur de celtique à l'Université de Rennes, nous a assuré que ces deux explications « pli mou » ou « sur le pli » étaient valables : -PLIC, d'origine latine, signifiant bien pli (breton moderne PLEG, gallois PLYG) ; -GUAR pouvant signifier en vieux breton soit « doux, mou » (gallois GWAR ; breton moderne GOAR, en vannetais « loisir, lenteur », mais le mot a disparu comme adjectif en breton moderne), soit « sur » (breton moderne : WAR, VAR, etc...).

Rien ne prouve cependant que GUARPLIC, forme bretonne ancienne, soit authentique, à côté de GAILGLIP, WAGLIP, GAYCLIP... cités précédemment ; dans ce cas GUARBLIC serait dû à une étymologie populaire. La métathèse est frappante mais quelle est la première en date de ces formes ?

Par ailleurs, M. FLEURIOT n'exclut pas la possibilité d'une évolution phonétique de GUARPLIC à GUESCLIN, au lieu de l'homonymie soutenue par M. Aymar de Blois, mais elle présente des difficultés. Si l'on admet que GUARPLIC est la forme première du nom, cela donnerait l'évolution suivante : /gwarplik/ > /gwarclip/ avec métathèse, puis prononciation romane avec /gw/ > /g/ dur et /p/ final non prononcé : > /garcli/. Ce qui nous rapproche de la forme GUERCLIN (variante fréquente de GUESCLIN) ; mais est-ce que le -ar- ou -er- n'a pas fini par être prononcé a ou e en roman, si bien que phonétiquement GUERCLIP était peut-être /gecli/ et GUARCLIP /gacli/ ? Ce qui nous rapprocherait alors de CACLIN, et, avec métathèse probable, de CLAQUIN, CLAEQUIN..., formes que nous rencontrons dans divers actes de la Cour de France.

Mais il reste à expliquer la nasalisation finale ; elle daterait peut-être du rapprochement avec la légende du roi AQUIN... Quant au GU- initial, on peut admettre qu'après l'évolution GW > G qui est romane et non bretonne, on a continué à l'écrire — ce qui, nous le verrons à l'examen du pème de CUVELIER, a entraîné une prononciation du nom tantôt dissyllabique, tantôt trissyllabique.

De toute façon, il semble bien qu'il faille être très prudent dans les interprétations de noms bretons.

LE NOM DE DU GUESCLIN 171

Quoi qu'il en soit, au début du XIV^e^ s. la forme ancienne disparaît des manuscrits (le château de Guarplic il est vrai cesse d'être mentionné au cours du XIII^e^ s., sans doute fut-il démoli, et le nom de la famille s'en détacha peu à peu dans l'esprit des contemporains) (38). En ce qui concerne Bertrand, le futur connétable, nous ne l'avons trouvée nulle part.

Les mss concernant le plus célèbre des Du Guesclin (actes, titres, quittances, lettres...) ne manquent pas et nous avons pu en consulter un grand nombre à différents endroits. Les formes qu'y revêt son nom sont très variées et il semble difficile, à première vue, d'y constater autre chose que des déformations d'ordre purement dialectal, ou dues parfois à la fantaisie des copistes du bas Moyen Age, toutes constatations déjà faites plus haut avec les mss d'œuvres littéraires.

Pourtant, si nous classons tous ces documents dans un ordre chronologique, un certain usage apparaît peu à peu.

Une étude statistique portant sur un échantillonnage s'imposait ici ; en fait c'est sur la majorité des documents se rapportant au connétable que nous nous appuyons (39). Il ne semble donc pas que les documents historiques se trouvant dans des bibliothèques étrangères (Angleterre et Espagne) ou dans quelques bibliothèques de Province et dont nous n'avons pas ici le témoignage, puissent contredire lourdement les résultats de notre examen.

Les formes relevées sont les suivantes (40) :

DU GLAIQUIN : JJ 87/ JJ90 (f°s66v° et 67)
DU GLAICQUIN : P.J. 60
DU GLAQUEN : Pr-I-1628

(38) Il existe encore sur la paroisse de Saint-Coulomb, à 10 km de Saint-Malo, sur une île, au fond d'une baie, une ancienne forteresse isolée de terre à marée haute, le château dit de DU GUESCLIN, mais dont l'origine n'aurait rien à voir avec Bertrand

(39) Malheureusement de très nombreux documents consultés ne le mentionnent que sous son titre de connétable, ou sous ses titres nobiliaires, ce qui est tout à fait normal — il en va différemment, nous l'avons vu, dans les textes littéraires. De même on le trouve (mais plus rarement) désigné par son premier nom : messire Bertrand ou Bertram... (ex.lettre de Jehan Chandos au roi : J.381-6.13, etc...).

Si certaines formes sont fort éloignées les unes des autres, beaucoup n'offrent entre elles que de banales différences d'ordre graphique et doivent refléter la même prononciation. Les graphies Y pour I, bien sûr et K pour QU (CLAYEKIN/CLAIEQUIN) mais aussi la graphie A pour E : GUESCLIN/GUASCLIN-GUERCLIN/GUARCLIN/CLEQUIN/CLAQUIN - GLEQUIN/GLAQUIN - CLERQUIN-CLARQUIN... qui est caractéristique des copistes picards. Le ms C de CUVELIER qui présente presque toujours la forme CLAQUIN, contient par ailleurs de nombreux picardismes : assaier-afforcie-achappoit-quarrain(charrin)-rouchin (roussin)-perchevant-querchié-chervelle...). Cependant GUARCLIN est une forme employée une fois seulement par le clerc TABARY qui, à en juger par la graphie des actes qu'il rédige au nom du roi, n'a rien de picard. Il est vrai que les copistes picards avaient aussi la tendance inverse d'écrire ai(e) pour a : si bien que de toutes ces formes on ne peut pas savoir exactement où se trouve la variante dialectale...

Il en va de même pour R/S : GUERCLIN est peut-être une graphie d'origine picarde pour GUESCLIN (de même GUARCLIN/GUASCLIN) ; cf varlet/vaslet. En fait il n'est pas impossible que ces variantes soient bretonnes ; nous avons vu que l'étymologie de ce nom pouvait reposer sur le mot qui signifie ruisseau, c'est-à-dire, selon les dialectes, GOAR ou GOAS (41).

Mais GOAR — nous dit M. Aymar de Blois — est dans d'autres lieux GOUER ; si bien qu'on peut admettre que ce ne sont pas les copistes français qui ont les premiers introduit dans ce nom les variantes GUAR-/GUAS-/GUER-/GUES-. L'emploi de GUARCLIN par TABARY sans rien prouver, peut témoigner dans ce sens.

Un autre trait dialectal également fréquent est la métathèse du type GUESCLIN/GLESQUIN, etc... (cf BERTRAN/BRETRAN).

Tous ces traits combinés aboutissent à un très grand nombre de formes, dont certaines devaient en fait représenter des

---

(41) Ces graphies seraient d'ailleurs à rapprocher de ERWAN/ESWAN, le nom breton d'Yves, ou du nom de lieu TREOVERGAT/TREOUESCAT.

LE NOM DE DU GUESCLIN 175

prononciations vraiment différentes. Nous en voulons pour preuve d'abord le passage cité de FROISSART qui note que lorsqu'il prononça CLAYQUIN (CLAYEQUIN, autres mss) « D'ANCENIS se mit à rire. » Voilà qui ne laisse pas de nous surprendre ! on a l'impression que D'ANCENIS n'est vraiment pas habitué à ces variations...

Une différence essentielle devait résider de toute façon entre la prononciation en deux syllabes : CLAYQUIN-CLAQUIN-GUESCLIN-GLAIQUIN, etc... et celle en trois syllabes : GLAIEQUIN-GUEAQUIN- - CLAYEKIN- ou même GÜESCLIN. Nous ne pouvons le vérifier qu'en comparant les mss de la Chronique en vers de CUVELIER.

De nombreux vers qui, dans un mss ont la forme en trois syllabes, présentent dans d'autres mss le nom en deux syllabes. Dans ce dernier cas, le vers est presque toujours faux.

Ainsi ms A : Bertran n'y comptoit rien, CLAQUIN escrioit ms B et C : Bertran n'y comptoit rien, GLAIEQUIN escrioit.

Le copiste du ms A a donc corrigé le nom selon sa manière de prononcer, mais il y a fort à parier que le texte original contenait le nom en trois syllabes — d'autant plus que ce phénomème se répète souvent. Il est cependant surprenant que des copistes puissent ainsi créer volontairement une faute de métrique sans chercher à corriger le vers d'une façon ou d'une autre, selon leur habitude — et on peut difficilement admettre que la graphie CLAQUIN suppose une prononciation en trois syllabes...

Parfois pourtant il y a des corrections : ainsi « Bertrand de CLAQUIN » dans un ms, et « Bertrand GLAIEQUIN » dans un autre ; mais cela reste rare.

Les mss qui représentent régulièrement GUESCLIN ne sont parfois justes qu'au prix de la lecture « GÜESCLIN », ainsi au passage cité précédemment, les mss D et E ont « ains crioit GÜESCLIN a sa voix hautement ». Dans de nombreux cas cependant il y a doute, car on peut admettre à la rigueur une diérèse possible dans un autre mot du même vers (eust/eüst...) (42).

(42) Th. Hersart DE LA VILLEMARQUÉ affirme que l'orthographe bretonne du nom est GWEZKLEN (BARZAZ-BREIZ-4^{e}éd.1846.t.I.p.30). Or

176 JEAN-CLAUDE FAUCON

Nous avons noté que la forme CLAYKIN apparaissait dans des mss littéraires d'origine anglaise (43) ; nous la trouvons également dans une lettre du Prince de Galles à la princesse, deux jours après la bataille de NAJERA (lettre du 5 avril 1367). DE CLEYKIN apparaît aussi dans un sauf-conduit pour les otages d'Olivier Du Guesclin (Pr. II-290). Mais FELTON et le Prince de Galles utilisent aussi DE CLEAQUIN, et d'autres sauf-conduits ont GLESQUIN.

Du côté Espagne-Navarre, on trouverait plutôt CLAQUIN-GLAQUEN-GLAQUIN (lettres patentes de Henri de Trastmare), mais une lettre du roi de Navarre en 68 a DU GUESCLYN, et Pierre IV le Cérémonieux roi d'Aragon fit don du comté de BORJA à Bertran DE GLERQUIN (9-1-66 n. st.67).

Nous relevons un fait remarquable de traduction et à une époque tardive : « Le triomphe des neuf preux ou Histoire de Bertrand du Guesclin », paru à Abbeville en 1487, fut traduit en espagnol (44) sous le titre suivant : « Triompho de los nueve de la fama y vida del BERTRAN DE CLAQUIN, condestable de FRANCIA — traducido del Frances por Antonio Rodriguez ». Preuve que la forme CLAQUIN était plus en usage en Espagne et le resta longtemps.

En Avignon et en Provence c'est plutôt CLEQUIN et CLIQUIN qui paraissent employés. Une bulle papale du 18 janvier 69 (n.st.70) oblige les habitants d'Avignon à payer leur quote-part de l'argent versé à DE CLAQUIN et aux compagnies ; mais la quittance en avait été donnée à Bertrando de CLEQUINO. Le sénéchal de Provence, dans une lettre aux Marseillais (12 juin 1368) parle de Bertrandus de CLIQUINO, et le syndic trésorier de Carpentras inscrit DE CLEQUINIS.

En Italie, comme en Espagne, le nom du connétable restera

le G breton est toujours dur (Guy français s'écrit Gi en breton). GESKLIN aurait suffi pour retrouver le GUESKLIN français ; normalement GW se prononce GOU (cf. GWECHALL : Gouechall) et cette graphie pourrait donc attester une prononciation trisillabyque ; en fait c'est bien discutable, en outre elle est sûrement récente et de fabrication sans doute assez arbitraire.

(43) La notion « d'anglais » est très relative d'ailleurs, d'autant plus que les copistes d'Aquitaine devaient être gascons ou... bretons ! On peut supposer cependant que les Anglais déformaient le nom d'une certaine manière à peu près constante, et que cela a pu se traduire plus ou moins dans leurs lettres.

REPARTITION DES FORMES

déformé longtemps : un humoriste italien du XV^e siècle, Antoine ASTESAN, parle de BERTRAND CLASCHIN.

Des tableaux comparatifs et chronologiques mettront mieux en évidence l'évolution de l'usage. Les témoignages des actes rédigés en latin y figurent aussi, mais intégrés à la forme française correspondante ; en effet la latinisation du nom, si elle a lieu, ne l'altère en rien (45). L'emploi de la désinence de l'ablatif n'est même pas régulier et un même ms citera par exemple Bertrandus DE GLERQUIN et DE GLERQUINO (46). Relevons cependant DE CLEQUINIS utilisé quatre fois par le syndic trésorier de Carpentras en 1368-1369 et 1370.

La préposition d'origine DE (Guesclin) disparaissant très vite devant DU (Guesclin) (même dans les mss latins : Bertrandus DU GUESCLIN (47) nous ne relevons dans les graphiques que les variantes du nom lui-même à l'exception de la graphie Y pour I. Pour éviter de trop fausser l'intérêt des graphiques, la forme du nom n'est comptée qu'une seule fois par document, sauf en cas de polymorphisme.

Une constatation s'impose : bien que des documents de diverses origines témoignent de cette variété de formes à laquelle les mss littéraires nous avaient habitués, avec la même apparente fantaisie, l'évolution d'ensemble par contre est ici nette et rapide.

De 1376 à 1382 on ne trouve plus que deux formes autres que DU GUESCLIN ; elles sont cependant à considérer, car l'une — DU GLASQUIN — figure dans une lettre du prévôt de PARIS (Hugues AUBRIOT, le 16-2-77 ; mais trois mois plus tard une autre lettre de lui atteste DU GUESCLIN) ; l'autre — DE GLESQUIN — (16 juin 78) est rédigée au nom du roi et signée « par le roi -TABARI- » (mais une autre lettre de ce même TABARI, en 1380, cite DU GUESCLIN.

(45) A l'exception peut-être d'un ms à la lecture douteuse : JJ 92 (295).

(46) Dans son testament Jeanna Malemains nomme son époux DE GLAQUINO puis DOU GLAQUIN.

(47) Pr II,286 ; J.381.11 etc...

De tous ces documents. isolons d'abord ceux émanant du roi de FRANCE : successivement :

JEAN le Bon jusqu'en septembre 1356 le DAUPHIN CHARLES jusqu'au 19 avril 1364
CHARLES V jusqu'en 1380.

Parmi ces derniers documents, relevons par exemple l'année 1364 :

Le 4 avril, une lettre du Dauphin Charles « lieutenant du roy » mentionne DU GUERCLIN. Mais le 23 avril on trouve deux lettres de Charles, devenu roi entre temps ; dans l'une il parle de « nostre amé et féal chevalier et chambellen BERTRAN DE CLAESQUIN » ; dans l'autre, de « nostre amé et féal chevalier et chambellen BERTREM DE GUESKIN ». Le lendemain 24 avril, il fait un acte de donation à son « amé et feal chevalier et chambellen BERTRAN DE GUESCLIN », et un second à BERTRAN DU GUESCLIN ; deux jours plus tard, il donne 1.400 frs or à BERTRAN DU CLAQUIN ; en septembre, c'est DU GUERCLIN ; en octobre : DU GLASQUIN et DU GUARCLIN ; en décembre il confirme une lettre de DU GUESCLIN.

Nous possédons une lettre de Charles V, à la signature certainement autographe : elle est adressée à Pierre Scatisse, trésorier (7 déc.1367- J 381). Or cette lettre, qui présente d'ailleurs des traits dialectaux, cite BERTRAN DE CACLIN. Cette forme est unique et il nous faudrait pourtant admettre que Charles V l'a lue puisqu'il a signé la lettre... mais savait-il lire ?

En définitive, le tableau ci-dessus montre clairement que dans l'entourage du Roi, à partir de 1371 le nouveau connétable (il reçut l'épée en 70) est appelée DU GUESCLIN. La seule exception en est la lettre adressée aux baillis de Rouen et de Caen (le 16-VI-78) et signée TABARI.

Nous allons examiner à présent les documents émanant de DU GUESCLIN lui-même et c'est naturellement à eux que nous accorderons le plus d'importance.

Bien que quatre ou cinq signatures seulement puissent être autographes, ces billets furent rédigés dans l'entourage immédiat de Bertrand, souvent sous sa dictée, et gardent leur valeur. L'usage en effet de la signature autographe est encore peu fréquent en ce temps-là ; un sceau appendant faisant foi ; il arrive aussi que le clerc trace au bas de la lettre le nom de son auteur. Ne signent régulièrement leurs propres lettres que des personnages subalternes (trésoriers ou secrétaires). Ce n'est qu'au siècle suivant que la signature se substituera au sceau. DU GUESCLIN ne savait certainement pas écrire autre chose que son nom (48). Cela n'a d'ailleurs rien d'étonnant à cette époque où écrire était le travail des clercs ; Jeanne d'Arc déclara à CHINON qu'elle ne savait former « ni a ni b » et son enfance avait pourtant été plus paisible que celle de Du Guesclin, qui n'aimait que bagarres et jeux violents. Cuvelier en témoigne l'ailleurs :

> « le sauf-conduit a pris, si le fait recorder
> Car lire ne savoit, n'ecriture former » (mss A et B) et même si on en croit les mss C, D et E :

> « ...lire ne savoit, n'escripre ne compter » !

Qui en effet aurait pu lui apprendre tout cela ?

> « Ains maistre ne trouva, ce sachiez sans doubter, > de qui li bers Bertran se laissat doctriner ;
> ainçois voloit son maistre et ferir et fraper » !

Ainsi ne devons-nous pas nous laisser abuser par un ms comme Fr.10238-f°126 : une lettre de Du Guesclin au Duc d'Anjou, non signée d'ailleurs, se termine par ces mots : « Escript de ma main a Pontorson le 26ᵉ jour de Septembre ». C'était sans doute une formule en usage par laquelle Du Guesclin confirmait qu'il avait personnellement dicté cette lettre, destinée à une personne qui d'ailleurs lui était chère.

Nous trouvons dans ses lettres, au début, les formes les plus diverses :

— vers 1361, un billet de lui, réclamant à un ami le paiement de 50 réaux, est signé BERTRAND DU GUESCLIN (P.J.25)

— le 24 décembre 1361, on trouve une quittance de « Nous, Bertrand de CLAQUIN, chevalier... » à un Conseiller du roi. (Pr I.1543)

— le 11 janvier 1362 (n.st.) : « sachant tous que nous, Bertrand DE GLESQUN (quittance de 2.000 réaux) P.J.28

(48) Une lettre à son nom, signée DU GUESCLIN par le copiste, comporte au bas, tracées d'une autre main, les lettres BB qui pourraient bien être une griffe autographe de Bertrand (cf B.E.C.-1884 - t.XLV- p.302).

— le 21 janvier, autre quittance de DU GLESCLIN (P.J. 29)

— le 5 février : DE GLAISQUIN

— En 1363, au mois de mai, il écrit à Pontorson : « Nous, Bertran DU GUESCLIN... », mais en juillet c'est « Nous, Bertran DE CLAQUIN » et en septembre « Nous, Bertran du GLEISCHIN... » ; une quittance du même jour (16 sept.) porte « Nous, Bertran DU GLOISQUIN... » (P.J. et K48). Le 9 décembre, il répond à Guillaume FELTON : DU GUERCLIN. (X2a7).

Tous ces termes sont certes, nous l'avons vu, assez voisins. Il n'en reste pas moins que pour Bertrand comme pour son entourage la forme exacte de son nom n'avait guère d'importance, beaucoup moins certainement que Guillaume d'ANCENIS le laissait entendre ; en outre il est clair que le sens exact de ce nom, que des étymologistes bretons se sont attachés à découvrir, n'apparaissait à personne, pas même à Bertrand.

Reprenons en effet le témoignage de Guillaume d'ANCENIS : « (CLAYKIN) n'est pas le droit sournom d'eulx, ne ne fu oncques, comment que tous ceulx qui en parollent les nomment ainsi, et nous autant bien comme vous, nous qui sommes de Bretaingne ; et messire Bertran, lui vivant, y eust voulentiers adreschiez et remediat s'il eust peut ; mais oncques il ne povoit, car le mot est tel qu'il chiet en la bouche et en la parolle de ceulx qui le nomment, mieulx que l'autre. » (SHF.p.8).

Ce curieux passage nous prouve que ce qu'on pourrait prendre avec joie pour le témoignage assuré d'un contemporain, ne reflète en fait que son idée personnelle, erronée en deux endroits :

— quand il affirme que tout le monde le nomme CLAYQUIN, même en Bretagne, ce qui, nous le voyons clairement, n'apparaît dans les textes, ni du vivant ni après la mort du connétable, — et quand il nous assure que Bertrand voulait absolument imposer un nom qu'il croyait conforme à sa généalogie légendaire, ou qui le flattait ; il aurait donc dû, au moins lors de sa célébrité naissante, veiller à ce que ses propres lettres comportent DU GLAIAQUIN ou une forme approchante ; or il ne le fait jamais dans les mss consultés ; seule peut-être la forme CLAQUIN qu'il utilise deux fois (24 déc. 61, dans une quittance à Nicolas Odde, conseiller du roi, et le 10 juillet 63) pourrait évoquer de loin la prétendue étymologie.

Et à partir du 25 avril 64 (« Nous, Bretan DU GUERCLIN... quittance de 140 Frs or à René Coutelier ») jusqu'au 10 avril 80 (son Testament), nous ne trouvons plus que les deux formes voisines :

DU GUESCLIN : 15 fois et DU GUERCLIN : 10 fois.

Certaines de ces lettres sont primordiales ; ainsi celle du 24 octobre 70 par laquelle il proclame son alliance avec Olivier DE CLISSON, son ancien ennemi ; mars 76, où il s'engage à accomplir les conditions pour lesquelles Charles V lui avait fait don de PONTORSON ; 25 juin 1378, où il donne l'ordre de faire construire des machines de guerre pour le siège de CHERBOURG.

Mais le document le plus intéressant est sans nul doute son Testament, dicté devant témoins au siège de Châteauneuf de Randon, le 9 juillet 1380 : « Nous, Bertrand DU GUESCLIN... léguons à BERTRAND DU GUESCLIN... fils de nostre cousin messire OLIVIER DU GUESCLIN... (200 livres de rente) ». Le lendemain 10 juillet, dans un codicille, il assigne cette rente à « BERTRAND DU GUESCLIN » sur le domaine de la Chèverie. Trois jours plus tard, il expirait (49).

On pourrait certes objecter à ces statistiques la nature même du corpus : les documents archivés qui nous sont parvenus ne sont pas tout à fait le fruit du hasard, puisque nous avons des séries de même provenance ou concernant une même affaire (les rançons, par ex.) et des lacunes énormes sur d'autres aspects historiques. Cela serait gênant si chaque scribe utilisait toujours la même forme ; or, soit d'une lettre à une autre — parfois du matin au soir — soit dans la même lettre un scribe change fréquemment de graphie et altère singulièrement le nom. Si nous regrettions de ne rien savoir sur les dates et les copistes des mss littéraires, il n'en va pas de même avec les documents historiques. Ils sont presque tous datés (au « style » de l'époque) et un certain nombre portent le nom du scribe qui signe pour l'auteur. Nous ne pouvons considérer comme véritablement autographe, même s'il a des chances de l'être (50), le nom de l'auteur d'une lettre répété au bas de celle-ci, ex : Charles-Du Guesclin. Il peut y avoir doute avec Hugues Aubriot, prévôt de Paris, René le Coutelier, trésorier des guerres ou même Pierre le Cochetier, sergent d'armes du roi. Il n'en va pas de même par contre lorsque la lettre du roi ou du connétable est signée d'un autre nom, précédé des mots : « par Mons. le connétable » ou « par le roy » ; nous avons là, très probablement, l'auteur de la copie.

(49) Tout cela montre clairement que le remanieur du Dictionnaire d'Ogée, en 1853, se trompait lourdement en affirmant (p.127) que la forme DU GUESCLIN, dans laquelle il voit « une altération de DE GLAQUIN » est « postérieure à la mort du connétable »...

Nous constatons, dans ce cas, que :

— Au nom du roi de FRANCE,

TABARI(TABARY) écrit :	DU GLAISQUIN	le 11-7-61
	DU GUESCLIN	5-10-70
	DU GLESQUIN	16-6-78
	DU GUESCLIN	11-9-80

N. DE VEIRES, le même jour (23 avril 64) et sans doute successivement, dans deux lettres absolument identiques (dons de biens confisqués) écrit dans l'une DE GUESKIN, dans l'autre DE CLAESQUIN. Le 11 octobre de la même année : DU GLASKIN et le 1er juillet 66 : DU GUERCLIN.

Jean Jean J. écrit :	DE GLAESQUIN et
	DE CLEAQUIN (le 6-1-66)
BLANCHOT	DE CLERQUIN (23 juin 59)
	DU GUERCLIN (16-12-66)
P. MICHIEL	DU GUESCLIN (16-12-57)
	DU GUARCLIN (30-10-64)

J. ESSARS (juin 59), OGIER	(12-3-68 n.st) et G. GONTIER
(25-2-67 n.st) n'utilisent que	DU GUERCLIN

(50) Au demeurant, même si dans certains cas cette signature peut être autographe (ainsi J 381- lettre de Charles V à Pierre Scatisse) il reste totalement exclu que la lettre soit de la même main puisque c'est justement de la différence d'écriture qu'on déduit l'autographie !

LANGUENAN n'écrit que DU GUERCLIN (8 sept. et 12 déc. 72) ainsi que
REGNAULT (1371). Pour
LEPAGGE, par contre (15-2-72 n.st) et pour GEHE (25 juin 78) c'est DU GUESCLIN et LOMER (?) (juin 78).

Un regroupement de certaines lettres donne lieu à d'autres observations : elles font en effet partie d'une correspondance suivie au sujet d'une même affaire.

Fait prisonnier à AURAY le 29 septembre 1364, DU GUESCLIN ne sera libéré qu'un an après, jour pour jour. Le 15 août 65, Charles V promet par lettre à J. CHANDOS 40.000 florins d'or (« ou autre or monnoye a la value ») comme partie de la rançon de « BERTRAND DU GUERCLIN ». Or, de 22 août, adressant en réponse deux lettres au roi, Bertrand « signait » également DU GUERCLIN. Ce n'est qu'une simple coïncidence mais que nous retrouvons de façon plus nette l'année d'après. Du fait que le roi acquittait la rançon par paiements échelonnés, tout un échange de lettres et de quittances a eu lieu entre Charles V et ses trésoriers d'une part, et Jehan CHANDOS et ses trésoriers d'autre part. Nous avons déjà noté que, bizarrement, une lettre royale du 6-1-66 nommait le futur connétable DE CLEAQUIN. Or cette lettre, adressée aux procureurs, fait suite à une lettre de Chandos qui, dans toutes ses lettres (trois à cette époque), ainsi que ses trésoriers, nomme Bertrand : DE CLEAQUIN.

Six mois plus tard par contre, Charles donne ordre de payer une autre part de la rançon de DU GUERCLIN. Le même jour, en réponse à cet ordre, Pierre de Soissons, clerc du trésorier Raoul de LILLE écrit « DU GUERCLIN », alors que six mois auparavant Raoul de Lille écrivait DE GLUESQUIN. Mais dans la suite de l'affaire, on dira surtout DU GUERCLIN du côté français, et DE CLEAQUIN ou DE GLAESQUIN du côté anglais.

1367 : Bertrand est à nouveau prisonnier du Prince de Galles, à la suite de la bataille près de Navarette. Il s'engage envers le roi pour les 30.000 doubles que celui-ci a accepté de payer : « Nous, Bertrand DU GUESCLIN... » (le 27 déc.). Deux mois plus tard, le roi rappelle sa promesse de payer la rançon de DU GUESCLIN. Par ailleurs, le 25 avril, le receveur-général des impositions du roi de France se présente à Alexandre de DALBY, connétable d'Aquitaine, et à Richard de DRAYTONN, pour payer partie de la rançon. Ceux-ci n'ayant pas pouvoir d'accepter l'argent envoient un messager au prince d'Aquitaine, sollicitant un « mandement spécial » leur permettant de recevoir ces 15.000 doubles sur la rançon de « Bertran de CLEQUIN ». Quelques heures après, le Prince leur fait parvenir la procuration pour la rançon de « BERTRANT GUESCLIN ». Dalby et Draytonn reçoivent donc la somme sur le champ, mais en donnent quittance au receveur en mentionnant « Bertrand DE GUESCLYN ». Ces trois actes sont datés du même jour.

Les exemples postérieurs ne manqueraient pas, mais la forme DU GUESCLIN devenant presque la seule utilisée, cela ne prouverait rien. On peut donc admettre malgré la fragilité des exemples, que la correspondance pouvait contribuer à généraliser plus ou moins une certaine graphie et, par suite, une prononciation d'un nom. En outre il apparaît que dans un milieu donné une forme tendait à l'emporter sur les autres. Cela peut sembler évident, mais nous avons noté qu'à première vue ce l'est beaucoup moins.

Il semble en définitive bien établi qu'à sa mort le connétable était surtout connu, par les clercs de l'administration royale, sous le nom qu'il utilisa les dernières années de sa vie et sous lequel il passera à la postérité (51).

Comment expliquer dès lors qu'à la même époque et dans les décades qui suivirent, les mss des chroniques et œuvres littéraires, loin de conserver le même usage, perpétuent un polymorphisme déroutant, ainsi que nous l'avons constaté au début (52).

(51) Et c'est ainsi que le nommera, le 22 déc. 82, Audoin CHAUVERON, simple garde de la prévôté de PARIS.

(52) Bien souvent même on relève des inscriptions tardives sur le dos de certaines reliures ou de certains mss qui portent : DU GAIQULIN (KK 327) ou DU GLAIQUIN (P.267.2), alors que le document original comporte DU GUESCLIN.

Dans le même temps, ses entrailles, selon l'usage de l'époque qui réservait plusieurs tombes aux grands de ce monde, étaient enterrées au PUY, en l'église des Jacobins, avec cette inscription : « Ci-git l'honorable

LE NOM DE DU GUESCLIN 189

Deux facteurs pourraient intervenir :

D'une part les clercs de l'administration royale différaient sans doute beaucoup, tant par leur formation que par leur travail, des copistes d'œuvres littéraires et reflétaient les usages de la Cour. D'autre part, il faut prendre en compte le rôle essentiel joué par les poètes et hommes de lettres dans le développement d'une légende. Ils créent autant qu'ils reçoivent : la reprise dans les œuvres littéraires d'une forme comme GLAIAQUIN ou GUEAQUIN, procédant d'une étymologie légendaire, s'imposait peut-être à des trouvères ou à des copistes et avait peut-être le mérite d'être plus « sonore » (encore que G. d'Ancenis la trouve difficile à prononcer). Le désir de grossir la vérité historique est exprimé d'ailleurs naïvement par FROISSART qui répond à d'ANCENIS en ces termes : « Messire Bertran fut si vaillant homme que on le doit augmenter ce que on peult ». En foi de quoi il se fait un devoir de rapporter, même sans trop y croire, l'histoire du roi AQUIN.

De ses deux mariages, avec Tiphaine RAGUENEL (morte en 71) et Jeanne de LAVAL, le connétable n'eut point d'enfant. Il eut cependant un fils naturel, MICHEL, connu sous le nom de Bastart DU GUESCLIN. écuyer (53). Une de ses sœurs, Julienne, est aussi nommée DU GUESCLIN dans des mss. Quant à son frère OLIVIER, son compagnon et son héritier, il vit son nom évoluer parallèlement à celui de Bertrand DU GUERCLIN, plusieurs fois, DE GESQUIN et DE CLEYKIN pour les Anglais lors de sa captivité, mais c'est sous le nom de DU GUESCLIN qu'il sera connu et très souvent mentionné après la mort de son frère à qui il survécut vingt ans (54). Il n'eut point d'enfants non plus, mais sans doute aussi homme et vaillant Messire Bertrand CLAIKIN jadis connestable de FRANCE », alors qu'à SAINT-DENIS il était écrit GUESCLIN. Il est probable que la forme Guesclin s'est généralisée plus rapidement à PARIS qu'en province. La Vie des Saints de Bretagne, de dom LOBINEAU (1725) donne au nom de DU GUESCLIN la forme communément acceptée aujourd'hui.

un fils naturel qui, le 8 juillet 1415, signe ainsi un reçu : « Je, Jehan, Bastart DU GUESCLIN. » Quatre autres documents citent le bastart DU GUESCLIN : s'agit-il de Michel ou de Jehan ? Son neveu (?) Guillaume porte le même nom.

Mais si nous retournons à présent en Bretagne, retrouver la branche aînée au PLESSIS-BERTRAND, nous assistons à une évolution bien différente ! Les autres membres de cette importante famille n'ont pas tous adopté à la fin du XIVe et au début du XVe s. ce nom devenu illustre. Si la dame du PLESSIS-BERTRAND est, dans une lettre du duc de Bretagne (2 février 1417), nommée « feue dame Tiphaine DU GUESCLIN » (elle venait de mourir), la plupart des documents témoignent d'un flottement analogue à celui observé au début.

Ainsi CATHERINE s'appelle DU GLECHIN, DU GUEZQUIN ou DE GUEAQUYN (de même que son père Bertrand).

En 1407, un « partage est donné par Catherine DE GUEQUIN, dame de Guimené, a Guillaume, Robert et Olivier DU GUEQUIN, freres, enfans juvenieurs de Messire Ollivier DE GUEAQUIN, père de ladite demoiselle » !

Gilles et Yvon sont nommés DE GLESQUIN ou DE GLAESQUIN (et DE GLAESQUEN) ; et même en 1550 un accord passé au château de Mortagne cite, dans une généalogie « Bertrand GLESQUIN, connétable de France ».

Il est donc clair qu'aux XIV^e et XV^e siècles :

— la célébrité nationale a tendu à fixer le nom du connétable et de ses proches, sauf peut-être en Bretagne.

— pour les autres branches de la famille installée en Bretagne l'usage n'a guère été modifié.

Il n'en ira pas de même évidemment après le XVI^e siècle ; tous les descendants directs de la famille porteront le nom célèbre. Ainsi Bertrand DU GUESCLIN (1612-1677) dont le fils fut Bertrand Charles Baptiste DU GUESCLIN de la ROBERIE. La liste en est longue. Notons cependant au XVIII^e s. : — l'évêque de CAHORS, en 1756 (Bertrand, Baptiste, René (55) ; — la marquise DU GUESCLIN, à qui une histoire du connétable est dédicacée (56) ; — Les archives de la marine citent même deux enseignes de vaisseau de ce nom. En 1739, le seigneur de BEAUCÉ s'appelle Bertran, Gabriel DU GUESCLIN (57) ; et en 1703 la dame de BEAUCÉ, chanoinesse de POUSSAY, se nommait Marie-Madeleine DU GUESCLIN (58). Le grand vicaire de PONTOISE porte le même nom (59). Quant à Gabriel DU GUESCLIN, conseiller au Parlement de Bretagne, il eut pour fils René, qui est à l'origine de la branche de Beaucie, éteinte au XVIII^e, et pour fille Julienne.

Cependant les autres formes survivront de leur côté et on trouvera nombre de CLESQUIN, GLESQUIN, etc...

Le nom des DU GUESCLIN s'éteignit en 1828 avec la mort de la duchesse de GESVRES, née DU GUESCLIN de la ROBERIE (60).

Arrivant à la fin de cette série de remarques onomastiques, nous sommes, semble-t-il, fondé à penser qu'une étude plus approfondie sur les noms d'autres personnages célèbres du XIV^e et du XV^e siècle mériterait d'être conduite, en confrontant littérature et documents historiques ; il faudrait tenir compte, et de façon systématique, de la provenance des documents, de leur date, du lieu, de la personne à qui ils étaient destinés, du contexte historique, etc...

Un classement précis pourrait alors permettre de dégager plus clairement des usages et des évolutions de l'anthroponymie médiévale.

Chapter 76

The Merovingian Ancestry of Guyotte de Hames

76.1 Introduction

In the first edition of this book, the author has ignored autosomal DNA links with persons claiming to descend from Merovingians and Charles Martel. The reason is that it is impossible to trace very distant ancestry solely based on autosomal DNA. Indeed, autosomal DNA is only meaningful as confirmation of other evidence. If one claims to descend, one way or another, from Merovingian Kings, one should find autosomal DNA traces.

On December 28, 2022, the author was contacted by Christophe Pattyn,[1] who has done vast research on the origins of Guyotte de Hames, married to Raoul de Patin and described in Chapter 65.2.2 on page 1301. According to his research, documents prove that she descends from the Merovingians.

The Merovingian Dynasty, named after Merovech, a semi-legendary leader, emerged as a significant force in the history of early medieval Europe. Originating from the region of Tournai in present-day Belgium, the Merovingians established their dominance over the Frankish tribes during the decline of the Roman Empire. The dynasty's most notable progenitor, Clovis I (c. 466–511), was instrumental in consolidating Frankish power. His conversion to Christianity around 496 CE, following the Battle of Tolbiac, marked a pivotal moment in the Christianization of the Frankish kingdom and solidified alliances with the Roman Catholic Church. Clovis' baptism by Saint Remigius in Reims further legitimized his rule and established a precedent for subsequent Merovingian kings.

Prominent members of the Merovingian Dynasty include Clovis' sons, Theuderic I, Chlodomer, Childebert I, and Chlothar I, who divided the kingdom among themselves after Clovis' death, leading to a period of internecine conflict and consolidation. Chlothar I eventually reunified the kingdom in 558, but upon his death in 561, the realm was once again divided among his sons. The latter years of the Merovingian rule saw a decline in royal power, with the authority often wielded by the "Mayors of the Palace," the chief officials of the royal household. This period of weakened royal control and factionalism ultimately paved the way for the rise of the Carolingian Dynasty, notably with Pepin the Short, who deposed the last Merovingian king, Childeric III, in 751, thereby ending the Merovingian era.

The Merovingians are also remembered for their contributions to early medieval culture and governance. They established foundational legal codes, such as the Salic Law, which influenced European legal traditions. Additionally, their support for the Christian Church facilitated the spread of monasticism and the establishment of religious institutions that played crucial roles in medieval society. Despite the eventual decline of their political power, the Merovingians left an indelible mark on the history of the Frankish kingdom and the broader trajectory of European history.

76.2 DNA and Genealogy

If the records match reality, we descend from Merovingians and Charles Martel, which may explain the DNA connections with other persons claiming the same. An example is shown in Figure 76.1.

The ancestry of our ancestor Guyotte de Hames is summarized in Figure 76.2 in which her entire known ancestry is shown, in Figure 76.3 in which her connection with the Kings of Kent is shown, in Figure 76.4 in which her relationship with Charlemagne and Charles Martel is highlighted, in Figure 76.5 in which her connection with Charles the Bold is given, in Figure 76.6 in which it is shown how she is related to William the Conqueror, and in Figure 76.7 that shows she is linked to the Merovingians. Charlemagne is shown in Figure 76.8.

[1] Christophe Pattyn descends from a Pattyn branch from Geluveld in Zonnebeke and researches his genealogy, digging evidence of his branch linked with that of de Patin of ours. So far, however, he has not been able to find solid evidence, also not with DNA research. It means that his ancestor Joannes Pattyn, who married Helena Forest, is likely, despite what certain genealogists claim and what is often copy-pasted on Geneanet®, not a son of Pierre Simon de Patin.

Dubbed the Father of Europe, he unified much of Western Europe during the early Middle Ages. Charlemagne established Aachen as his capital, a historical center to this day. The Aachen museum houses a golden statue and a large glove from his reign, representing his authority and court grandeur. His thrown is shown too. He was pivotal in the Carolingian Renaissance, a revival of classical art, culture, and learning. The author is a 37th-generation descendant of Charlemagne, though not patrilineally.*

Chapter 77

Gerard Verbrugghe & Maria Vandenabeele

77.1 Introduction

Jeanette Leona Verbrugghe is primarily described in Chapter 69 as the wife of Pierre Vangheluwe. With her husband and alone, long after his death, she had served as a beloved foster mother to the author when his parents were too busy with other matters. She is referred to in Part X as the daughter-in-law of Zozyma Verhaeghe and Gerard Vangheluwe and appears in several photos in this book.

Her parents, Gerard Verbrugghe and Maria Van den Abeele, are described here. The author has always considered them foster grandparents and enjoyed visiting their place in Wielsbeke. They were both somewhat conservative and honest, friendly and correct. They had a simple lifestyle, but one always felt warmly welcome at their home. Maria was orphaned at a young age, placing her family at the center of her activities. A souvenir in the context of her father's death is shown in Figure 77.2. His French experience during WWII and later continued connection with France in flax harvesting influenced Gerard's life.

The author wants to honor Gerard and Maria by inclusion in this book. They both knew the family Declercq-Devenyn in the 1920s and 1930s. Therefore, in many ways, they have filled the emptiness in the author's 'Wielsbeke chapter' of his early life caused by the premature death of his grandparents, Michel and Irma Declercq-Lesage.

77.2 The French Military Adventure during WWII

77.2.1 The Train Journey into the Unknown

Gerard Verbrugghe was born in Wielsbeke on September 11, 1910, as Gerardus Augustus Verbrugghe, son of Henri Constant Verbrugghe and Zulma Alida Maria Tijtgat; both parents had been born in Ooigem, shown in Figure 77.3. Gerard passed away on July 15, 2003. He left behind a detailed diary with his experiences during WWII in the Belgian army. His diary, written at war, is 14 cm by 8 cm by 8 mm. The text is written in pencil. Based on those writings and a preliminary transcription by his son, Raphael Verbrugghe, we have written an English interpretation of the facts while including information that one can find in history books to offer a more professional framework than barely one man's experience. The text below is not a word-by-word translation and does not contain all the intimate and private details written down by Gerard, as we do not intend to replace his beautiful diary.

Gerard was mobilized on May 10, 1940. At that time, he was married with three children and had already left his military service, depicted in Figure 77.17, far behind. His wife was Maria Vandenabeele; she was born in Tielt on February 22, 1909 (family Vandenabeele-Deblauwe-Casteleyn) and died in 2006. Their three children were Henri, Henriette, and Gabrielle. Later, three more children would be born: Jeanette (1941), Raphael, and Annie.

Because Gerard, like many mobilized soldiers, was unprepared for combat, the Belgian army evacuated him and thousands of other soldiers to safe areas, first in Belgium and later in France, for further training. The idea was probably to avoid those soldiers falling victim to the Germans and ensure they could be deployed in combat later. As explained below, they would ultimately end up in the South of France and would be trapped there after Belgium's surrender[1] to the Germans.

Their situation would even worsen when also the French army surrendered. The Belgian Government abandoned[2] The command twice. First, they fled to France, leaving King Leopold III behind with his combat regiments in Belgium. Then, when the Belgian army on French soil was trapped after the French surrender, they fled to London and left the remaining military behind in France. The return to Belgium of the Belgian army located in France was finally made possible after negotiations with the Germans and King Leopold. Had he not done so, all soldiers would have turned into prisoners[3].

Gerard Verbrugghe belonged to the 52nd Regiment (52ste linieregiment) II/52Li, under the Major Marlier command. This Regiment belonged to the first reinforcement and training center ('1ste Versterkings- en Opleidingscentrum 1 VOC', or 'Etat Major des Troupes de Renfort et d' Instruction TRI'). They were initially stationed at Leopoldkazerne in Ghent and would end up in

[1] The surrender of the besieged Belgian army in West Flanders by King Leopold has been controversial. A discussion is beyond this book's scope.

[2] Without attempting to feed any further controversy, both King Leopold and the Belgian Government have been involved in the events, and neither of them is probably to be blamed or applauded.

[3] His role as a negotiator was solid because he was still the King of Belgium since he had not abdicated his position but had surrendered his country and army.

Figure 77.2: Maria Vandenabeele lost her mother at an early age, which was a profound and life-altering event for her. After this tragic loss, her father remarried, bringing a new dynamic to her family life. However, the family's stability was again shaken when her father fell ill during the global Spanish flu pandemic of 1918-1919. This devastating influenza outbreak, which coincided with the final year of World War I, infected approximately one-third of the world's population and resulted in an estimated 50 million deaths worldwide. The Spanish flu was notorious for its high mortality rate, particularly among young adults and those with underlying health conditions. Maria's father was among the many victims of this pandemic, leaving her to face yet another significant loss and further altering the course of her life during a tumultuous period in history.

[a] In 1858, 14-year-old Bernadette Soubirous declared that she saw several apparitions of 'a white lady' in the cave of Massabielle between February 11 and July 16. Soon, ecclesiastical dignitaries considered eighteen shades to be those of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Bernadette never said she had seen Mary but spoke of a beautiful girl about her age, about the same height, in white, with whom she spoke face to face as if they were friends. When asked for her name, the apparition smiled. Only on March 25, at the 16th apparition, the shade revealed her name (in the local dialect): 'I am the Immaculate Conception.' Bernadette did not understand this and, therefore, repeated the words constantly until she could transfer them to Father Abbé Peyramale, who understood the apparitions' authenticity. How, otherwise, could such an illiterate poor peasant girl know such a term known only among clergy and theologians? The white young lady asked her to do penance for the sinners, pray, and ask the priests for a chapel. She let Bernadette discover the source, and she had to wash with its water. In 1864, a statue in honor of Our Lady of Lourdes was erected at the apparition site in the cave. Consequently, a chapel was built that soon became too small and would serve as the crypt for the first Basilica of the Immaculate Conception. Over the years, two more basilicas and several other buildings were added, now part of the Sanctuary of Our Lady of Lourdes. After the Franco-German War of 1870, nationalism was prevalent in France and induced the promotion of local heroes and other characters to serve the political cause. A Holy apparition in the South of France has been highly encouraged and was also very popular with the Belgians.

Montpelier, France. The Regiment consisted of an instruction Battalion commanded by De Raedt, a reinforcement Battalion commanded by Henri Langie, and a Services Company under the command of Moesman. Lieutenants and Commanders under De Raedt were Conard, De Kubber, De Moor, and Léon Janssens. Lieutenants and Commanders under Henri Langie were Bruneel, Dosche, Leclerq, Clement, and De Paepe.

For Gerard, the war began on May 10, 1940, after he had been mobilized and consequently arrived at Leopoldkazerne in Ghent. His journey, primarily by train, is shown in Figure 77.5. The first night, he slept at the School of Agriculture. The initial purpose was to gather all reservists at Leopoldkazerne and give them a quick rehearsal on using their weapons. However, the speed at which the Germans attacked Belgium forced them to go to safer places in Belgium and later in France. On May 10, the first 2 German prisoners of war, pilots, arrived at Leopoldskazerne. One can imagine that this must have been a spectacle for the Belgian soldiers who were there, too.

The next day, his battalion left for Zaffelare. On Saturday, May 11, at 2 a.m., Gerard and his comrades were ready to go wherever they could serve. Still, they had to wait until May 14, 8 p.m., to leave as the result of an order given on May 13 by Major General Fremont to try to move the Belgian soldiers to France and protect them from German attacks.

Relocating to France was an endeavor that was not adequately prepared. Indeed, as Belgium had decided to remain neutral, it could not have arranged for a German offensive. At that time, the soldiers probably did not realize what a precarious situation they were in. Indeed, when the train entered Ghent on May 15 and paused to ride to Aalter that evening, Gerard used the time to visit his sister in Ghent. Unfortunately, she was not at home when he rang her doorbell. Gerard also had an auntie, Marie Romanie Verbrugghe, in Ghent, as we found out, who was married to a certain Mr Samyn; she was born in Ooigem on April 16, 1858, and she would die in Ghent on October 26, 1942.

After their departure, the train left for Aalter, Torhout, and finally, via Dixmude, they arrived in Bruges. Their destination was France, so they had to move on. On May 16, they arrived at Veurne early in the morning. From there, they went to De Panne–Adinkerke, near the border with France. They then headed for France. They crossed the Belgian-French border at 10 a.m. Then they went from Rosendaël to Dunkerque, where they had to wait 6 hours. At 4 p.m., they left South. Gerard remembered passing the following places before he fell asleep: Cassel, Hazebrouck, Steenbecque, Tienen, Lillers, Bethune, Noeux-Les-Mines, Bully-Les-Mines, Grenay, Lens, Bailleul(-Sir-Berthoult), Athies, Arras.

On May 17, they continued their long journey to Orival. Everywhere they passed, villagers were applauding, and they received cider. On May 18, they arrived at Angers at 8 a.m. The whole day, they traveled along the Loire River. After a 2-hour break, they continued their journey to Saumur via La Ménitré. After Saumur, they continued to Tours via La Chapelle-sur-Loire, Saint-Patrice, Langeais, Cinq-Mars-la-Pile, and Savonnieres Saint-Genouph. At Tours, they have received food for three days. Therefore, they knew they would have to move on further. In the evening, they left Tours.

On Sunday, May 19, at 2 a.m., they passed the city of Angouleme. From Angouleme, they went to Libourne. They went to Bordeaux via Vayres, Saint-Loubès, and Lormont from Libourne. They have seen the sea harbor and passed five tunnels. At Bordeaux Benauge, they have departed for Dax. At around 8 p.m., they have reached Tarbes, near Lourdes, shown in Figure 77.4. They saw huge mountains, driving slowly and passing the closest point to Lourdes at 9 p.m. It's a shame they could not stop here. They continued their journey close to the mountains until it got too dark to see anything.

On May 20, they woke up at 7 a.m. It was daylight, and the weather was warm. They reached a large railway station in the morning. Three trains with troops were next to each other. They continued their journey to Bessan via Coran, Nissan(-lez-Enserune), Colombiers, and Béziers.

Consequently, they continued to Florensac and Paulhan until they finally reached Clermont-l' Hérault. Upon their arrival at Clermont-l' Hérault, at around 8 p.m., they wandered on a square for about an hour and were then moved to a giant garage where they could stay. The place was fit, as half of them received a little bed to sleep.

On May 21, after a good night's sleep, they spent the whole day moving material from the train station. On May 22, Gerard was awakened by thunder. There was a thunderstorm with short rain showers. At 8 a.m., Gerard visited the doctor to show him his leg, fearing he was developing an ulcer. Starting at 6:30 p.m., it has rained again with thunder and lightning.

On May 23, the weather was beautiful. Nothing much happened that day. On May 24, nothing unusual happened. Gerard could not wear his shoes for the second day in a row because of his ulcer. On May 25, Gerard had nothing to do because of his abscess. Nothing happened that day. On May 26, a Sunday, they went to church. Nothing extraordinary happened except that 12 recruits have joined them. On May 27, nothing unusual happened except Gerard's leg, which appeared to be finally healing. The next day, dramatic changes occurred.

On May 28, the Belgian army, still on Belgian soil, had been repelled towards the West, similar to WWI. This time, the difference was that they had been surrounded by the Germans, whose speed had surprised the French army and let them reach the French coast while besieging the trapped Belgian forces. On May 28, King Leopold decided that other than massive suicide, a surrender to the German troops was the only remaining reasonable option. At that time, he had been abandoned by his Government[4] he had not received a fast enough response and forces from the French[5]. Furthermore, the British evacuation at Dunkirk had already [4] Another option could have been abdication and returning his power to Belgian politics on foreign soil, but he probably feared that his army, in that case, would have been imprisoned as enemies and, in danger. Furthermore, as Belgium had been neutral before the war, King Leopold decided Belgium should only defend its territory and not get involved in a global war involving big countries such as France, Germany, and Great Britain. The events are still controversial.

[5] The French had a very long line of command, too slow to act decisively. Also, they were confused by the Germans invading two fronts.

started on May 26, two days before the Belgian surrender. In addition, the Dutch had already surrendered on May 15, more than two weeks earlier than the Belgians.

Gerard wrote that on May 28, they found out that Belgium had capitulated and that this news, how bad it was, heated his desire to return home to his wife and children. At that moment, he also believed that his brothers Pierre and Oscar, both soldiers, had been trapped somewhere in France.

Indeed, the soldiers in France had heard Belgian Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot on the radio. For some reason, his speech had pissed off every soldier because they had the impression that they had not been told the truth. The next day, May 29, a lack of food and the proposals made by Pierlot maintained a sense of frustration and unhappiness with the soldiers. There was a conflict between Prime Minister Pierlot and King Leopold, which originated on May 15 when the Dutch surrendered. Pierlot wanted the Belgian army to move South and join the French army to avoid disconnection from the Allied troops. However, the King wished to remain with his troops on Belgian soil as his father had done during WWI and wanted to move northwest towards the coast. Both men had good reasons. In an allied constellation, Pierlot was right. However, King Leopold realized that an army without a country and on foreign soil was virtually powerless and would result in the destruction of the country by the Germans, so he was right, too. Note that these events occurred after the demolition of Poland by the German army in August 1939. During his radio speech on May 28, Pierlot condemned King Leopold for his surrender, and it was this message that frustrated the Belgian soldiers in France. Indeed, King Leopold was their commander-in-chief, who had stayed with the army and on Belgian soil. Furthermore, the King had promised that the soldiers' destiny was equal to his fate, meaning he would never abandon them. He had kept his promise.

On May 30, around 30 Belgian soldiers who had been involved in battles with the Germans North of Antwerp arrived South of France and told horrible stories of what they had gone through during the campaign.

Furthermore, on that day, all soldiers were disarmed and turned in their guns, which had been received earlier in Zaffelare. Gerard was distraught because he knew that his two brothers had also been stationed North of Antwerp to fight the Germans. He feared that they might be dead. Gerard was anxious when he heard of the fierce battles at Kortrijk, not far from his village, Wielsbeke. Gerard became so desperate that he decided to pray for the Holy Mary of Halle[6] The next day, more soldiers arrived with terrible stories of the horror in Belgium. It drove him mad!

That Sunday, Gerard would drink wine until he was drunk in an attempt to forget all the horror[7].

On June 2, without King Leopold, the Belgian Government investigated to what extent the army stationed in France could join the French army and fight against the Germans. Meanwhile, from June 3 onwards, the Belgian soldiers turned subject to French bullying and insults and were even called Germans.

The French army later surrendered on June 22. Only then would the Belgian soldiers slowly find ways to return to their homeland. In the meantime, the Belgians had to find methods to survive and idle. On June 9, a Sunday, the troops left by train in the direction of Perpignan. They passed via Paulhon, Béziers, Narbonne, Moux, and Carcassonne (where there was a Velodrome) and would continue to Toulouse and Souillac. They arrived at 6:30 a.m. They reached Brive-la-Gaillarde and went further to Limoges. Gerard was very impressed by the numerous mountains and tunnels he could see. Then, they continued the journey to Argenton-Sur-Creuse to arrive at Chateauroux and continued to Vierzon. Gerard probably did not know where he was as he believed he was close to Paris then. Along the road, they have seen many refugees. At that moment, the Belgians heard that Italy was also at war. Nevertheless, it was unclear to the Belgians whether Italy was fighting with or against the Germans. Gerard also heard that a ship with 1200 Flemish refugees had sunk.

On June 11, the troops traveled by train to Bièvres, near Paris. They followed the night trajectory from Vierzon to Saint-Servais (near Dreux), probably via either Orleans, Chartres, or both. They arrived in or near Saint-Servais very early in the morning, and it took until around 8 a.m. to reach Bièvres, of which Gerard was very confident that it must have been only 20 km from the city of Paris. From Saint-Servais to Bièvres, they saw many hostile airplanes but were somewhat covered by the foggy weather.

They also heard shootings, which made it clear that they were very close to the front line. To reach Bièvres, the train traveled to Juvisy-Sur-Orge and was then detoured because the railway bridges had been bombed that morning during a bombardment with at least 300 German bombs.

77.2.2 The journey on foot and the near-death experiences

In Bièvres, in Figure 77.6, the troops stayed in the woods near the castle in the train station's vicinity (Chateau des Mathurins). While Gerard and his comrades rested on the forest soil, underneath improvised tents, that evening, knowing that they were so close to Paris, he wondered what would happen next. His journey, primarily on foot or on a bicycle, is shown in Figure 77.7.

Meanwhile, the 64th battalion had also arrived there, and Gerard desperately looked around to see if he could recognize any friends or acquaintances. What happened at Bièvres was that the Belgian II/52Li was 'donated' to the French army to help with Paris's defense. Meanwhile, Commander Langie tried to figure out how his troops could support the French and what tasks they could carry out. Nevertheless, for two days, there was no decision made.

On June 11, Gerard and his comrades were on guard in the park areas and discovered a nearby strawberry field of 2 hectares. They enjoyed the tasty strawberries. Gerard also found out that he was located not far from the airport of Orly, bombed by the Germans.

On June 12, Gerard became agitated because he realized that the Germans were closing in; still, the Belgian military received no instructions on what to undertake. Meanwhile, horrible scenes were visible of people fleeing with all their portable belongings. Gerard also realized at that moment that he was fortunate because his life had not yet been in danger. The day was rainy, and Gerard noticed that the French troops were pulling back to regroup before relaunching charges on the German forces. Some French troops mentioned to the Belgians that the Germans had said in a radio conversation that they knew about the starving disarmed Belgian soldiers in the forest. The Belgian forces feared that they would be used as hostages by the French or that they would be used somehow as defensive meatballs when the German troops approached.

On June 13, the German army reached Paris's northern suburbs, and therefore Commander Langie decided to move south. Their goal was to pass the Loire River. They would retreat by marching to Orleans via Arpajon, Etampes, and Angerville. On their way south, the troops were joined by thousands of refugees who went south too. In Arpajon, the local French government delivered food to the soldiers, but the army slaughtered several cows in the village as the provisions were insufficient. Gerard recalls that the departure from Bièvres began at 10 pm, and they walked around 25 km that night.

[6] After the war, when he realized that his close relatives and family had survived the war, Gerard would pilgrimage to the Holy Mary of Halle numerous times. It was his expression of gratitude.

[7] So he told in his diary. We should not forget how tasty French wine is, though.

On June 14, the troops continued at 13:30 and were split into two groups. One group marched along the N20 road (so they must have passed Champlain, Langjumeau, and Monthéry), the other along a parallel street. Communication between the two groups took place by Commander Langie on his bicycle. Gerard was again very impressed by the thousands of devastated families, mainly women and little children, who fled to the south. People who were exhausted rested in the ditches and on the street. At 2 am, they reached Arpajon and left Arpajon at 4 am to Etampes, in Figure 77.8, where they arrived at 10 pm. At Etampes, they slept in a church. The village had been bombed the morning before. Gerard heard that around 100 people were killed and about 300 injured. On the 15th, the Belgian army heard that the Germans moved very fast towards the Loire River. Therefore, they decided to use any possible transportation means to move the troops as soon as possible across the Loire. The meeting point was Olivet, 10 km south of Orleans. It appears that only one-third would be able to cross the Loire. The others were stuck in front of the last remaining bridge over the Loire when the French decided to blow it up. This means that two-thirds of the Belgians were held and imprisoned by the Germans. In his diary, Gerard writes that he woke up on the 15th at 3 am; everyone was in a panic. Gerard and seven other Flemish soldiers found bicycles in Etampes and went south, as commanded. The plan was to sleep in a forest that evening.

The following day, on June 16, they continued their journey towards Orleans. Because the Germans shelled Orleans the night before, Gerard and his comrades had to ride their bicycles through the rubble on fire, and he remembers that it was a sweltering experience. Many homes were ablaze. From Orleans, they were sent to Vernou-en-Sologne. Thirty kilometers along that road, in a small village, Saint-Viâtre, in Figure 77.9 (between Orleans and Vierzon), the enemy bombed them. A few minutes before that, one of the soldiers noticed he had a flat tire. Therefore, the group decided to get into the forest and repair the tire before moving on. It was at that time that the shells hit. Bombs fell as close as 100 m from their location. Many people on and near the road were killed. German machine guns also showered the street with rounds. After the event, the street was packed with soldiers and civilians alike, retreating south. It was then that Gerard met a friend, a certain Cyrille Deboschere. They decided to stay together (and probably also chose not to go to Vernou-en-Sologne, which was west, but go south straight towards Vierzon along which road La Ferté-Imbault is located). At 5 km from Vierzon, they decided to stay at a small farm in a barn at La Ferté-Imbault, in Figure 77.10.

On June 17, they continued to Chateauroux. Along the way, they grabbed wine, cider, and liquor from the bombed homes and found some happiness in being drunk. They reached the airport in Chateauroux, in Figure 77.11, and stayed there. There was a large factory nearby, and the airport had only around seven little planes parked. From there, they moved to army barracks that appeared empty, apart from 40 French soldiers who guarded the facilities. They did not sleep there but continued for 2 km and slept at a farm. The farmers were very friendly and thought that the war was over. They went back to their companies at ten o'clock and moved on to Limoges, 190 km away. Here and there, they could take a short nap and move on. They spent the night at a farm.

On June 18, they were in the hill country and had to walk most of the time because it was impossible to ride their bikes. After reaching Limoges, they continued the journey to Toulouse. This day was also the first time in two days that they heard explosions again. In the evening, they slept at a farm. On June 19, they continued further but became increasingly desperate as more French soldiers followed, which meant that the frontline was moving south. At the same time, however, there were fewer and fewer refugees noticeable along the road. The soldiers had no food and nothing to drink and relied on bread offered by farmers here and there or water they could tap in the villages they passed. A big thunderstorm forced them to sleep early at a farm along the road in the afternoon.

On June 20, they proceeded to Brive-la-Gaillarde. They found a camp with many Belgian Walloon civilians who had worked for the French army. Desperately, they realized that although all were starving, they still had to travel 300 km further towards their final destination. Gerard wrote that he longed to go home to his wife and children and that he, therefore, secretly hoped the French army would soon surrender and end the war. The next day was a miserable rainy day. Everyone was desperately hoping for the war to end.

On June 22, the weather was clear, and they knew they still had 173 km to go to their destination. Sometimes they could ride the bicycle; other times, they had to walk because the road was inadequate or too steep.

On June 23, they heard from the locals that a peace treaty was signed with the Germans. The end of the war rejoiced them. At noon they reached the barracks of Cahors, in Figure 77.12, where they received a good meal. After their lunch, they continued in the direction of Toulouse. They hoped to catch a train at Toulouse to Clermont (sic); otherwise, they would have to continue their bicycle ride. As it was Sunday, they had gone to the mass at a local church. At night they stayed at a farm.

On June 24, it rained cats and dogs, and superiors diverted them to a small village where they had to join the 57th line in the 6th company. Gerard was happy with the situation because it meant they were back in the military structure and could receive tasty meals from now on.

On June 25, they officially heard that the peace treaty was signed, so the war was now formally over. Gerard decided to sell his bicycle for 30 French francs. He preferred the money rather than to turn in his bike and get nothing. Because the war had ended, he longed to go home again. On this day, he also lost his necklace with two religious medals.

On June 26, Gerard woke up after having dreamt about his wife for the first time since the beginning of the war. The weather improved, and the following days, until later that summer, Gerard and his comrades spent their days desperately hoping for news to go home. In contrast, they also went fishing in the local rivers (with a net) and often slept in the sun on haystacks. Having nothing to do but waiting for news about what would happen next was very frustrating. They were located at Ségouffiéle, close to Toulouse. On July 5, the soldiers heard that the British had destroyed the French fleet. Many nights, Gerard dreamed of his home in Wielsbeke.

Further in his diary, Gerard describes daily life, how they bought some meat, how they did not have enough money to buy proper food, how he bought a new bicycle for 20 French francs. The soldiers also found out that they had received permission to work on a farm, if possible, to earn some extra money. On July 11, Gerard noticed a French soldier arriving home and was reunited with his young wife and child. It made him long, even more, to go back again. Gerard was also distraught the following days as he realized that he did not know if his wife and children were still alive or not and if they were safely at home in Wielsbeke. Exaltation made way for uneasiness. On July 15, they were told they could rejoin their Regiment in Clermont-l'Hérault. On July 16, Gerard fabricated a ring that he decided to keep as a souvenir of this year's bad experience. On July 17, they received a salary. Many soldiers that day and the next day decided to walk back home or go on their bikes. Gerard decided to stay as he was not confident that such a decision was excellent and safe. He also mentioned that the following days they went fishing again and often caught snakes in their nets. Gerard also found out that evening that most families in Belgium thought that the soldiers were not alive anymore, so it worried him that he could not inform his own family. On July 21, a commemoration was held for the killed Belgian soldiers as this was Belgium's national day. On July 22, Gerard heard that he had to join his Regiment at Clermont-Ferrand.

He regretted not having his bicycle anymore; otherwise, he could have tried to go home immediately instead. The next day he received news that he had to stay and not go to Clermont-Ferrand. On July 31, Gerard and his comrades heard, from Belgians who had arrived from the north, that the Belgians back home believed that the soldiers wanted to stay in the south of France rather than go home. The thought despaired them. On that day, finally, many troops departed by train in the direction of Belgium. On August 2, the remaining soldiers began a mutiny, desperate to go back home. On August 3, there was a manifestation at 'L' Isle le Jourdain,' but the local gendarmes were very friendly towards the Belgians. Isle le Jourdain is shown in Figures 77.13.

Figure 77.17: Left, we see Maria in 1927 and Gerard in 1930. When WWII began in 1940, Gerard was in the military reserve unit, having left his military service far behind. He was expected to be trained again in unoccupied Belgium or France to combat the Germans later. Because Belgium surrendered, such plans ended, and he returned home as a civilian. Next, on January 5, 1985, a commemoration of Gerard Verbrugghe and Maria Van Den Abeele's 50-year marriage is shown. Then, we see Maria signing the golden book of Wielsbeke on her 50th wedding jubilee. The author stands behind her. The other photo was taken at the church of Wielsbeke.

On August 6, two of Gerard's friends left on their bicycles to Belgium. Gerard was left behind as he had no bike. On August 7, he finally had a bike and left Ségoufielle for Carcassone, then Montauban, then Cahors and Gourdon, in Figure 77.14, where they arrived at 7 pm. Exhausted by the 215 km ride, they slept outdoors in the grass. The next day, totally stiff after a night on the ground, they left for Brive-la-Gaillarde. Along the road, they were picked up by a car that carried them 23 km. At 8:30 am, they reached Brive-la-Gaillarde and continued to Limoges, where they arrived at 6 pm and slept in a barn.

The remainder of the journey, primarily by train, is shown in Figure 77.15.

On August 10, they passed the border between Vichy-France and German-France and went to Vierzon's train station. They departed in the afternoon: Salbris, Orleans, and Étapes (near Paris) and continued to Mons in Belgium and then Brussels, where they arrived on August 11 at 2 pm. Near the Brussels train station, they could shower and have a meal. From Brussels, they went by tram and car back home. When Gerard arrived home at 11 pm, his dog was the first to recognize his arrival. His wife and children were safe. Two of Gerard's brothers were taken prisoners of war and were in Germany.

Like many of his contemporaries, Gerard Verbrugghe has always loved the song 'J' attendrai' by Rina Ketty, shown in Figure 77.16. Most probably, it was played often where the troops had been stationed in France.

Jeanette Verbrugghe, the author's foster mother, was conceived after his return, i.e., in March 1941. The journey through France and Rina Ketty's words[8] were sweet memories of Gerard and Maria, a couple in love until they reached almost 100. We cite the lyrics of this memorable song to show how revealing the words must have been to the couple, given the experiences they went through in 1940:

J' attendrai - Le jour et la nuit - J' attendrai, toujours - Ton retour - J' attendrai - Car l' oiseau qui s' enfuit vient chercher l' oubli - Dans son nid - Le temps passe et court - En battant tristement - Dans mon cœur plus lourd - Et pourtant, j' attendrai - Ton retour.
Les fleurs palissent - Le feu s' éteint - L' ombre se glisse - Dans le jardin - L' horloge tisse - Des sons très longs - Je crois entendre ton pas - Le vent m' apporte - Des bruits lointains - Guettant ma porte - J' écoute en vain - Hélas, plus rien - Plus rien ne vient.
J' attendrai - Le jour et la nuit - J' attendrai, toujours - Ton retour - J' attendrai - Car l' oiseau qui s' enfuit vient chercher l' oubli - Dans son nid - Le temps passe et court - En battant tristement - Dans mon cœur plus lourd - Et pourtant, j' attendrai - Ton retour.

Indeed, Maria, who had stayed behind in Wielsbeke in 1940 with three children, has also had bad experiences. When the Germans approached the Leie River, the Battle of the Leie began on May 24, and the civilians fled. German Stukas attacked them along the road, and several people, mainly those who could not jump soon enough into the ditch, were killed. Maria lost track of one child but then found her back. After the battle on May 28, the civilians returned home, and, almost like a miracle, Maria's home remained unharmed.

Chapter 78

Genealogy Reports

78.1 Introduction

In the study of genealogy, every ancestor and their siblings are included, as each individual can offer valuable insights into our history. The exploration of genealogical context, the search for additional evidence, and the tracing of lineage further back in time are crucial to understanding our heritage. However, it is acknowledged that some ancestral branches may appear less captivating than others. This book focuses on the segments of our ancestry that we found particularly intriguing.

A comprehensive database was constructed using specialized genealogy software, and its contents have been made available online. The data presented in this section is derived from this database. While we have endeavored to ensure the accuracy of the information, it still needs to be completed. For example, statements such as 'they had one son and one daughter' indicate that only one son and one daughter have been documented in our database, though there may have been more offspring.

The chapters in this book provide a more thorough exploration of our genealogy than typical reports. Three separate overviews are included to facilitate a holistic understanding, allowing readers to study them independently of the preceding narrative.

In recognition of the equal genetic contribution of all our ancestors and to honor their individuality, we have refrained from specifying the branches to which they belong. Consequently, this list serves not as a replacement for the detailed chapters but as a unified presentation of our family, underscoring the interconnectedness of all members.

In a few instances, our ancestry tree contains an entry stating 'several generations,' which means there is enough historical proof to make that statement without precise knowledge of how many generations this span covers. In those cases, the genealogy reports, semi-automatically generated by our genealogy software, take 'several generations' as one person and, therefore, make the wrong estimation of how distantly older ancestors along that line are separated from us. This results in misinterpretations that we still need to remove from the lists below when, in the future, more specific information is found.

Figure 78.1: Gravensteen Castle, a fortified water castle in Ghent, Belgium, was constructed in 1180 and served as the residence of several notable Counts of Flanders, including Philip of Alsace and Louis of Male, until 1353. Earlier, the site had associations with counts such as Arnulf I and Baldwin I, who established the initial fortifications against Viking incursions. Built primarily of blue limestone, this imposing structure symbolizes the feudal power and military strength of the Counts. Throughout its history, Gravensteen has undergone various transformations, functioning as a courthouse, prison, mint, and even a cotton factory. Notably restored between 1893 and 1903, the castle now serves as a city museum and a major tourist attraction. The Gravensteen's architectural and historical significance offers valuable insights into medieval life and governance in Flanders, making it a subject of interest for historians and architects alike.

56. Simon Antunez Governador, y Comendador de Santa Maria de Arias de la orden de Christo, del consejo de Guerra de su Mag.d y Maesse de Campo de Infanteria Española, dize assi: Enrrique Desclergues vino à su costa à Flandes para servir à su Mag.d y con ella sirvio hasta el año 1623. mas de 20. años, hallandosse en el socorro de Balduque, donde fue vna de las picas del Esquadron volante: Y passando sobre Ostende, se halló en el sitio, y toma dèl, donde en 4. de Setiembre de 1604. fue à reconocer vn puesto en la muralla, de que dio muy buena cuenta: Y ordenandole el capitan Geronymo Desclergue, su hermano, ganasse con su compañia dicho puesto, lo hizo, donde dicho Geronymo fue muerto, y bolado, con la mitad de su compañia, y dicho Enrrique salio mal herido en la cabeça, y con las tripas fuera de su barriga de que estava al cabo de su vida: En Frisa se halló en ganar las villas de Locemo, y Grol, donde estando con su compañia, y la del capitā Manuel Fran.co de Vanguardia, cegó el fosso, y se alojó en la muralla, de que resultó rendirse la plaça al amanecer por su puesto: De aqui fue imbiado à tomar los puestos de la villa de Rimberg, y fue nōbrado para assaltar el fuerte lo que hizo con mucho valor, y en el sitio de dicha villa peleó mu-chissimas vezes, hasta que en 21. de Setiembre 1606. estando de Vanguardia con su compañia, en las trincheras, hizo el enemigo vna gran salida à ellas, de donde el tal Enrrique salio mal herido de vn piqueço en vn braço, y vn mosquetaço

Henrich Gustav Magnus
Birth 1802
Berlin, Germany
Death 1870 (68y)
Berlin, Germany

He was co-advised during and just after his PhD by Jöns Jacob Berzelius (Väversunda, Sweden, 1779 - Stockholm, Sweden, 1848) and Louis Joseph Gay-Lussac (Saint Léonard de Noblat, France, 1778 - Paris, France, 1850).

August Adlof Edouard Eberhard Kundt
Birth 1839
Schwerin, Germany
Professor 1867 (28y)
University of Berlin, Germany
Professor 1868 (29y)
Federal Polytechnic Institute Zurich, Switzerland
Professor 1872 (33y)
University of Strasbourg, Germany-France
Professor 1988
Berlin Physical Institute, Germany
Death 1894 (55y)
Lübeck, Germany

Famous for his work in acoustics and optics. He developed the acoustic standing wave tube to measure acoustic impedances of materials and the speed of sound. He was the successor of Hermann von Helmholtz as chair of experimental physics at the Berlin Physical Institute.

Woldemar Voigt
Birth 1850
Leipzig, Germany

80.1 Short Biography - 2024

Dr. Nico F. Declercq joined the G. W. Woodruff School of Mechanical Engineering at the Georgia Institute of Technology in 2006, at the age of 30. The Georgia Institute of Technology is located in Atlanta, Georgia, in the United States, and is one of the country's most prominent and most highly ranked universities.
Most of his activities take place at GT-Europe[1], Georgia Tech's first international campus in France.
Before this, he was a Postdoctoral Fellow of Belgium's National Science Foundation at Ghent University[2].

[2] Declercq secured a postdoctoral position funded by the prestigious Belgian National Science Foundation (FWO-Vlaanderen) immediately upon completing his PhD. This fellowship allowed him to benefit from a three-year grant, with potential extensions of up to nine years. Despite his gratitude for receiving this grant, he faced significant challenges within the rigid Belgian academic system, which had already predetermined that he would not obtain a permanent academic position at his institution due to prearranged appointments for future vacancies. Consequently, he recognized that to avoid squandering a decade of his professional life, he needed to pursue opportunities on the international stage.

Death 1809 (54y) Paris, France
Johann Carl Gehler
Birth 1732 Görlitz, Germany
Death 1796 (64y)
Physician, mineralogist and anatomist
Johann Friedrich Gmelin
Birth 1748 Tübingen, Germany
PhD 1768 (20y) University of Tübingen, Germany
Professor 1773 (25y) University of Göttingen, Germany
Death 1804 (56y) Göttingen, Germany
He was a German naturalist, botanist, entomologist, herpetologist and malacologist. He was a professor of chemistry, botany and mineralogy. Among his famous students were Georg Friedrich Hildebrandt (1764-1816), Carl Friedrich Kielmeyer (1765-1844), Wilhelm Lampadius and Friedrich Stromeyer.
Louis Nicolas Vauquelin
Birth 1763 Saint-André-d'Hébertot, France
Death 1829 (66y) Saint-André-d'Hébertot, France
Abraham Gottlob Werner
Birth 1749 Wehray - Oslecznica, Germany-Poland
Professor 1775 (26y) Freiburg Mining Academy, Germany
Award 1810 (61y) Member of the Royal Sedish Academy of Sciences
Professor University of Leipzig, Germany
Death 1817 (68y) Dresden, Germany
He was a geologist who is remembered for his chronological succession in rocks. He is known as the father of German geology. He was one of the most famous lecturers in Europe who attracted numerous students to Germany.
Friedrich Stromeyer
Birth 1776 Göttingen, Germany
PhD 1800 (24y) University of Gòttingen, Germany
Professor 1801 (25y) University of Gòttingen, Germany
Award 1826 (50y) Member Royal Society of Edinburgh
Death 1835 (59y) Göttingen, Germany
Two famous students of his were Eilhard Mitscherlich and Robert Bunsen (1811-1899). He also influenced University of Heidelberg professor Leopold Gmelin (1788-1853). Stromeyer discovered Cadmium. The mineral 'stromeyerite' is named after him.
Christian Samuel Weiss
Birth 1780 Leipzig, Germany
Professor 1803 (23y) Leipzig, Germany
Professor 1810 (30y) University of Berlin, Germany
Death 1856 (76y) Cheb, Czech Republic
He was a mineralogist who transformed crystallography to a mathematical science topic. The Weiss zone law in crystallography is named after him. His notable PhD students were Franz Ernst Neumann and Gustav Rose (1798-1873), known for the meteorite classification and for his work in mineralogy, whom he advised together with Jöns Jakob Berzelius (1779-1848).
Eilhard Mitscherlich
Birth 1794 Neuende, Germany
Award 1823 (29y) Member Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences
Professor 1825 (31y) University of Berlin, Germany
Death 1863 (69y) Schönberg, Germany
Franz Ernst Neumann
Birth 1798 Joachimsthal, Germany
Professor 1828 (30y) University of Königsberg, Germany
Award 1886 (88y) Copley Medal
Death 1895 (97y) Königsberg, Germany
His PhD students were Woldemar Vogt, Alfred Clebsch, Gustav Robert Kirchhoff, and Friedrich Heinrich Albert Wangerin. He also collaborated with Friedrich Wilhelm Bessel.
Henrich Gustav Magnus
Birth 1802 Berlin, Germany
Death 1870 (68y) Berlin, Germany
He was co-advised during and just after his PhD by Jöns Jacob Berzelius (Väversunda, Sweden, 1779 - Stockholm, Sweden, 1848) and Louis Joseph Gay-Lussac (Saint Léonard de Noblat, France, 1778 - Paris, France, 1850).
August Adlof Edouard Eberhard Kundt
Birth 1839 Schwerin, Germany
Professor 1867 (28y) University of Berlin, Germany
Professor 1868 (29y) Federal Polytechnic Institute Zurich, Switzerland
Professor 1872 (33y) University of Strasbourg, Germany-France
Professor 1988 Berlin Physical Institute, Germany
Death 1894 (55y) Lübeck, Germany
Famous for his work in acoustics and optics. He developed the acoustic standing wave tube to measure acoustic impedances of materials and the speed of sound. He was the successor of Hermann von Helmholtz as chair of experimental physics at the Berlin Physical Institute.
Woldemar Voigt
Birth 1850 Leipzig, Germany
Award 1898 (48y) He invented Tensors
Professor University of Göttingen, Germany
Death 1919 (69y) Göttingen, Germany
He preceeded Peter Debeye and latar Max Born as head of the theoretical department of the Physical Institute at Göttingen. Voigt notation is named after him. He worked on crystal physics and electro-optics.
Emil Gabriel Warburg
Birth 1846 Altona, Germany
PhD 1867 (21y) University of Berlin, Germany
Professor 1872 (26y) University of Strasbourgh, Germany-France
Professor 1876 (30y) University of Freiburg, Germany
Professor 1894 (48y) University of Berlin, Germany
Award 1911 (65y) Participant of the first Solvay congress, Belgium
Death 1931 (85y) Bayreuth, Germany
Gustav Rober Kirchhoff convinced him to study Physics. He was the one who nominated Otto Lummer, Wilhelm Wien, Max Planck and Albert Einstein for the Nobel Prize.
Paul Karl Ludwig Drude
Birth 1863 Braunschweig, Germany
Professor 1894 (31y) University of Leipzig, Germany
Award 1900 (37y) editor Annalen der Physik, Germany
Professor 1901 (38y) Giessen University, Germany
Professor 1905 (42y) University of Berlin, Germany
Death 1906 (43y) Berlin, Germany
His Drude model was, after his death, further developed by Arnold Sommerfeld and Hans Bethe.
James Franck
Birth 1882 Hamburg, Germany
PhD 1906 (24y) University of Berlin, Germany
Professor 1920 (38y) University of Gòttingen, Germany
Award 1925 (43y) Nobel Prize Physics
Professor 1938 (56y) University of Chicago, USA
Award 1942 (60y) Participant Manhattan Project until 1946
Award 1951 (69y) Max Plack medal
Award 1955 (73y) Rumford Prize
Award 1964 (82y) Fellow Royal Society
Death 1964 (82y) Göttingen, Germany
Worked with Heinirch Rubens, Max Planck, Julius Robert Oppenheimer, and Patrick Maynard Stuart Blackett.

Figure 80.6: When the author was a young student in the 1990s, his enthusiasm for science was rekindled, thanks to the inspiring passion of one of his teachers, Professor Oswald Leroy. When he later decided to pursue a PhD, he had only one condition: Professor Leroy had to be his advisor; otherwise, he would not have pursued it. The photo at the bottom middle shows Declercq's three academic inspirations: his advisors, Oswald Leroy, Mack Breazeale, shown in Figure 80.16, and Laszlo Adler, shown in Figure 80.9.

Dr. Declercq earned his PhD in Engineering Physics, summa cum laude with congratulations from the Jury, from Ghent University in 2005, and his M.S. in Physics, cum laude, from the Catholic University of Leuven in 2000, with a major in Astrophysics.

As a Georgia Tech full professor, his research focuses on Ultrasonics in Mechanical Engineering, Physics, Bioengineering, and Nondestructive Testing.

Additionally, he became a Professor Honoris Causa in Physics at the University of Allahabad in India.

Since 2015, Dr. Declercq has been the only tenured faculty of the Georgia Tech Woodruff School stationed at GT-Europe, providing unique research opportunities to undergraduate students. He teaches undergraduate and graduate students every semester, serves as a research advisor for Postdocs, BS, MS, and PhD students, and assists new faculty. Georgia Tech Europe offers academic programs for undergraduate students from Georgia Tech and other U.S. universities and graduate programs for students worldwide.

Nico F. Declercq's academic journey is marked by scholarly productivity and strategic career decisions. As a PhD student, he published thirty papers in high-level scientific journals, establishing himself as a distinguished researcher early in his career. Despite receiving numerous offers in 2006, primarily from prestigious institutions in the United States, he chose to join the Georgia Institute of Technology[3], influenced by his prior experiences in the southern United States and his interactions with Mack A. Breazeale and his wife, Louise Scott, in Mississippi. This decision was further validated when he discovered Georgia Tech's campus in Metz, France.

Declercq's move to Georgia Tech was driven by his desire to escape European academia's hierarchical structures and to bring positive change within the European academic system by affiliating with an American university with a European presence. Although, ever the romantic, he initially accepted a faculty position below his established level of expertise, he saw it as an opportunity to advance quickly.

Navigating the European and American academic systems required a combination of idealism and pragmatism. The U.S. academic hierarchy lauds individual merit and autonomy, while European frameworks enforce rigid structures and centralized authority. Declercq's international profile further complicated his professional identity, as the divergent philosophies of funding and cultural values added complexity to his career.

Despite these challenges, Declercq's approach, reminiscent of Stoic philosophy, emphasized personal duty and integrity in the face of external constraints. His experiences highlight the resilience and adaptability required to navigate disparate academic paradigms and underscore the relentless pursuit of academic freedom and knowledge.

Dr. Declercq is dedicated to fostering the growth and development of his students. He provides individualized support, believing every student deserves the opportunity to reach their full potential. His student-centric philosophy drives him to invest considerable time and effort into ensuring that each student excels academically and professionally.

Figure 80.7: Despite being gravely ill when he met the author, Mack Breazeale responded to the question of what they should eat with, "How about a Cowboy burger?" The first image, taken in 2009, shows the living room of the Breazeale household. The second image, from July 2006, depicts a barbecue at the Breazeale farm near Oak Ridge, Tennessee. The third image, taken in July 2009, features Mack and Lou Breazeale with the author's two eldest children, Benjamin and Anna-Laura, in Oxford, Mississippi. Mack passed away later that year. He preferred his reclining chair for reading papers but, being unwell, sat in a rolling chair and asked the author to use his favorite chair for the 2009 photo. (Declercq de Silva Archive)

Since 2006, Dr. Declercq has established a state-of-the-art laboratory for ultrasonic nondestructive evaluation (NDE) of materials and taught classes for several semesters in Atlanta.

He is the recipient of the Early Career Award of the International Commission for Acoustics, shown in Figure 34.75 on page 548, and the International Dennis Gabor Award at the Hungarian parliament, shown in Figure 70.52 on page 1472, both awarded in 2006. He has disseminated his research through over 100 papers in top journals, nearly 50 plenary, keynote, and invited presentations, and close to 200 conference presentations.

Dr. Declercq's genuine interest in history, as described in Chapter 27.20.10, adds a holistic flavor to his classes. Combining his passion for history and acoustics, he has provided scientific explanations of acoustic effects in ancient monuments, including Chichen Itza (Mexico) and the ancient theatre of Epidaurus (Greece), and globally promoted the notion of Phononic Crystals in acoustics. In 2019, he was a guest of honor and inaugurated an auditorium at a new physics department in Uttar Pradesh, India. Dr. Declercq does his best to mentor the students in his group and his classes, as demonstrated by his teaching awards, the multiple awards his students receive, and the support and guidance he provides them.

Although external directives in France have necessitated Professor Declercq to center his research primarily on the nondestructive evaluation of materials, his enduring passion for physical acoustics has continually influenced his work. Consequently, he has consistently integrated a robust physics perspective into his research, ensuring a more profound and comprehensive foundation than is typically seen in similar studies. Moreover, sustainability has been a persistent and guiding principle in his research trajectory. From the outset of his academic career, he has diligently addressed problems within the sustainability framework, underscoring his commitment to this critical global imperative long before it became a hot topic for scientists and funding agencies.

Dr. Declercq's dedication to students and his contribution to the success and reputation of Georgia Tech's international program is demonstrated by numerous examples. He has always firmly stuck to his noble institutional, educational, and scientific mission in times of difficulty, both at the institute level and personally.

As an EU PromoDoc Ambassador in 2012-2013, Dr. Declercq advised North American students pursuing a PhD at a European University and provided better visibility for Georgia Tech on both sides of the Atlantic.

In 2015, he organized and chaired the International Congress on Ultrasonics (2015 ICU Metz), shown in Figure 80.1 and Figure 45.84 on page 844, one of the major conferences in this field. Despite Metz's remote location, the fear of terror[4], and the absence of standard congress facilities[5], the congress was the most successful ever in this series and was held at the Arsenal of Metz[6]. The impact and success of the conference are demonstrated by the 700 participants[7] from 53 countries,[8] 410 oral presentations, 170 posters, and 67 scientific sessions. The individual sessions were co-organized by the French Acoustical Society. Elsevier's Physics Procedia published the 1268 pages of proceedings under the editorial supervision of Declercq.

Passionate about physics and engineering, Dr. Declercq is inspired to positively impact the world through his research and educational contributions and service to professional societies, including community building. He served on numerous PhD committees as President, Examiner, or Reporting Member. He has organized numerous sessions at international congresses and has constantly served as a reviewer for journals and congresses' scientific committees. He has been an Associate Editor for the reputable European Acoustics Journal (Acta Acustica) since 2011 and Springer's Journal of Nondestructive Evaluation since 2015. He is also an Academia Editor. In 2014-2016, he established a new journal Physics in Medicine, with Elsevier, and served as associate editor to support the initiative until the journal became sufficiently popular to merge with another Elsevier initiative in this field.

He has always constructively helped authors improve their work in his roles as editor or referee.

He has also served on the boards of the European Acoustics Association, the French Acoustical Society, the International Commission for Acoustics (as ICU representative), and the ICU steering committee as President until 2015 and Chairman until 2017. He served on award committees, such as the Stephens Student prize in Ultrasonics and the ICU Silver Whistle award committee as President. He was also a reviewer for the IEEE-UFFC Awards Committee.

Dr. Declercq served on numerous PhD committees and faculty recruitment and promotion panels at Georgia Tech and other institutes in Europe and worldwide. He has also been a referee for research grants in various countries.

As a physics student, he taught mathematics to children in Sri Lanka, which made him passionate about the genuine human curiosity and desire to learn, irrespective of gender, race, or cultural background. In the United States, he found the best University-level educational system globally, joined Georgia Tech with all his heart, and has consequently been teaching undergraduate and graduate students non-stop, primarily at GT-Europe since 2006.

He successfully provided inspirational guidance and technical training to more than almost 200 MS and undergraduate students

[5] After 2015, Metz has been equipped with modern congress facilities in the city's central district.

[6] Built on the orders of Napoleon III, between 1860 and 1864, the Ney arsenal in Metz is a specialized military building made of Jaumont stone and intended for the storage of weapons and ammunition. It is located adjacent to the chapel of Metz, a relic of a commandery of the Order of the Temple, dating from the 12th century and faces the Esplanade of Metz, within walking distance from the Saint Etienne Cathedral. The Arsenal is now a prestigious concert hall.

Figure 80.8: Top-left: The tombstone of Mack A. Breazeale (1930-2009) and his first wife Joanne O'Dell (1932-1989) at Shipley Cemetery, 1645 Hickory Tree Road, Bristol, Virginia, July 2012. Mack's second wife, Louise, is buried in Oxford, Mississippi with her first husband, Mr. Scott. Louise, who often referred to herself and Mack as "your American grandparents," knew Benjamin from a young age and visited Anna-Laura shortly after her birth. In 2012, Louise felt like a great-grandmother when holding Lambert. A language teacher with a fondness for French and Spanish, Louise had a keen interest in Dutch and Singhalese languages and had known William Faulkner in Oxford, where his daughter was her student. Sadly, she passed away later in 2012 after asking the author to take her to the Oxford cemetery to indicate her future burial site. Despite not being an excellent pianist, Louise enjoyed playing and giving brief lessons to Benjamin and Anna-Laura. In 2012, Louise is pictured with Benjamin and Anna-Laura in Oxford, Mississippi. Later that year, Lambert and Benjamin are seen in Helena, on the Mississippi River. Benjamin and Anna-Laura were delighted with the arrival of their brother Lambert in 2011. Lambert and Anna-Laura are also seen in Helena in the final image. The author completed his PhD when Anna-Laura was born and was in his final MS year when Benjamin was born. Mack Breazeale taught the author experimental techniques and scientific writing, significantly influencing his decision to pursue a career in the United States, along with Laszlo Adler (see Figure 80.9). They both helped the author break free from European academic constraints and demonstrated the true nature of American spirit and kindness. (Declercq de Silva Archive)

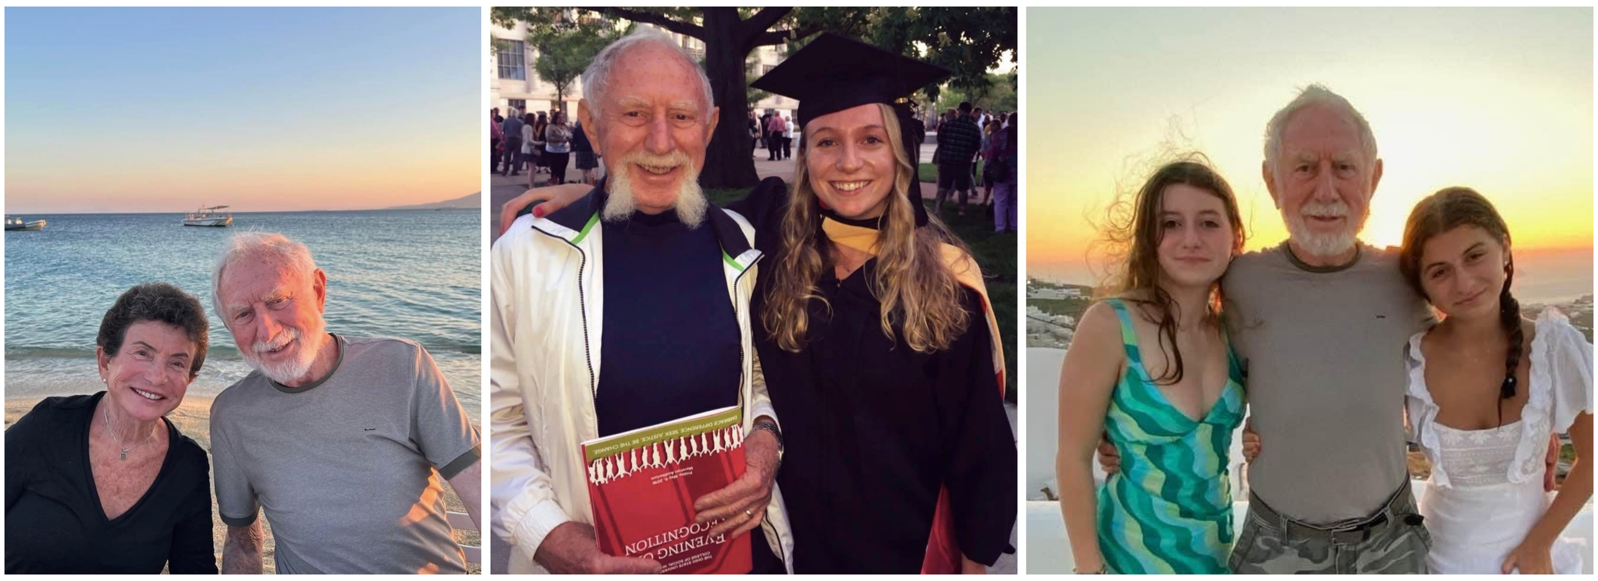

Figure 80.9: *Nico F. Declercq, a Ph.D. student in 2004, was introduced to viscous damping effects in liquids and their impact on leaky Lamb waves by Laszlo Adler during a visit to Japan. Adler, a crucial mentor alongside Mack A. Breazeale, influenced Declercq's decision to pursue an academic career in the United States in 2006. Adler served on Declercq's Ph.D. committee in 2005. Laszlo Adler, son of Miklos and Ilona Adler, married Vera Princz, daughter of Armin and Janka Princz, in Toronto, Canada, in 1963. Holocaust survivors, they now reside in Florida with two children, Michael Adler and Susan Adler Wilk (married to Dr. Richard Wilk), and three granddaughters, Rachel, Hannah, and Talia. During WWII, Vera Princz Adler was smuggled out of the Miskolc Ghetto and hidden by a Christian family, surviving despite most of her family perishing in Auschwitz. Laszlo Adler endured forced labor in Strasshof, surviving near-starvation and beatings until liberation by the Russian Army in 1945. He returned to Debrecen to find most of the Jewish population, including his classmates, exterminated. who conducted research in his lab. Dr. Declercq always teaches them to discover exciting features in detail, learn from mistakes and failures, be honest, plan their time wisely and strategically, formulate problems, and present discoveries. He also served as an advisor to about 600 non-thesis M.S. students to help them navigate grad school.

Overall, Dr. Declercq has significantly contributed to the success of Georgia Tech overseas by providing outstanding education and mentoring to students through superb research, courses, and other educational activities. Furthermore, Dr. Declercq has successfully graduated a dozen students and mentors more. He has mentored seven postdocs, two visiting scholars, and 25 M.S. students who worked on their thesis or the French equivalent Graduation Project. Dr. Declercq has received the maximum score for teaching effectiveness multiple times, has been awarded, and has frequently received letters of appreciation from his class students after graduation. He received Teaching Excellence Awards from the Georgia Institute of Technology several times.

The current position of his former lab members indicates the excellent training and mentorship Dr. Declercq is providing to his students and trainees. One of his former postdocs is currently an associate professor at Université de Valenciennes in France. Two of his former PhD students are currently on tenure track faculty positions in the School of Mines and Technology at South Dakota and the Department of Mechanical Engineering at Texas Tech University.

Until now, despite the small size of his team, seven researchers supervised by Declercq at his Laboratory in France have become faculty members: Pomarede, Stribling, Cruz, McKeon, Liu, Chehami, and Satyanarayan.

Other alums work as researchers in various Institutions worldwide, including Institut National de la Recherche Scientifique (INRS), Montreal, Canada; Technical University of Denmark; Institut National de Sciences Appliquées de Lyon in France; and GT-Europe. Five of his M.S. students went on to receive their PhD degrees.

His commitment to diversity and inclusion is demonstrated in the demographics of his team.

He takes pride, finds the most excellent satisfaction in his students' progress, and has written numerous reference letters to support their careers.

This book resulted from a lifetime hobby that served as a worthy pursuit throughout his education and career during numerous lonely evenings and travel inherent to his professional activity in a different research area. The accumulated result of the countless minor investigations provoked by his curiosity was consolidated into this manuscript as a tranquil Saturday and Sunday evening activity in the warmness of his family's closeness.

As a student, Nico F. Declercq grappled with the stark reality of a feudal academic hierarchy marred by prejudice and an examination system not rewarding deep curiosity. Despite this, Professor Oswald Leroy, shown in Figure 80.6, was a beacon of fairness and intellectual brilliance. Leroy's impartiality, fairness, and exceptional intellect starkly contrasted the prevailing system, giving Declercq a rare sense of admiration and fairness within academia. This admiration led Declercq to choose Leroy as his advisor when he embarked on his PhD journey. In addition to Leroy, Professor Mack A. Breazeale emerged as Declercq's de facto co-advisor, offering further guidance and exemplifying scientific integrity and moral excellence. Leroy and Breazeale served as enduring models of ethical conduct and intellectual rigor, profoundly influencing Declercq's academic path. As a PhD student, Declercq also had the good fortune to meet Professor Laszlo Adler, shown in Figure 80.9 on page 2002, who reinforced his belief that academia harbors individuals of genuine integrity amidst a broader landscape. Breazeale's wisdom resonated deeply with Declercq, particularly the notion that while many hold the title of professor, few truly embody its essence.

The emphasis on integrity and genuine academic excellence seemed innate to Declercq. However, a genealogical study presented in this book revealed that these values were deeply rooted in his ancestry, aligning him with a legacy of integrity and academic pursuit. The connection to his forebears illuminates the origins of his unwavering commitment to integrity and excellence in academia.

Lou insisted on Oxford because she thought of her beautiful town as the center of the Universe. In the summer of 2006, he was hired by the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta. The author took the nostalgic picture in 2012 at the end of Lou's life and three years after Mack had died. They considered themselves as the author's American grandparents, a mutual feeling. Acknowlegements

In Appreciation

José Sánchez Real and the Kindness of the Supportive Catalan Historians and the Inhabitants of Montblanc

As found in the next section, Chapter XVII, numerous people are acknowledged for their contributions in one way or another. Here, a person is highlighted who, in our modern age, produced the first pervasive work on the Desclergue family of Montblanc. Later researchers on this matter all followed in this Giant's footsteps.

Dr. José Sánchez Real, a distinguished and esteemed historian hailing from Malaga, specifically Gaucín, boasts a remarkable academic trajectory that has taken him on a scholarly journey across various regions in Spain, including Gerona, Granada, Madrid, Tarragona, and Valencia. His scholarly odyssey commenced in 1973 when he received a prestigious commission from the Provincial Savings Bank of Tarragona, which tasked him with restoring the renowned House of Desclergue in Montblanc. This pivotal assignment spurred Dr. Sánchez Real into action, catalyzing his leadership of a cadre of young, zealous researchers to delve deep into the archives of the Church of Santa Maria la Mayor in Montblanc, as well as the extensive notarial archives in both Montblanc and Tarragona.

The fruits of their labor bore fruit in less than two years, resulting in the publication of a meticulously crafted magnum opus. The expeditious completion of this scholarly masterpiece is a testament to Dr. Real's exceptional acumen, his team's proficiency in deciphering antiquated documents, and their unwavering commitment to the arduous task at hand, spanning nearly two years. This illustrious tome, a seminal contribution to the annals of Spanish history, made its debut in 1974, a year before the birth of the author of the present work.

Delving deeper into the annals of Dr. Sánchez Real's scholarly oeuvre, it becomes evident that his academic pursuits transcend the boundaries of history and extend into the realm of physics and other diverse subjects. His intellectual curiosity knows no bounds, as he fearlessly tackled topics of personal interest. His academic journey led him to attain a professorship in Chemistry at Tarragona in 1943, a significant milestone that laid the foundation for his subsequent pursuit of a doctoral degree in Chemistry at the University of Barcelona while residing in Granada. This monumental achievement was realized in 1948, though it is noteworthy that his doctoral thesis in Chemistry was not published until 1955.

In 1956, Dr. Sánchez Real ascended to the esteemed position of an academic chair, securing the title of a full professorship in didactics in chemistry at the Escuela Normal de Tarragona. A decade later, in 1967, he further solidified his academic legacy by becoming a professor at the Universidad Laboral de Tarragona. His pedagogical prowess was widely acknowledged, and in his capacity as the director of the Martí Franquès Institute, he even penned a comprehensive historical account of the institute's storied past.

Notably, Dr. Sánchez Real ventured into diverse academic domains, authoring work on the physics of bicycles as a pedagogical stepping stone for readers embarking on explorations into mechanics, physics, electromagnetics, and related disciplines. Additionally, his literary output encompassed treatises on heraldry, ceramics, and specialized historical subjects, reflecting his insatiable intellectual curiosity and his unwavering dedication to expanding the horizons of knowledge.

Not surprisingly, he was also an archaeologist. Here are few sentences cited from 'Texto homenaje a la vida y la obra del Dr. José Sánchez Real. Elaborado con información publicada en La Vanguardia con motivo de su obituario y redactada por Sara Sans el 29 de abril 2008' :

Sin embargo el hecho es que el hombre habla del tiempo como algo casi tangible y lo mide y tiene definida incluso una unidad que es una, junto con otras cinco, de las fundamentales en Física: el segundo. Muy pocos llevan consigo un fotómetro o un amperímetro, pero un reloj lo lleva cualquiera. Y es que el tiempo casi lo tocamos y hablamos de que se nos va de las manos, y que se pierde, y que se gana, como si fuera dinero, y quizás de ahíla frase de que el tiempo es oro. Algo valioso.

In the context of acknowledging the contributions of José Sánchez Real, the author wishes to express profound gratitude to Josep Maria Grau Pujol for his invaluable assistance in procuring a wealth of historical documents pertaining to the Desclergue family and the town of Montblanc for several years. Mr. Pujol's generous facilitation enabled the author to access scanned copies of original documents originating from both the Desclergue and de Pedrolo families, with indispensable assistance from Adelais de Pedrolo and the collaborative efforts of Miquel Ángel Farré Targa and his dedicated team at CU Arxiu Comarcal Urgell. Their unwavering support has been instrumental in the research process.

Furthermore, the author wishes to extend heartfelt appreciation to Eduard Contijoch and the esteemed Mayor of Montblanc, Josep Andreu Domingo, for their warm hospitality and sustained engagement throughout this scholarly endeavor.

Lastly, the author fondly recalls the receptiveness, inquisitiveness, and benevolence exhibited by the residents of Montblanc over the years. Their spirit has left an indelible mark and has served as an enduring source of motivation in bringing this book to its culmination with utmost satisfaction.

Jairo Eduardo Cortés Rosal

The author extends his heartfelt acknowledgments to Mr. Jairo Eduardo Cortés Rosal, whose invaluable contributions played a pivotal role in unraveling the intricate structure of the Desclergues family history before their settlement in Montblanc.

The research endeavors that culminated in the creation of the second edition of this book were marked by a profound and fruitful collaboration, punctuated by extensive discussions, between the author and Mr. Cortés Rosal. During these scholarly exchanges, a serendipitous revelation emerged concerning the lineage of the Cortés ancestors. During one of these dialogues, Mr. Cortés Rosal casually mentioned Antonio de Torres y Córdoba, who was wedded to Juana Carrillo de Guzmán. This reference struck a chord with the author, as it prompted a reevaluation of a previously held assumption from the first edition of this work. In the initial iteration, the author posited that the descendants of Bertrand Du Guesclin bore the surname 'de Torres,' originating from Soria. This conjecture had been predicated upon existing literature and had remained unquestioned by the author until that momentous discussion.

Subsequently, the author apprised Mr. Cortés Rosal that the literature also alluded to the fact that not only the Desclergues but also the Fuentes, emanating from the Guzmán, Sandoval, and Zúniga lineages, traced their origins to these 'de Torres.' This revelation cast doubt in Mr. Cortés Rosal's discerning mind. As a medievalist with a profound knowledge of the historical events that transpired in Spain during the era of Bertrand Du Guesclin and possessing over three decades of experience in medieval genealogy, he deemed it implausible that Bertrand Du Guesclin would have sired offspring with a noblewoman from Soria. The comprehensive exploration of this matter is elaborated upon extensively within the pages of this second edition of the book, particluar in Chapter 19.15.1 on page 185.

Prompted by this dialogue, the author revisited archival documents, unearthing a deed from a bygone year, 1576, that bore the word 'Torró. In the first edition of his work, the author had interpreted this term, preceded by the word 'altissima F. Torró,' as a notation by the notary alluding to Pere Desclergue's noble lineage (DC01) and potentially linked to Bertrand Du Guesclin, perhaps even under the name 'de Torres.' Mr. Cortés Rosal, equipped with his profound knowledge of medieval manuscripts, recognized it as a reference to a distinguished Torró, possibly a bishop. It logically followed that Bonaventura Desclergue must have served as the personal notary for this eminent individual. Traditionally, such a role was reserved for a close confidant within the family, thus underscoring the familial connection between the Desclergues and the Torró family. This pivotal revelation set the wheels of inquiry in motion certainly because in the first edition of this book, a person from Barcelona was mentioned who received a doctorate in canonical law in 1586 in Rome and carried the name Francesc Torró i Desclergue and was evidence of a consanguinity between the Desclergues and the Torró family.

In the ensuing weeks, Mr. Cortés Rosal diligently provided the author with a wealth of documents and references elucidating the Torró family's history and their kinship with the Desclergues. Ultimately, it was discovered that 'altissima F. Torró' was Francesc Torró i Desclergue, the half-brother of our forefather, Bonaventura Desclergue. In modern articles, Francesc Torró appears as Francesc Desclergue i Montseny because of his mother, who was a Montseny, but that is a modern assumption by contemporary genealogists, while the person himself signed with Altissima F. Torró.

In light of these transformative discoveries, the author expresses profound gratitude to Mr. Cortés Rosal for his unwavering dedication and scholarly contributions, which have been instrumental in tracing the lineage of the Desclergues family, extending back from Montblanc to Barcelona and Mallorca and ultimately reaching back to the depths of Occitania in the southern region of what is now modern-day France during the 1200s.

Jairo Eduardo Cortés Rosal is a Venezuelan-Spanish historian and genealogist who particularly earns all the credit for providing, for the 2nd edition of this book, the author with the enormous amount of information about the ancestry of Maria Ana Cortés de Monroy y Vega, described extensively in Chapter 27.2. Cortés Rosal created the Santa Fe de Bogotá Genealogy team, led by Fenita Hollman de Villaveces, in Bogotá. He is a descendant of Don Enrique de Guzmán, the Count of Niebla of the Ducal House of Medina-Sidonia. His grandfather is Juan Flórez de Ocariz, a Royal Notary in the Viceroyalty of New Granada in Santa Fe de Bogotá and was a great genealogist. He wrote the excellent work 'Genealogies of the New Kingdom of Granada.' Apart from the exchanged information, the author is thankful for all his exciting and fruitful conversations with Cortés Rosal. For instance, the author learned more about the use of family names in Spanish history, the logic behind it, and how there were no firm rules like today. Also, the notions of stepson, stepfather, or stepmother were not used in the Spanish tradition. This is important in Chapter 29.11.3.3, for instance, or Chapter 34.12.3. In particular, by providing the author with the results of decades of investigations on the ancestry of the Cortés clan, including Hernán Cortés de Montoya and the author's ancestor, Maria Ana Cortés de Monroy y Vega Bezan, the ancestry became more transparent and much better understood. Even the clans from Spain residing with the Desclergues in Kortrijk-Harelbeke-Deerlijk in the 1600s became clarified as they all belonged to the same extended family. Having a contact such as Jairo Eduardo Cortés Rosal, a medievalist and genealogist specializing in Spain and knowledgable of the history and ancestries in different additional countries of interest in this work, has proved extremely valuable and exciting and enriched the second edition of this extensive work.

Marcel Demeyere

The life of Marcel Demeyere (1943-2005) is documented in the scholarly publication titled 'Derlike,' specifically in volume XXVIII, issue 1, dated 2005, pages 31-32. Mr. Demeyere played a pivotal role in the author's educational journey as their initial history instructor during the academic year 1987-1988.

At the tender age of 11, the author made a significant decision to pursue 'Modern Education' rather than the 'Classics.' It was through the discernment of Mr. Marcel Demeyere, in conjunction with two other educators, namely Mrs. Marijke Martens, a Latin teacher hailing from Ghent, and Mrs. Maria Thoen, also known as Mrs. Content, that the realization of the author's misjudgment dawned. They collectively determined that the author should transition to a Latin-Maths curriculum during their second year of Middle School, despite the resultant year's delay.

Consequently, during the subsequent summer, the author diligently acquired foundational Latin vocabulary while in Sri Lanka and then joined the Latin-Maths program the following year, albeit one year behind their peers. The initial two months in this new academic environment were characterized by the necessity for patience, endurance, and, notably, unwavering support from Mr. Demeyere and Mrs. Martens. The fruition of this arduous effort became evident within a few months.

Regarding mathematics, the author's profound appreciation for the subject fully materialized in their university years. Instead, a preference for physics emerged, where their intuition played a more prominent role. History, though always an area of interest, could have presented a more professional opportunity. It is noteworthy that Marcel Demeyere maintained a close friendship with Pierre Vangheluwe, the author's grand-uncle and foster father, as delineated in Chapter 69.11 and Chapter XVII.

The bond between Marcel Demeyere and Pierre Vangheluwe undoubtedly fostered mutual trust and the author's admiration for Mr. Demeyere. During the formative years of 10 to 12, Demeyere served as an exemplar of an intellectual, idealist, and philosopher. His distinctive attire, reminiscent of a professor, and possession of perhaps the most extensive stamp collection globally left a lasting impression. Additionally, his affiliation with Freemasonry and his ideological commitment to communism, a stance not shared by the author, further reinforced the idea that unconventional thinking was commendable.

High school provided the author with a backdrop of diverse and conflicting ideologies, offering a profoundly enriching experience.

Subsequently, the author opted for coursework in religion and atheistic morality, exemplifying their commitment to exploring and evaluating contrasting ideas. Through this process of questioning and balancing diverse viewpoints, wisdom and tolerance were nurtured—an essential foundation for intellectual growth.

Special Gratitude

The ultimate expressions of gratitude are extended to the author's paternal great-uncle and nurturing paternal figure, Pierre Vangheluwe, whose multifaceted persona is also elucidated in Chapter 69.11. Pierre Vangheluwe, a man of remarkable sagacity, emerged as a self-taught scholar with a profound command of several languages. His unwavering commitment to correctness, honesty, reliability, diplomacy, and rationality cast him as an exemplar of virtue. Regrettably, circumstantial constraints precluded his realization of a lifelong aspiration to become an educator. He departed from this world three decades past, on July 8, 1991, leaving behind a final desire: that the author embark on a journey of scholarly pursuit culminating in attaining a university degree. The author's formative years were profoundly influenced by Pierre and his spouse, Jeanette Verbrugghe, who continued to provide unwavering support even after Pierre's passing in 1991. Their profound impact enabled the author to remain steadfast on the path of academic achievement, ultimately resulting in acquiring a diploma, a doctorate, and the esteemed position of a university professor—all achieved by the age of 30. It is fitting to assert that Pierre's benevolent intervention in 1987-1988, offering both refuge and an intellectually stimulating milieu for scholarly pursuits, was nothing short of a salvation for the author. In the eloquent words of the author, "he was the bedrock upon which the edifice of my intellectual pursuits was firmly established."

This book stands as a testament to the enduring intellectual curiosity instilled by Pierre Vangheluwe. Moreover, it is worth noting that the author's familial ties were forged during voyages to Sri Lanka, a shared exploration facilitated by Pierre's companionship and guidance.

If Bricks Could Speak

Our Home in Montblanc

This is our ancient family house in Montblanc. The mansion has been lovingly restored and now stands prominently in Montblanc's central marketplace. Perhaps in the 1960s, while the Franco government was still in place, the area saw its first Belgian visitors. Later, it became part of contemporary Spain under King Juan Carlos and, more recently, King Felipe. Catalan was once again spoken openly in public under Juan Carlos after it had been outlawed. In the 1930s, it underwent the Spanish Civil War. If we go even further back in time, we occasionally see the appearance of a Republic, a Kingdom, and even the era of Napoleon.

Desclergue youngsters formerly played in the gateway. Jeroni Joan Desclergue, our paternal ancestor, used to hang around there. Later, his son Antoni visited the house several times. It all happened four centuries ago. It would be so fascinating if those walls could talk.

Echoes of Memory in Montblanc

The notion of home transcends the physical confines of walls and landscapes and encompasses memory, culture, and inexplicable affinity. In exploring the poignant experience of the author who felt an immediate connection to Montblanc, Spain—a place he later discovered he had visited decades earlier—these final words delve into the complexities of such connections. Is it a coincidence that he found himself drawn to his ancestral roots near Tarragona, or does it suggest a deeper, perhaps subconscious, link to place and past?

Montblanc, nestled along the Francoli River in the province of Tarragona, is steeped in history and legend. Known for its medieval walls and as a purported site of the Saint George legend, the town symbolizes the Catalan spirit, like the many regional spirits of magnificent Spain. Its cobblestone streets and gothic architecture serve as a backdrop to daily life and a repository of collective memory. When the author revisits Montblanc, he is not merely a tourist but a pilgrim tracing the invisible footprints of his history.

Psychologists suggest that the feeling of "being at home" can stem from various sources, such as familiar landscapes, ancestral connections, or cultural continuities. This notion is amplified by the theory of genetic memory, which proposes that certain memories or affinities can be passed down through generations. The author's immediate sense of belonging in Montblanc raises the question of whether this connection is a manifestation of such inherited memories.

His initial visit in the late 1970s might have been a forgotten echo until his return. This inadvertent pilgrimage is a serendipitous alignment of his journey with Montblanc's geographical and historical essence. The realization of a previous visit layers his experience with a sense of destiny or inevitability, suggesting that the connection to Montblanc is more than mere chance—it is a return to a once-known but forgotten home.

While the supernatural offers a compelling explanation for such profound experiences, a more grounded approach considers the psychological impact of place and memory. The author's sense of home could also be influenced by shared human responses to environments that echo familiar ancestral landscapes. With its rich history and enduring cultural symbols, Montblanc might naturally evoke a sense of belonging that resonates with its own cultural and familial narratives.

The story of the author's connection to Montblanc is a poignant reminder of the universal quest for belonging and identity. Whether through the lens of supernatural beliefs or the scientific perspectives on memory and genetics, the essence of home remains a compelling part of the human experience.

Montblanc stands resiliently along the Francoli River, serving as a physical locale and a metaphor for the journey of self-discovery and connection outlined in this book. It is a testament to how our pasts mold our present, the unseen threads that connect us to our ancestors, and the timeless pursuit of finding a place to call home.

The Next Generation

The author's privilege is to educate young and energetic students full of ideas and inspiration as a professor. As ageing begins, it is a comfort to discern that the past is passed while the future swiftly falls on the shoulders of a new generation.

Being a descendant of the Desclergues from Montblanc in Catalonia, Spain, and in the context of this book, it is natural to place our hope for a better future, amid environmental and economic challenges, into the hands of a new generation represented by such talented and dynamic youngsters as the Duchess of Montblanc, the Princess of Asturias.

The author sincerely offers Her Royal Highness his blessing and wishes her the best of luck in her educational endeavour and future exemplary function.

In the silent eloquence of a photograph, splendor whispers its own tale, transcending words, stirring the soul, and safeguarding the history of the city and the dukedom of Montblanc.

In the end, our lives will be remembered by the stories that endure.
